Herter, Gromyko Voice Hopes Of Peace At Geneva

GENEVA (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko arrived Saturday for the Big Four foreign ministers conference expressing hopes of peace, while Moscow loosed threats of atomic annihilation against the West in any new war.

Gromyko joined Secretary of State Christian A. Herter in hopes the talks can roll back the menace of war. And with French Minister Maurice Couve de Murville he talked of a later summit meeting to settle Europe's pressing problems.

But Moscow Radio broadcast for the first time an interview Premier Nikita Khrushchev gave West German editors Tuesday in which he said eight hydrogen bombs would knock out West Germany or any other West European ally of the United States.

BOAST OF MIGHT

The western powers would be literally wiped off the face of the earth," Khushchev asserted.

Herter arrived after Gromyko and Couve de Murville. Ignoring the question on a summit meeting, Herter said he hoped the talks would lead to a lasting peace. The United States wants a summit meeting only if the foreign ministers make progress.

Selwyn Lloyd, British foreign secretary, is due Sunday from London and will confer almost at once with Herter and Couve de Murville.

"I have come to Geneva to join my British and French colleagues in discussions with the Soviet foreign minister of various aspects of the problem of a divided Germany," Herter said at the airport. "The United States approaches these negotiations with a sincere desire to achieve positive results. We trust that our deliberations will pave the way for a final and overdue settlement which would serve to reduce international tension and be a step on the long

Dulles Weak As Pneumonia Adds To Ails

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Former Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, already gravely ill with cancer, developed a mild case of pneumonia Saturday and was reported "somewhat weaker."

The State Department said the initial response of the 71-year-old diplomat to antibiotics "has been satisfactory."

Dulles, who resigned as secretary last month, has been in Walter Reed Army Medical Center since April 12. It was disclosed this week that he now uses a wheel chair. The State Department said he is able to walk but finds it more convenient and restful to use the chair.

Dulles has been receiving analgesics to ease the almost constant cancer pain.

REPORTED WEAKER

Saturday's announcement said: "Former Secretary Dulles has contracted a mild case of pneumonia. His initial response to antibiotics has been satisfactory and his temperature is normal. He is, however, somewhat weaker."

Dulles was visited Friday by President Eisenhower and the new secretary of state, Christian A. Herter. Eisenhower stopped in to see him before going to his Camp David, Md., retreat for the weekend.

Herter conferred with Dulles before leaving for the crucial Big Four Foreign Ministers conference in Geneva—a conclave at which Dulles was to have been the leading figure. As Herter left, the ailing statesman called out to him: "Good luck, Chris."

Area Resident Shot To Death; Uncle Is Held

Joseph Mitchell, 30, Of Ouachita City Is Victim

FARMERVILLE (Special)—An unemployed Ouachita City man, reportedly enraged with suspicion that his uncle was attempting to take his girl friend, was shot to death by the uncle early Saturday at the home of the victim's mother near Ouachita City, the parish sheriff said.

The dead man, identified by Sheriff Jurd Stewart as Joseph J. Mitchell, 30, was reported to have been "armed with a shotgun in search of his uncle, Sam Fowler" at the time of the fatal shooting. Fowler is 50.

Sheriff Stewart said the two men met at the home of Mitchell's mother shortly after 8 a. m. Saturday morning. Mitchell's mother, Mrs. Mose Mitchell, reportedly was pleading with her son to "calm down," but he refused to heed.

WITNESSES

Witnesses told sheriff's authorities that Fowler went to a brother-in-law's pickup truck at the Mitchell home and returned with a .38 cal. pistol. Shortly thereafter the fatal shot was fired. The pistol and truck belonged to Roy Johnson, brother-in-law to Fowler, they said.

Mitchell, according to authorities, had accused his uncle of "going with his girl friend," identified only as "some girl from Arkansas."

Both men were single.

Storms Hit Many Areas In Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Oklahoma Highway Patrol reported four and possibly five persons killed in a tornado which struck the north edge of Stonewall in south central Oklahoma Saturday night.

It was one of several twisters which ripped the eastern part of the state. No deaths were reported from the other tornadoes.

The brunt of the tornado apparently was borne by an even smaller community named Frisco three miles due west of Stonewall.

About 15 injured persons were taken from both Frisco and Stonewall to the hospital in Ada.

OTHER TWISTERS

Nine persons were injured when first hail and then the funnel struck a small restaurant about one mile northwest of Stonewall. None was believed fatally injured.

Henry Warren Sullivan, operator of the restaurant, said hail of baseball size hammered in the roof of the concrete building before the funnel hit. He said some of the hail stones weighed one quarter pound.

Ada Fire Chief Dudley Young reported seeing three bodies on the ground at Frisco and it was believed these were in addition to the one known fatality, L. Tom Daniel of Frisco. He was dead on arrival at an Ada hospital.

Roads in the Frisco-Stonewall area were choked with debris and power and telephone lines knocked down by the storm.

Other injuries from twisters were reported at Strang and Camp Caraway on Lake of the Cherokees in northeast Oklahoma. Detailed reports from these areas were lacking due to damaged utilities lines and debris on roads.

But the highway patrol reported dispatching ambulances into both areas.

There were at least eight confirmed tornadoes on the ground and several more unconfirmed twisters.

Nowata County Sheriff Archie Squichie said a tornado at Watova in the northeast destroyed brick farm house, a pickup truck, and

Ship Captain Is Charged In Disaster

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Officials Saturday arrested the captain of the riverboat Dandara and charged him with negligence in the sinking of the boat in the Nile River with the loss of possibly 150 lives.

Divers and navy frogmen continued the search for bodies. They brought 40 bodies from the sunken Dandara Saturday. Ten bodies were recovered Friday night after the sinking. Police estimated at least 95 still were missing.

The 200-ton, double-decker boat had about 300 persons on board, mostly women and children, when it left Cairo for a holiday trip along the Nile, authorities said.

MANY TRAPPED

Officials accused Capt. Abdul Hafiz Ali Hammad of allowing the boat to be loaded beyond its legal capacity. They also blamed a sudden leak for the tragedy.

Authorities plan to raise the riverboat to learn the cause of the leak.

The Dandara sank so quickly that many families were trapped below decks. It went down only six yards from the shore but the water was about 50 feet deep.

Many persons on the bank watched the sinking and may have unwittingly helped cause the tragedy by tugging at rope lines to the ship.

Reds Release U.S. Airman Held 47 Days

HEIDELBERG, Germany (UPI) —American civilian pilot Emory A. Vaughan, released by the East German Communists Saturday after 47 days in captivity, said he spent all but one day in solitary confinement.

Vaughan, 32, a U. S. Army civilian employe of Portsmouth, Va., was released at the same time as a British soldier, Pvt. Claude Passman, who was held for three months in East Germany. The releases came on the virtual eve of the East - West Foreign Ministers Conference opening in Geneva Monday to discuss the future of Berlin.

Vaughan was turned over to the American Red Cross by the East German Red Cross at the Helmstedt border checkpoint and taken to Heidelberg.

INTERROGATED OFTEN

He said the Communists treated him "in the correct manner" and he was never threatened, although he was frequently interrogated.

Vaughan wandered into East Germany in his light plane March 27 and was seized when he landed out of fuel in a meadow near Eisenach.

"The East Germans said they would only keep me a few hours," he said. But his captivity stretched to almost seven weeks.

He said he was held in solitary confinement at Erfurt, in a house under constant guard, with only Communist literature and one American magazine to read.

"I was allowed to take exercise in a 30-by-20-pace garden for half an hour every day," he said.

"The only people I saw were my guard, interrogators and two Russian soldiers I saw from my room window.

Vaughan looked in good condition.

He said the "apparent point" of all the interrogation was to assure the Germans that he did not cross the border deliberately in his one-seater sports plane.

TELLS PLANS AT RUSTON

Long To Resign By Late Summer

By SAM HANNA
Staff Writer

RUSTON — Gov. Earl K. Long stole a political show at the Ruston Diamond Jubilee here yesterday where he disclosed plans to resign in August or September to seek re-election.

In addition, Long confirmed reports, in a Morning World interview, that he will introduce several personal bills when the Legislature convenes in fiscal session Monday.

A small, bewhiskered crowd waited for 45 minutes in City Park before the governor arrived to lampoon his enemies and praise his friends in a speech pointing to his fourth term in office.

Surrounded later on a park bench, Long, redfaced and hoarse, took off his coat and tie, relaxed, and kept listeners in stitches with a running commentary flavored in Louisiana politics.

It was "Mayor's Day" at the 75th anniversary of the founding of Ruston and Long took advantage of a political crowd to pound against his opponents.

"By the charity of God and the people of this state," he said, "I'll be governor again."

Asked when he plans to resign, "It'll be in August or September," he said. Long, now 63, said this would be his last chance.

"If I can't hardly walk now, what do you think I could do

Long Favors Menefee For Top WLF Post

Gov. Earl K. Long wants Pete Menefee of Monroe to head the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission if Director F. Lamar Clement resigns, the Morning World learned yesterday.

Long said Clement was thinking about quitting because of a death in his private business firm. Clement could not be reached in New Orleans, but Mrs. Clement confirmed the governor's statement.

Menefee, who is Long's racing commissioner and former register of state lands, was unavailable for comment.

But Long told the Morning World at Ruston, "I'd like to get Pete Menefee for that job. I wanted him to run for register of state lands, but he won't."

SOURCES

In New Orleans, Mrs. Clement said the death of Mrs. J. B. Braswell, wife of Clement's business partner, was not the only reason her husband was thinking about resigning.

"But I'd rather for you to talk to him," Mrs. Clement said. Clement could not be contacted.

Reliable sources told the Morn-

Worker In Home Is Electrocuted

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Florian J. Strack, 50, was electrocuted Saturday while working on a heater thermostat in his home.

The parish coroner said Strack was repairing the thermostat and contacted a floor lamp which was shorted.

Gibbs To Ask Health Center Fund Increase

Rep. Laurence Gibbs, of Monroe, announced last night he would toss a bill into the fiscal session of the legislature opening Monday asking additional funds to splice with $95,000 in local money and $47,000 federal dollars to build the "finest and biggest parish health center in the state here".

Gibbs said Monroe Sen. James Sparks and Rep. Gilbert Faulk were already behind the measure and he would seek help from other Northeast Louisiana solons when the legislature opened.

Gibbs and Ouachita health unit director Dr. W. Carroll Summer made a joint announcement of a letter from Baton Rouge authorizing the Hill-Burton federal appropriation of $47,000.

MAXIMUM

This amount is the maximum available to Ouachita and its arrival pends final approval of health center plans by the State Board of Hospitals and the National Public Health Service.

Gibbs said the letter came from J. Ben Meyer Jr., consulting engineer for the State Board of Hospitals.

More would have been available from Hill-Burton funds the letter said, but a cut in rates has developed since Ouachita began a move for new health facilities several years ago.

Dr. Summer said he hoped enough money could be secured to construct an 8,000 square-foot regional laboratory which now serves 14 parishes, to put 7,000 square feet into the parish health center proper, and an additional 2,500 square feet into the regional administrative office.

This office now serves 30 north Louisiana parishes and serves the largest area of any in the state, Dr. Summer added.

A millage property tax voted by parish residents in April will

Mother's Day

Today is "Mothers' Day" throughout the length and breadth of the United States and possessions. It is needless to enumerate the blessings that come to humanity through the untiring, ever unselfish work and leadership of one's mother.

They deserve honor and devotion from their children and too often these are lacking in the busy world in which we live. Realization of this fact caused the government of the United States many years ago to name the second Sunday in May as annual Mothers' Day. One can never do too much to honor this parent who outclasses all other relatives in the unselfish devotion that she gives her children.

A red carnation, or other flower, can be worn today to recognize a living mother and where the mother has passed on, a white flower in the but-

Auto Hurtles Out Of Control; One Killed, Two Hurt

BASTROP (Special) — A young Camden Ark., man was killed and his two companions critically injured when their car skidded out of control striking a culvert before hurtling 50 feet through the air near the Crossett-Hamburg highway junction early Saturday. Dead is Guy Post, 22, Camden, Ark., papermill worker.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Post of Bloomington, Calif. were notified of their son's death on the eve of their leaving for vacation in Crossett, authorities said.

The injured are Teddie Huff, 22, fractured skull, pelvis, internal injuries, and multiple lacerations; and Clifford Royce Harris, 22, shock, multiple lacerations, contusions, right leg fracture.

Both were reported in critical condition at the Morehouse General Hospital here.

Louisiana State Police identified Harris as the driver.

Authorities said the car was headed north and had completed the turn onto the Crossett highway at the junction with the Hamburg Highway 10 miles north of here about 12:30 a.m.

It left the road, skidded 32 steps, struck a cement culvert, cartwheeled into the air, and landed on the ditch on one side. Troopers estimated the car traveled 600 feet after it left the road.

Accident Victim In Coma 128 Days

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)— A small graying man bowed his head in a waiting room at North Shore Hospital and spoke in quiet words of the case that has tugged at his heart for 128 days.

"I wish that God would take my son," said 66-year-old Jim Burne.

Upstairs, Bart Burne lay in the coma that has darkened his life since Jan. 30.

"His mother and I come to see him four times a day," said the father, "but he doesn't even know we are here."

The son, a robust man of 31, was struck down by a motor car as he started across the road toward his drive-in restaurant. His left leg was mangled. His pelvis was broken. His head was gashed. His body was badly cut and bruised.

Doctors did not expect him to live. They worked on the mangled leg. Later they operated on the son's brain.

Now, the doctors say Bart will "never be more than just a vegetable," the father said.

"We just go and stew and feel that pitchfork in our stomachs. Bart's three brothers and his sister have all been down and had their stay and gone back home again."

The father, an automobile dealer at Scranton, Pa., and his sons pooled $11,000 to take care of Bart, but now that money has almost all been spent.

Bart's attractive wife Jo Ann busies herself with the care of their two children, Bart, Jr., 5, and Florence, 18 months.

"I'm going to have another baby in three months," she said. "I found out just four days before Bart was hit."

Sadie Layton, whose car struck Bart, was not charged with the accident but she faces a damage suit for $350,000.

Partly Overcast Seen For Area

Partly overcast skies are in prospect for the Twin Cities area today, with little change in temperature indicated, the federal weatherman said last night.

The high temperature reading recorded at Selman Field yesterday was 88, compared with 87 on the previous day. The low was 64, while previous day's level was 69.

The outlook for Arkansas is for scattered thundershowers in the north portion through tonight.

Firebug Strikes At Hattiesburg

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (UPI) — Police believed Saturday "the Hattiesburg Firebug" may have struck again.

Officers said they were trying to track down an arsonist who set fire to an elementary school here early Saturday. The fire caused an estimated $25,000 damage.

Another fire Saturday destroyed an unoccupied home here and officers said that one might also have been the firebug's work.

The school fire came after a month - long lull in a series of arson cases that began here shortly after Christmas. A teenaged girl was arrested in connection with several of the fires.

Police Chief Ed Barksdale said the fire that badly damaged the front portion of the Walthall Elementary School Saturday was "definitely" set by an arsonist. He said whoever started the blaze may also have set some of the earlier ones.

Two Hepatitis Cases Reported In Parish

Two cases of hepatitis have been reported in Ouachita Parish recently but health authorities commented last night that the infection generally is not something to dread as a fatal disease.

Ouachita Parish Health Unit director Dr. W. Carroll Summer said he had been told of two cases, but had no official reports from doctors on them.

Hepatitis is an infection of the liver caused by a communicable virus. It sometimes follows other ailments such as influenza, Dr. Summer added.

"As far as I know now, there is no preventative for it, but gamma globulin is used effectively on persons who have been exposed," he said.

He added that the limited supply of gamma globulin and its relative high cost prohibits widespread usage of it as a vaccination.

Generally speaking there are no permanent ill effects from hepatitis and the victim overcomes the seizure under treatment. Prolonged hospitalization is common, however.

The Louisiana Department of Public health reported 50 cases to date this year, and four for the same period last year.

Dr. Summer said he had seen no information from the health service explaining any cause for the upswing in the number of cases.

He said symptoms of the disease are general and may not be marked. Diagnosis is usually difficult, he added.

However anyone who contacts a known victim should see his doctor for examination.

The virus may be transported between humans from body discharges of the nose, mouth, or stomach tracts, he added.

Occasionally a fatality results from hepatitis, but it is not usually thought of as a fatal disease, Dr. Summer said.

$50,000 Offered Toward Building Of Little Theater

The Carolyn Rose Strauss foundation has offered $50,000 toward the construction of a new modern playhouse for the Little Theater of Monroe, it was announced by Julius Cahn, yesterday, president of the group.

The offer is contingent upon an equal amount from the citizens of the community, Cahn added. Half of the matching funds have already been pledged by several residents of the Twin Cities, and other large contributors are considering donations to make up the balance, he said.

In addition, a contingency fund of $20,000 to $25,000 is to be raised through a campaign for smaller amounts among members of the Little Theater and the public-at-large.

According to Richard M. Troy, treasurer of the Little Theater and campaign manager for the drive among members, donations will be solicited on the basis of $100 for each of the 200 to 250 seats proposed for the new theater and will be recognized by name plates affixed to the seats.

Paul F. Stewart has agreed to contribute his architectural services for the new building. Its location will depend upon the pos-

Lightning Bolt Injures Women

MOBILE (UPI) — Two women were slightly injured Saturday when lightning struck the yard of a Saraland residence.

Mrs. June Whittington, 27, and her mother, Mrs. Hazel Worthy, 52, were admitted to Mobile Infirmary. Attendants said they were not seriously hurt.

The lightning bolt hit about noon, while the women were gathering clothes from a wash line.

Mrs. Whittington's speech was temporarily affected and she lost the feeling in her limbs for a short period. Mrs. Worthy had difficulty hearing after the bolt hit nearby.

Vaughan wandered into East Germany in his light plane March 27 and was seized when he landed out of fuel in a meadow near Esienach.

"The East Germans said they would only keep me a few hours," he said. But his captivity stretched to almost seven weeks.

He said he was held in solitary confinement at Erfurt, in a house under constant guard, with only Communist literature and one American magazine to read.

"I was allowed to take exercise in a 30-by-20-pace garden for half an hour every day," he said.

"The only people I saw were my guard, interrogators and two Russian soldiers I saw from my room window.

Vaughan looked in good condition.

He said the "apparent point" of all the interrogation was to assure the Germans that he did not cross the border deliberately in his one-seater sports plane.

TELLS PLANS AT RUSTON

Long To Resign By Late Summer

By SAM HANNA
Staff Writer

RUSTON — Gov. Earl K. Long stole a political show at the Ruston Diamond Jubilee here yesterday where he disclosed plans to resign in August or September to seek re-election.

In addition, Long confirmed reports, in a Morning World interview, that he will introduce several personal bills when the Legislature convenes in fiscal session Monday.

A small, bewhiskered crowd waited for 45 minutes in City Park before the governor arrived to lampoon his enemies and praise his friends in a speech pointing to his fourth term in office.

Surrounded later on a park bench, Long, redfaced and hoarse, took off his coat and tie, relaxed, and kept listeners in stitches with a running commentary flavored in Louisiana politics.

It was "Mayor's Day" at the 75th anniversary of the founding of Ruston and Long took advantage of a political crowd to pound against his opponents.

"By the charity of God and the people of this state," he said, "I'll be governor again."

Asked when he plans to resign, "It'll be in August or September," he said. Long, now 63, said this would be his last chance.

"If I can't hardly walk now, what do you think I could do

Long Favors Menefee For Top WLF Post

Gov. Earl K. Long wants Pete Menefee of Monroe to head the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission if Director F. Lamar Clement resigns, the Morning World learned yesterday.

Long said Clement was thinking about quitting because of a death in his private business firm. Clement could not be reached in New Orleans, but Mrs. Clement confirmed the governor's statement.

Menefee, who is Long's racing commissioner and former register of state lands, was unavailable for comment.

But Long told the Morning World at Ruston, "I'd like to get Pete Menefee for that job. I wanted him to run for register of state lands, but he won't."

In New Orleans, Mrs. Clement said the death of Mrs. J. B. Braswell, wife of Clement's business partner, was not the only reason her husband was thinking about resigning.

"But I'd rather for you to talk to him," Mrs. Clement said. Clement could not be contacted.

$50,000 Offered Toward Building Of Little Theater

The Carolyn Rose Strauss foundation has offered $50,000 toward the construction of a new modern playhouse for the Little Theater of Monroe, it was announced by Julius Cahn, yesterday, president of the group.

The offer is contingent upon an equal amount from the citizens of the community, Cahn added. Half of the matching funds have already been pledged by several residents of the Twin Cities, and other large contributors are considering donations to make up the balance, he said.

In addition, a contingency fund of $20,000 to $25,000 is to be raised through a campaign for smaller amounts among members of the Little Theater and the public-at-large.

According to Richard M. Troy, treasurer of the Little Theater and campaign manager for the drive among members, donations will be solicited on the basis of $100 for each of the 200 to 250 seats proposed for the new theater and will be recognized by name plates affixed to the seats.

Paul F. Stewart has agreed to contribute his architectual services for the new building. Its location will depend upon the pos-

Mother's Day

Today is "Mothers' Day" throughout the length and breadth of the United States and possessions. It is needless to enumerate the blessings that come to humanity through the untiring, ever unselfish work and leadership of one's mother.

They deserve honor and devotion from their children and too often these are lacking in the busy world in which we live. Realization of this fact caused the government of the United States many years ago to name the second Sunday in May as annual Mothers' Day. One can never do too much to honor this parent who outclasses all other relatives in the unselfish devotion that she gives her children.

A red carnation, or other flower, can be worn today to recognize a living mother and where the mother has passed on, a white flower in the but-

Auto Hurtles Out Of Control; One Killed, Two Hurt

BASTROP (Special) — A young Camden Ark., man was killed and his two companions critically injured when their car skidded out of control striking a culvert before hurtling 50 feet through the air near the Crossett-Hamburg highway junction early Saturday. Dead is Guy Post, 22, Camden, Ark., papermill worker.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Post of Bloomington, Calif, were notified of their son's death on the eve of their leaving for vacation in Crossett, authorities said.

The injured are Teddie Huff, 22, fractured skull, pelvis, internal injuries, and multiple lacerations; and Clifford Royce Harris, 22, shock, multiple lacerations, contusions, right leg fracture.

Both were reported in critical condition at the Morehouse Gegeral Hospital here.

Louisiana State Police identified Harris as the driver.

Authorities said the car was headed north and had completed the turn onto the Crossett highway at the junction with the Hamburg Highway 10 miles north of here about 12:30 a.m.

It left the road, skidded 32 steps, struck a cement culvert, cartwheeled into the air, and landed on the ditch on one side. Troopers estimated the car traveled 600 feet after it left the road.

MOBILE (UPI) — Two women were slightly injured Saturday when lightning struck the yard of a Saraland residence.

Mrs. June Whittington, 27, and her mother, Mrs. Hazel Worthy, 52, were admitted to Mobile Infirmary. Attendants said they were not seriously hurt.

The lightning bolt hit about noon, while the women were gathering clothes from a wash line.

Mrs. Whittington's speech was temporarily affected and she lost the feeling in her limbs for a short period. Mrs. Worthy had difficulty hearing after the bolt hit nearby.

Accident Victim In Coma 128 Days

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)— A small graying man bowed his head in a waiting room at North Shore Hospital and spoke in quiet words of the case that has tugged at his heart for 128 days.

"I wish that God would take my son," said 66-year-old Jim Burne.

Upstairs, Bart Burne lay in the coma that has darkened his life since Jan. 30.

"His mother and I come to see him four times a day," said the father, "but he doesn't even know we are here."

The son, a robust man of 31, was struck down by a motor car as he started across the road toward his drive-in restaurant. His left leg was mangled. His pelvis was broken. His head was gashed. His body was badly cut and bruised.

Doctors did not expect him to live. They worked on the mangled leg. Later they operated on the son's brain.

Now, the doctors say Bart will "never be more than just a vegetable," the father said.

"We just go and stew and feel that pitchfork in our stomachs. Bart's three brothers and his sister have all been down and had their stay and gone back home again."

The father, an automobile dealer at Scranton, Pa., and his sons pooled $11,000 to take care of Bart, but now that money has almont all been spent.

Bart's attractive wife Jo Ann busies herself with the care of their two children, Bart, Jr., 5, and Florence, 18 months.

"I'm going to have another baby in three months," she said. "I found out just four days before Bart was hit."

Sadie Layton, whose car struck Bart, was not charged with the accident but she faces a damage suit for $350,000.

Partly Overcast Seen For Area

Partly overcast skies are in prospect for the Twin Cities area today, with little change in temperature indicated, the federal weatherman said last night.

The high temperature reading recorded at Selman Field yesterday was 88, compared with 87 on the previous day. The low was 64, while previous day's level was 69.

The outlook for Arkansas is for scattered thundershowers in the north portion through tonight.

Firebug Strikes At Hattiesburg

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (UPI) — Police believed Saturday "the Hattiesburg Firebug" may have struck again.

Officers said they were trying to track down an arsonist who set fire to an elementary school here early Saturday. The fire caused an estimated $25,000 damage.

Another fire Saturday destroyed an unoccupied home here and officers said that one might also have been the firebug's work.

The school fire came after a month - long lull in a series of arson cases that began here shortly after Christmas. A teen-aged girl was arrested in connection with several of the fires.

Police Chief Ed Barksdale said the fire that badly damaged the front portion of the Walthall Elementary School Saturday was "definitely" set by an arsonist. He said whoever started the blaze may also have set some of the earlier ones.

Two Hepatitis Cases Reported In Parish

Two cases of hepatitis have been reported in Ouachita Parish recently but health authorities commented last night that the infection generally is not something to dread as a fatal disease.

Ouachita Parish Health Unit director Dr. W. Carroll Summer said he had been told of two cases, but had no official reports from doctors on them.

Hepatitis is an infection of the liver caused by a communicable virus. It sometimes follows other ailments such as influenza, Dr. Summer added.

"As far as I know now, there is no preventative for it, but gamma globulin is used effectively on persons who have been exposed," he said.

He added that the limited supply of gamma globulin and its relative high cost prohibits widespread usage of it as a vaccination.

Generally speaking there are no permanent ill effects from hepatitis and the victim overcomes the seizure under treatment. Prolonged hospitalization is common, however.

The Louisiana Department of Public health reported 50 cases to date this year, and four for the same period last year.

Dr. Summer said he had seen no information from the health service explaining any cause for the upswing in the number of cases.

He said symptoms of the disease are general and may not be marked. Diagnosis is usually difficult, he added.

However anyone who contacts a known victim should see his doctor for examination.

The virus may be transported between humans from body discharges of the nose, mouth, or stomach tracts, he added.

Occasionally a fatality results from hepatitis, but it is not usually thought of as a fatal disease, Dr. Summer said.

Music

The past week has been regarded as highly successful in that it has as a community maintained but a single theme - the recognition and tribute to music and to its vital role in the lives of our citizenship.

Music exhibitions were extensive and covered a wide range. The showings in the new Ouachita Parish Public library, the West Monroe Public Library, whose displays are mentioned at the request of local musicians, together with music displays in local public schools as achieving notable successes so highly deserved.

International

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Pohl, the first named son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Pohl, are parents of three interesting children. All have been born in different countries as their father in diplomatic service for the U.S. Government, is assigned to many places across the globe. Lynn Carol, oldest of the trio, was born in Germany; John arrived when the family was in Florida; while Anne Catherine, was born in Palermo, Italy.

Eddie Pohl is native of Monroe, graduate of the public schools here and later attended college which laid the foundation for his highly successful life of public service for Uncle Sam.

Entertained

The North Monroe Kiwanis club entertained the Bastrop club last week with an inter-club visit. In return for courtesies extended, the guests presented a highly interesting program on Cub Scouting. It was timely as the local club is about to sponsor a pack of this nature. Speakers were David Snyder and Carl Buchanan.

President Bill Johnson, of the local club, has been honored by the President of Kiwanis International by being appointed to serve on the election committee of the International organization., regarded as a high honor.

Banquet

The Ouachita Parish Alumni banquet honoring the graduates of the current year, will be held ay 21, at 7:30 p.m. in Hotel Virginia roof. An excellent program is being prepared for the occasion.

Serenade

The West Monroe Kiwanis Club will sponsor Spring Serenade, annual voice recital featuring voice students of Mrs. Estelle Schulze Sanders, slated for tomorrow evening at 8:15 p.m. Neville Auditorium.

The serenade is one of the Twin Cities most colorful musical events. Tickets are available from any member of the West Monroe Kiwanis Club.

There is one set of twins in every 92 births. For triplets, the ratio is one in 9,600 and for quadruplets one in 657,000.

Coroner J. G. Norris made an investigation and termed Mitchell's death "a result of a gunshot wound."

District Attorney Ragen Madden indicated a formal inquest would not be held. Meanwhile, Fowler was being held in the Union Parish jail on a manslaughter charge. A bond had not been set early yesterday.

The district attorney said the case would be submitted to the grand jury later this year.

Funeral arrangements for Mitchell were incomplete pending the arrival of relatives from out of state, but will be in charge of Kilpatrick's Funeral Home of Farmerville.

Mr. Mitchell is survived by his mother, Mrs. Moses Mitchell, Ouachita City; three sisters, Mrs. Mary Martinez, Spring Lake, Texas; Mrs. Paul Antie, Monroe; Mrs. T. C. Travis, Bosco; his grandmother, and Mrs. Mary Fowler, Marion.

"The car went about 50 feet through the air after it hit the culvert," he said.

"We were awakened by the noise, and I ran out to the road", he continued.

Chain said that when he got to the car, Post was on the ground about eight feet from the badly smashed vehicle, and the other two were inside.

"My wife called the sheriff and when men came from town they took both the boys from the car.

"It took only a few minutes to get them out. One was in the front seat, and the other in the back", Chain said.

Parts of the auto were strewn along the road where it had skidded and a flat bedded truck was sent to bring the crushed vehicle to Bastrop.

Witnesses said it looked as if the car had been rolled through a giant press smashing the top down on the frame so that the vehicle was about two feet tall.

Chain said several people living near him, and some motorists went to the wreck scene.

Post formerly lived in Crossett and went to school there.

BY SEN. McCLELLAN

Stiffer Laws On Rackets Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) Saturday urged Congress to take legislative action against racketeers such as those who "have entrenched themselves in the economic structure of the nation's largest city."

The chairman of the Senate Rackets Committee, which earlier this week heard charges of alleged newspaper delivery shakedowns in New York, asserted that "probably no hearing held by this committee has been as significant in pointing out the present racketeer threat to our free economic system."

Evidence in the hearings "clearly indicate that the time has come for Congress to seriously consider the enactment of anti trust legislation in the transportation field," he added.

McClellan said he was asking the committee staff to prepare legislative recommendations for the Senate Judiciary Committee because "it is obvious to the whole country that the labor unions themselves cannot handle the critical problem of racketeering."

Testimony indicated that racketeers extorted protection money from certain New York newspaper distributors to insure delivery of their publications.

Ted Thockery, who published the now-defunct New York Compass, told the committee he paid $10,000 to underworld figure Irving Gitz in 1949 to assure a favorable contract with the Deliverers Union.

Bitz, along with 16 of the 19 other witnesses from the Deliverers Union, invoked the Fifth Amendment.

While federal action is needed in this field, McClellan said, "it would appear that the newspapers and magazines in the New York area should take some steps to eliminate having to do business with persons of this ilk."

"It is an appalling thing," McClellan said, "when racketeers can successfully exact tribute from newspapers.

"In a country where freedom of the press is a cornerstone of our basic liberties, we find racketeers able to do what no government authority would conceive of doing.

"We find racketeers able to shut off the supply of news to the public and we find these nationally-known publications compelled to make payments to assure the delivery of their newspapers."

The Little Theater has been an institution in Monroe since its organization in 1932. Among its past presidents have been Mrs. Elmer Richards, Mrs. L. H. Carter, Mrs. C. H. McHenry, Rabbi F. K. Hirsch, Rev. E. F. Hayward, Judge W. M. Harper, Mesrs. Henry Biedenharn, Sr., Tom Davenport, Fred Fudickar, Jr., Stanley Reid, Tom Serwich, A. O. Evans, Everett Lawson, Joe Kern, Frank Breese, Gilbert Faulk, C. C. Boardman, I. T. Landhy, Edward Ellison, and Sidney Gill.

Many highly successful Broadway plays have been produced at the local playhouse, and it has provided opportunity for the development of much local acting talent.

Current professional director of the Little Theater is Ivan Uttal, who has received widespread acclaim for the quality of the productions during the past four years.

Outstanding in the current season was the musical show "Pajama Game" which ran for 18 performances to crowded houses. The final production of the season will be "Country girl," officials said.

Services Ask Extra Funds For Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Armed Services have asked Congress to make substantial increases in President Eisenhower's request for funds to build missiles.

Congress Saturday released an 864-page transcript of testimony by the Navy, Army and Air Force before a House appropriations subcommittee.

The record was heavily censored. But each service claimed to need more money for tactical missiles.

The testimony also contained some inter-service criticism.

The requests were expected to provide fresh ammunition to critics who want heavier spending on space programs than on military missile buildup.

UNDER STUDY

The missile program is part of Eisenhower's $40,850,000,000 defense budget. The subcommittee has been studying the request since January and is expected to take final action on it within a few days.

The transcript showed that:

Air Force officials favor more spending on the Atlas and Minuteman 5,000-mile missiles. One plan given to the subcommittee would increase outlays for these programs 651 million dollars in fiscal 1960 and a total of $4,788,000,000 over an unspecified period.

A top Navy witness testified the budget should include more submarines which could fire the Polars 1,500-mile missile. These subs cost about 100 million dollars each.

Music

The past week has been regarded as highly successful in that it has as a community maintained but a single theme - the recognition and tribute to music and to its vital role in the lives of our citizenship.

Music exhibitions were extensive and covered a wide range. The showings in the new Ouachita Parish Public library, the West Monroe Public Library, whose displays are mentioned at the request of local musicians, together with music displays in local public schools as achieving notable successes so highly deserved.

International

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Pohl, the first named son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Pohl, are parents of three interesting children. All have been born in different countries as their father in diplomatic service for the U.S. Government, is assigned to many places across the globe. Lynn Carol, oldest of the trio, was born in Germany; John arrived when the family was in Florida; while Anne Catherine, was born in Palermo, Italy.

Eddie Pohl is native of Monroe, graduate of the public schools here and later attended college which laid the foundation for his highly successful life of public service for Uncle Sam.

Entertained

The North Monroe Kiwanis club entertained the Bastrop club last week with an inter-club visit. In return for courtesies extended, the guests presented a highly interesting program on Cub Scouting. It was timely as the local club is about to sponsor a pack of this nature. Speakers were David Snyder and Carl Buchanan.

President Bill Johnson, of the local club, has been honored by the President of Kiwanis International by being appointed to serve on the election committee of the International organization., regarded as a high honor.

Banquet

The Ouachita Parish Alumni banquet honoring the graduates of the current year, will be held ay 21, at 7:30 p.m. in Hotel Virginia roof. An excellent program is being prepared for the occasion.

Serenade

The West Monroe Kiwanis Club will sponsor Spring Serenade, annual voice recital featuring voice students of Mrs. Estelle Schulze Sanders, slated for tomorrow evening at 8:15 p.m. Neville Auditorium.

The serenade is one of the Twin Cities most colorful musical events. Tickets are available from any member of the West Monroe Kiwanis Club.

There is one set of twins in every 92 births. For triplets, the ratio is one in 9,600 and for quadruplets one in 657,000.

Union parish just across the Ouachita river from Sterlington.

Coroner J. G. Norris made an investigation and termed Mitchell's death "a result of a gunshot wound."

District Attorney Ragen Madden indicated a formal inquest would not be held. Meanwhile, Fowler was being held in the Union Parish jail on a manslaughter charge. A bond had not been set early yesterday.

The district attorney said the case would be submitted to the grand jury later this year.

Funeral arrangements for Mitchell were incomplete pending the arrival of relatives from out of state, but will be in charge of Kilpatrick's Funeral Home of Farmerville.

Mr. Mitchell is survived by his mother, Mrs. Moses Mitchell, Ouachita City; three sisters, Mrs. Mary Martinez, Spring Lake, Texas; Mrs. Paul Antie, Monroe; Mrs. T. C. Travis, Bosco; his grandmother, and Mrs. Mary Fowler, Marion.

store at the intersection said he was first to arrive at the scene.

"The car went about 50 feet through the air after it hit the culvert," he said.

"We were awakened by the noise, and I ran out to the road", he continued.

Chain said that when he got to the car, Post was on the ground about eight feet from the badly smashed vehicle, and the other two were inside.

"My wife called the sheriff and when men came from town they took both the boys from the car.

"It took only a few minutes to get them out. One was in the front seat, and the other in the back", Chain said.

Parts of the auto were strewn along the road where it had skidded and a flat bedded truck was sent to bring the crushed vehicle to Bastrop.

Witnesses said it looked as if the car had been rolled through a giant press smashing the top down on the frame so that the vehicle was about two feet tall.

Chain said several people living near him, and some motorists went to the wreck scene.

Post formerly lived in Crossett and went to school there.

Harris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Harris of Frost Prarie near Cossett and Huff's paents are Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Huff of Cossett.

Huff had just completed a six-month tour of duty with the National Guard.

No funeral arrangments had been set for Post last night.

Stiffer Laws On Rackets Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) Saturday urged Congress to take legislative action against racketeers such as those who "have entrenched themselves in the economic structure of the nation's largest city."

The chairman of the Senate Rackets Committee, which earlier this week heard charges of alleged newspaper delivery shakedowns in New York, asserted that "probably no hearing held by this committee has been as significant in pointing out the present racketeer threat to our free economic system."

Evidence in the hearings "clearly indicate that the time has come for Congress to seriously consider the enactment of anti trust legislation in the transportation field," he added.

McClellan said he was asking the committee staff to prepare legislative recommendations for the Senate Judiciary Committee because "it is obvious to the whole country that the labor unions themselves cannot handle the critical problem of racketeering."

Testimony indicated that racketeers extorted protection money from certain New York newspaper distributors to insure delivery of their publications.

Ted Thockery, who published the now-defunct New York Compass, told the committee he paid $10,000 to underworld figure Irving Gitz in 1949 to assure a favorable contract with the Deliverers Union.

Bitz, along with 16 of the 19 other witnesses from the Deliverers Union, invoked the Fifth Amendment.

While federal action is needed in this field, McClellan said, "it would appear that the newspapers and magazines in the New York area should take some steps to eliminate having to do business with persons of this ilk."

"It is an appalling thing," McClellan said, "when racketeers can successfully exact tribute from newspapers.

"In a country where freedom of the press is a cornerstone of our basic liberties, we find racketeers able to do what no government authority would conceive of doing.

"We find racketeers able to shut off the supply of news to the public and we find these nationally-known publications compelled to make payments to assure the delivery of their newspapers."

Services Ask Extra Funds For Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Armed Services have asked Congress to make substantial increases in President Eisenhower's request for funds to build missiles.

Congress Saturday released an 864-page transcript of testimony by the Navy, Army and Air Force before a House appropriations subcommittee.

The record was heavily censored. But each service claimed to need more money for tactical missiles.

The testimony also contained some inter-service criticism.

The requests were expected to provide fresh ammunition to critics who want heavier spending on space programs than on military missile buildup.

UNDER STUDY

The missile program is part of Eisenhower's $40,850,000,000 defense budget. The subcommittee has been studying the request since January and is expected to take final action on it within a few days.

The transcript showed that:

Air Force officials favor more spending on the Atlas and Minuteman 5,000-mile missiles. One plan given to the subcommittee would increase outlays for these programs 651 million dollars in fiscal 1960 and a total of $4,788,000,000 over an unspecified period.

A top Navy witness testified the budget should include more submarines which could fire the Polars 1,500-mile missile. These subs cost about 100 million dollars each.

Business Group Supports Recall

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—An influential group of business and professional leaders has thrown its support behind a movement to recall three teacher-firing segregationists on the Little Rock School Board.

Irate school patrons demanded the recall at mass meetings at two elementary schools Friday night and half a dozen other schools set protest meetings for Monday night.

The businessmen—174 strong — formed themselves into a committee to "Stop this outrageous purge" and promptly pledged $6,000 to wage the recall battle against Board President Ed I. McKinley and members R. W. Laster and Ben Rowland, who voted Tuesday to fire 44 of the integration - troubled school system's 800 teachers.

Russell Matson, Ted Lamb and Everett Tucker Jr., are the other three board members. They boycotted the purge meeting.

Faculties at Central High School and the Horace Mann High for Negroes voted unanimous censure of the purge action and Central's teachers added "hearty endorsement" of the stand taken by Matson, Tucker and Lamb.

These schools and two other high schools were closed by Gov. Orval E. Faubus last September in the face of federal court integration orders. McKinley, Laster and Rowland, elected with Faubus' support, have endorsed the governor's position.

Tucker, Lamb and Matson have said they favor limited integration to destruction of the public school system.

About 7,000 signatures are needed for a recall election.

Ironically, the recall law was adopted as an anti-integration measure, aimed specifically at a former Little Rock School Board which developed a court-approved plan of gradual integration. This board later resigned and the six present members were named in an election last Dec. 6.

Matson, Tucker and Lamb were elected over strong oppopsition from Faubus, who called them integrationists.

Groom, 71, Dies Only Few Hours Before Wedding

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — W. H. Davenport, 71, a retired Palestine, Tex., insurance man, came to Austin to marry a girl friend of 50 years ago.

He collapsed and died less than 24 hours before the wedding.

Before the turn of the century, Davenport and Mrs. Ruth Ragsdale of Austin were friends. Each married some one else.

Mrs. Ragsdale's husband died more than 30 years ago. Davenport's wife died last year.

Recently the two old friends decided to marry and spend their last years together. They prepared a home in Austin and set the wedding date for 10 a.m. Saturday.

Davenport arrived Friday by train. Mrs. Ragsdale, 68, met him at the station. He opened the door to her car and collapsed.

Foreign Aid Results Are Hard To See

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

There are so many different approaches to foreign aid it's no wonder the administration and other proponents are taking such pains to attract public attention both through the congressional hearings and general propaganda.

This year's campaign to get congressional approval of the nearly four billion dollars requested by the administration is one of the most intensive ever.

As the years go by, opposition to the aid program and the way it is conducted seems to remain about the same. Many members of Congress obviously reflect doubts on the part of their constituencies.

Cost, though important, does not seem to be the major factor in this opposition.

Some people doubt that many countries receiving military aid use it effectively if need be, and to this extent they question the stock claim that the United States is buying military security by this means far more cheaply than if she tried to do it all herself.

Economic aid is criticized on the grounds that much of it shows no obvious results, although there seems to be fairly general acceptance that the objective, to raise the living standards and the purchasing power of underdeveloped countries, is good.

There is an admitted need for greater coordination with other nations and the United Nations in this field.

And there is the old argument that the good will of nations cannot be bought, and that fundamental long-range objectives should be placed ahead of temporary political expediency for cold war purposes.

There is some fear that the Soviet Union, by keeping its aid program on a more strictly business basis on the surface, and counting upon later commercial dependency for gains in power over smaller countries, may be making a more hardheaded impression than is produced by mere generosity.

There is growing agitation for international, nonpolitical coordination of aid and development programs throughout the free world.

Deputy Defense Secretary Dies; McElroy To Stay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Deputy Defense Secretary Donald A. Quarles, who was expected to be President Eisenhower's next secretary of defense, was found dead at his home early Friday. He was 64.

Quarles, who had been in good health but needed a vacation from hard work, according to his doctor, apparently died in his sleep. He was found by his chauffeur who tried to wake him at 7:55 a.m. e.d.t.

A few hours later, Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy said that he would reconsider his intention to resign later this year in view of Quarles' death.

Quarles, the number two man in the Pentagon and a veteran member of the Eisenhower administration, had been mentioned as the most likely successor to McElroy.

McElroy also cancelled plans to fly to Geneva late Friday to advise Serretary of State Christian A. Herter at the Big Forr foreign ministers conference with Rossia.

He told newsmen, however, that he probably would go to Geneva sometime next week, whtn Herter needs his counsel on military matters.

Rorex Appointment

Appointment of George M. Rorex as a member of the Ouachita parish school board to fill the unexpired term of the late W. B. Inabnet is a step that should receive general commendation. He is expected to prove a worthy successor and to bring to the board additional honor and respect.

Active in numerous civic affairs, Mr. Rorex is well qualified to assume the responsibilties he will face. He will represent ward 10 for the remainder of the late Mr. Inabnet's term, which will expire in December, 1960.

Mr. Rorex is a bank director and an official of the Cancer Society, Salvation Army, Ouachita Parish Red Cross unit, vice-president and director of the Y.M.C.A., chairman of the parking-traffic committee of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce and a director of the Lotus club.

An indication of the sound policies Mr. Rorex wil pursue is to be found in his statement in which he said, "I hope I can bring to this board the same sound judgment as demonstrated by Mr. Inabnet."

School Board President Charles G. Wall summed up the situation well when he said:

"We are honored to have such a high-type man as Mr. Rorex to serve on our board. I am sure he will be an asset to the board and we are looking forward to working with him."

Russia Never Ally

One of the strange things about World War II was that, although Russia fought on the side of the Western allies, it was never actually an ally of those nations. They fought on the same side but even then Russia was nurturing its dreams of world conquest and it never lost sight of its hope that it would eventually swallow up those nations fighting alongside it.

This situation generally was realized by the people of the United States, although the American officials at first apparently were ignorant of it, disregarded it or were sympathetic to the Russia views and aspirations. Even then there were many ordinary American citizens who considered Russia a greater threat to the United States than was Germany. Their views on that have never changed.

Fourteen years ago Germany lay prostrate. The war was over and German Dictator Adolf Hitler was dead at his own hands. Russian and American officials met over the ruins of the late enemy and embraced, but the Russian officials scarcely bothered to sheath their knives. That honeymoon, in which only the officials of the nations (not the people) participated, lasted no longer than the space of a breath.

Fourteen years later the nations which fought on the same side but which were never allies are still fighting over the division of the spoils. In this fight to prevent total Russian acquisition of Germany, the United States and the other Western allies are handicapped by the ridiculous and unfortunate agreements compounded in the Yalta conference.

East and West are meeting now in a foreign ministers' conference in Geneva, each side trying to force the other to give up part of the spoils it seized.

Each side of the cold war now counts part of Germany as its own ally. Though the leaders of the grand alliance of World War II 14 years ago solemnly pledged that Germans never again should bear arms or be permitted more worldly goods than was necessary for bare existence, it was a hollow agreement and everyone knew it then and knows it now. No nation can be kept forever in subjugation and there was no expectation that Germany would be. Even as that pledge was being drawn up, Russia and the Western allies and the people of the United States knew that the war had not ended — it had only changed. The difference was that Russia and the allies were fighting over Germany—and they have never stopped.

The Western Allies and Russia each have armed their German allies and have been doing everything possible since the end of World War II to make their respective sections of Germany prosperous and devoted allies. East and West denounce each others aims in and toward Germany.

Scarcely had the war ended before Russia and the Western allies openly became the enemics they had been in secret. Each tried to wrest control of the whole of Germany from the other.

The French wanted permanent dismemberment of Germany. The Americans and British wanted to establish central all-German economic administrations and treat the nation as a single unit. The Russians wanted to run their own zone of occupation through Communist puppets imported from Moscow, where they had spent the war years.

Britain, the United States and Russia quickly scrapped the old "scorched earth" policy. The Russians rebuilt the German Wehrmacht in East Germany and the United States pumped more than $4 billion in West Germany for economic development. Later the Western powers decided to rearm West Germany too and even to place tactical atomic weapons in the hands of the West Germans.

Since then Russia has been guilty of "torts" or offensive acts designed to foment the cold war and to threaten to turn it into a hot war, deliberately agitating the Western allies. Recently, Russian Premier Nikita Khrushchev has backed down somewhat on his demand for allied recognition of East German puppets as the rulers of East Germany.

The Western allies have never been too optimistic over the prospects of a genuine and reasonable agreement with Russia concerning reunification of Germany. As they go into the new Geneva conference, about all they or the people of this country hope for is to keep new conflict from erupting.

Supreme Court

It was appropriate that the first bill Rep. Bob Casey of Texas introduced in Congress was one designed to upgrade the caliber of United States supreme court justices.

Casey's bill has two main points. First, it would require that future appointees to the supreme court have not less than eight years experience as a judge of a federal district or appeals court, or a state court of last resort having jurisdiction to interpret the state's constitution. Casey noted that five of the present nine supreme court justices had no previous judicial experience before being appointed to the highest court in the land. Obviously, these were political appointments. Three of the present members of the supreme court were named to judgeships of lower federal courts by President Eisenhower and then advanced by him to the supreme court one to four years later.

The second major provision of the Casey bill would assure every section of the country of having representation on the high court. The country is divided into 10 judicial circuits. The Casey bill would prohibit there being more than one justice from each circuit, so that nine of the circuits would be represented.

Russian Smile May Not Be Sign Of Friendship

CYRUS EATON CAPITALIST

Ellis O. Jones, whom I do not identify, recently sent me a brochure prepared by Cyrus Eaton, the capitalist. Apparently, Ellis O. Jones sends these brochures far and wide, my copy coming to me unsolicited, but welcome because it gives a further view of Eaton's thinking on the subject of the relations between the United States and Soviet Russia—a subject to which Eaton has devoted his spare time.

* * *

Eaton says:

"Throughout my stay in the Soviet Union, I made a determined effort to meet and talk to as many people of all ages and occupations as possible. Regrettably, I do not speak Russian, so I was obliged to communicate through an interpreter. I did not have to rely on my interpreter, however, to sense that one of the most marked characteristics of the Russians is their friendliness . . ."

When I lived in China, I was always being told that the Chinese are a very friendly people because they always seem to smile. It's like the old song:

"There are smiles that make us happy
There are smiles that make us blue . . ."

There are lots of people in China, 500 million or 600 million of them. Nobody has ever taken a scientific census. Some like Americans; some do not. In the Boxer Rebellion, which happened long before there were any Communists (1900), the Americans in Peking and Tientsin had as tough a time as anybody else. In recent years, Americans have been imprisoned and murdered just because they are Americans. It is the same in Russia. The fact that people smile does not mean that they are friendly; it may mean that they are embarrassed. At any rate, a person who does not speak the language will have a hard time discovering whether he is smiled at because he is loved or whether he is smiled at because he is thought to be a fool.

* * *

But it is not smiles that concern Cyrus Eaton. After all, he is a businessman who is chairman of the board of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway and chairman of the board of Steep Rock Iron Mines, Ltd, and until he became a protagonist of Soviet Russia, he devoted himself to business and did very well indeed, most of the time. So mark what he says:

". . . A Russian can own his own house if he chooses to, but the land on which it is built belongs to the state. There is no rent for the land, but a property tax based on the value of the land. The Russian owns all the furnishings of his home and, if he has an automobile and a radio, those are his property, too. At present, he has to pay cash on the barrel head for everything. If installment buying is ever introduced in the Soviet Union—and my hunch is that it will come eventually—the consequent increase in demand for consumer products will create a mass market well worth American attention."

So, we shall, if they adopt our credit system, sell them such goods as they permit us or anybody else to export to their country. That looks like a good deal. But business is a two-way street. If they permit us to export to them, with what will they pay us? Caviare? Hides and skins? Vodka? Or will they export vast quantities of gold to us at $35 an ounce? Eaton does business abroad out of his Canadian mines. Does he sell to Soviet Russia? What do they use to pay for what they buy? Is it sugar or ice or furs? This is not a playful question. It is the heart of all foreign trading.

Again, Eaton quotes Khrushchev as follows:

"'To take our country from its backward position of 40 years ago to the modern ideal we hold for it calls for unlimited capital and for the labor of all of our people,' Mr. K stated emphatically. He added that machinery, equipment and materials from the United States could be used in these vast Soviet expansion programs, and that there should be profitable opportunities for trade between our two countries . . ."

Tis a tempting morsel — very tempting. But what will our machine tool industry take for their wares? Will it be platinum? We cannot go on sending the products of our inventiveness to Russia for nothing. We gave them $11 billion during World War II, uncontrolled, unaccounted for. And we have had none of it back—nothing but the threat of further wars.

Truman, At 75, Hardy Specimen

Harry S. Truman is 75, an age attained by only 9 of the other 32 presidents of the U. S., including the 84 year old Herbert Hoover. But between James Buchanan, who was president a century ago, and Hoover, whose term ended in 1933, no occupant of the White House lived to be 75.

Curiously after George Washington, who died at 67, eight successive presidents lived beyond the 75 year mark, beginning with the nonogenarian John Adams, and ending with Martin Van Buren, who served from 1837 to 1841.

With the present crop of younger presidential possibilities coming up, it can also be recalled that all of those who made the 75 year mile post were comfortably past 50 at inauguration, the two youngest being Van Buren and Hoover.

One more point which can be made is that Truman, who was 60 at inauguration, and the others who lived past 75 had lived youthful outdoor lives, often rugged, either as farm boys, estate owners, and soldiers, or had had vigorous intellectual careers, as in the case of the two Adams. In fact, from Washington on through Andrew Jackson, each of the first seven presidents was 57 or more when he took the oath of office.

* * *

They included some very good presidents, who made tremendous contributions to the foundling period of the infant nation. At a time when medical science was primitive in many respects —history records that George Washington's physicians practically bled him to death, a method of treatment now regarded with horror — and public health had not yet been given government attention, presidents were a healthier and hardier breed than their successors.

The excellent health of Truman and Hoover is the more notable in view of the fact that all other presidents in this century, with the exception of the martyred McKinley, have died as the result of strokes or heart attacks.

Some of Truman's admirers on this occasion are writing and speaking of him as a great president, an encomium which can only be supported by the passage of time. Presidents previous to the era of U. S. internationalism were able to demonstrate their qualifications so fully in their dealing with the internal affairs of the U.S. that the judgement of history was Indicated fairly soon.

Among those who watched his conduct of the war investigating special senate committee in the early days of World War II, few would have predicted that he would later become vice - president and then president. He seemed then a rather intemperate man, given to hasty denunciations on the one hand and praise for those who were able to make a case for themselves. As businessmen are notoriously poor witnesses before congressional investigating committees, this put some of those handling huge government contracts in a bad light, including one head of a mid-western steel company whom Senator Truman intimated strongly, might be guilty of "treason."

* * *

He was however, a man of decision in a period when more world policy was decided than before or since, and much of present U. S. foreign policy is based on those decisions. Under the world circumstances then prevailing, a strong opinion still exists in many quarters that the condoning of Red infiltration of China which resulted in complete Communist control there, and which came while General George Marshall, as a special ambassador to China and later as secretary of state directing foreign policy and the attitude toward Korea which encouraged the Communist Chinese to attack there were the result of Truman decisions. But there are numerous other Truman performances which taken together with his personality, have maintained his popularity at a high level.

Due to personal scandals in his administration it is doubted whether he could have been re-elected in 1952 and by delaying his decision, he left his own party in a state of confusion about picking a presidential nominee.

To The Editor:

I would like to express my appreciation to you for buying my pig at the Northeast District Junior Livestock Show.

Without the help of fine people like you it would be impossible for 4-H Club members to carry on their projects.

I plan to use this money to pay the expenses on projects in the future and to finish my education.

Once again, I wish to express my appreciation to you for your support.

Dear Editor:

With reference to your editorial of May 1, regarding the legislative program of the PTA, I wish to thank the writer of that editorial. This was an excellent, correct and thorough explanation of the PTA's stand on appointive Superintendent of Education. After reading this summation one can readily see the merits of the appointive system.

Also, we consider our leginlation on health to be important and wheels have already been set in motion in local units for health surveys and continuous health records of the child. This is only the first step toward complete immunization, (where practical) against polio, smallpox, diptheria, whooping cough and tetanus.

LONG QUESTIONED

An open letter to the Governor

The Hon. Earl K. Long

Dear Mr. Long:

It is now apparent that you are sincere in your threat to resign from office and run for re-election. This really doesn't come as much of a surprise to some of us: we would expect something like that from you, Governor.

Since your resignation is the topic of discussion around the state these days, I would like to say a few things to you about it. There are some people in this fine state, Mr. Long, who believe in Constitutional Government, even though you apparently don't, except when it is in line with your desires. Just how do you feel about our state constitution, Mr. Long? Do you consider it the foundation of our government, to be followed completely; or are your feelings toward it similar to those expressed by a German diplomat in 1914 about the German treaty with Belgium — only a "scrap of paper."

Now I won't dispute the fact that our constitution needs "overhauling" - no sir; not for one minute will I argue this point. But I will say that it is disgraceful when a citizen of this state - especially the Governor - takes this document, no matter how lengthy and out of date it might be, and makes a mockery of it. Some of your other actions, have been deplorable enough, Governor. But if you go through with this, it will leave no doubt in many of our minds what you stand for — selfish personal gain at any expense.

If you do run and if you should be re - elected, you may be certain that this unorthydox re-election was gained without my vote. I feel, Mr. Long, that I reflect not only my own feelings but also those of many other citizens who desire GOOD government in the State of Louisiana.

Georgia Marches On Industrially

ATLANTA, Georgia — "Markets, manpower and material," the speaker said, were the ingredients of industrial success. He was speaking at the ground - breaking ceremonies of the Southeastern Merchandise Mart, a $20 million free enterprise investment in the aforesaid formula. "If we're going to manufacture in the South, we're going to sell in the South," another speaker asserted. The people from the farms and forests, the workers in the increasing Southern factories, the salesmen who go forth each week from scores of small Southern towns, all had a stake in this big, important attempt at what should be called regional self-sufficiency.

All over the USA people are suffering from lack of the self-sufficiency drive which is illustrated here in Atlanta. The pockets of unemployment which make up most of the workless misery would disappear if the inhabitants of those places could learn from Georgia. The Atlanta plan is to challenge such cities as Dallas, which is the marketing center of the booming Southwest, San Francisco which does the dealing in the Pacific Northwest, Chicago and New York City which are other places where the big buyers go to bid for the manufactured household goods — apparel, appliances, toys and the like.

* * *

Governor Ernest Vandiver, the handsome husband of Georgia Senator Dick Russell's niece, told the gathering which included a press party from Washington, as well as trade officials from Great Britain and Spain, that, "We are getting along well in Georgia (where) progress is our business." The Governor's optimism seemed in admirable contrast to much of the blubbering self-pity which States' spokesmen bring to Washington. The Southeastern Merchandise Mart, all built with venture capital, is the needed substitute for such defeatist monstrosities as the Area Redevelopment bill, which passed the Senate with nearly half a billion dollars of Federal funds potentially earmarked for distribution.

Gov. Vandiver is laboring under a load of misfortunes left behind by his predecessor. The new man has been trying since January to bring business practices into State government, and has been conspicuously happy in raiding the Trust Company of Georgia to get one of the vice presidents, William Bowdoin, Jr., to be the State's chief purchasing agent. Mr. Bowdoin told this reporter that for the first time in Georgia history, vendors of goods bought with public money are required to give their bank references and to have their partnerships and corporations examined for probity and good community standing.

* * *

Results since January have been astonishing. The State has made a 50 per cent saving on cloth purchased for use at the penitentiary, lowered the price of trousers from $6.95 to $5.05 for the Fish and Wild Life Commission's personnel, saved three cents a gallon on bulk purchases of fuel, and in similar ratios lowered the cost of State - purchased asphalt, creosote, paint and automobile tires.

These facts are given in some detail because they relate to the cost of government in all the States which are seeking new revenue. It seems likely that any Governor with the will to do so could find businessmen able to make savings that would cause States' revenue to go further and States' independence to last much longer.

Mr. Bowdoin, who had another brief span of service under Governor Herman Talmadge, seems to be stepping warily around the ideological booby traps which many businessmen have brought to Washington, notably in the Eisenhower Administrations. Former Defense Secretary Charles Wilson has the misfortune to be the Number One example of how a tycoon can do quite badly as a bureaucrat. Wilson, who came from the automobile industry which became rich without advancing much in 50 years, had a blind spot for new ideas that related to space flight and trips to the moon. But he was not alone. Plenty of others, in Congress and in the executive departments, have thought they were doing fine with schemes to store up foods, fabrics, metals, water, fuels, military paper work and highways.

But Mr. Bowdoin gave his interviewer the impression of having already learned that the chief duty of a government officer is, conversely and negatively, to save as much money as he can. Government is not the investment business, and is not conducted for the purpose of storing up investories. The public has a friend in the bureaucrat who will reverse, even on a modest scale, the Harry Hopkins law of spend-to-elect.

Cancer Expert Favors Research On Radioactivity

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A cancer expert said Saturday a "remendous amount" of research is needed to determine the actual effect of radioactive strontium 90 upon human beings.

Dr. Robert J. Hasterlik, associate director of the Argonne Cancer Research Hospital, Chicago said many scientists feel it has not been "decisively proved" that strontium causes bone cancer and leukemia (blood cancer).

He told a radiation symposium at the U. S. Naval Medical Center that there has not been a single case of bone tumor or leukemia directly traceable to strontium.

He said estimates of the number of cases that could be caused by strontium in nuclear fallout have been based upon "extrapolation" of data on radium's effect upon the body.

Hasterlik said people vary considerably in the amount of strontium their bodies retain. He said "a tremendous amount needs doing in the labratory before final answers can be obtained upon strontium's effect.

"Many answers will not be forthcoming for many years and some, never," he said.

Rorex Appointment

Appointment of George M. Rorex as a member of the Ouachita parish school board to fill the unexpired term of the late W. B. Inabnet is a step that should receive general commendation. He is expected to prove a worthy successor and to bring to the board additional honor and respect.

Active in numerous civic affairs, Mr. Rorex is well qualified to assume the responsibilties he will face. He will represent ward 10 for the remainder of the late Mr. Inabnet's term, which will expire in December, 1960.

Mr. Rorex is a bank director and an official of the Cancer Society, Salvation Army, Ouachita Parish Red Cross unit, vice-president and director of the Y.M.C.A., chairman of the parking-traffic committee of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce and a director of the Lotus club.

An indication of the sound policies Mr. Rorex wil pursue is to be found in his statement in which he said, "I hope I can bring to this board the same sound judgment as demonstrated by Mr. Inabnet."

School Board President Charles G. Wall summed up the situation well when he said:

"We are honored to have such a high-type man as Mr. Rorex to serve on our board. I am sure he will be an asset to the board and we are looking forward to working with him."

Russia Never Ally

One of the strange things about World War II was that, although Russia fought on the side of the Western allies, it was never actually an ally of those nations. They fought on the same side but even then Russia was nurturing its dreams of world conquest and it never lost sight of its hope that it would eventually swallow up those nations fighting alongside it.

This situation generally was realized by the people of the United States, although the American officials at first apparently were ignorant of it, disregarded it or were sympathetic to the Russia views and aspirations. Even then there were many ordinary American citizens who considered Russia a greater threat to the United States than was Germany. Their views on that have never changed.

Fourteen years ago Germany lay prostrate. The war was over and German Dictator Adolf Hitler was dead at his own hands. Russian and American officials met over the ruins of the late enemy and embraced, but the Russian officials scarcely bothered to sheath their knives. That honeymoon, in which only the officials of the nations (not the people) participated, lasted no longer than the space of a breath.

Fourteen years later the nations which fought on the same side but which were never allies are still fighting over the division of the spoils. In this fight to prevent total Russian acquisition of Germany, the United States and the other Western allies are handicapped by the ridiculous and unfortunate agreements compounded in the Yalta conference.

East and West are meeting now in a foreign ministers' conference in Geneva, each side trying to force the other to give up part of the spoils it seized.

Each side of the cold war now counts part of Germany as its own ally. Though the leaders of the grand alliance of World War II 14 years ago solemnly pledged that Germans never again should bear arms or be permitted more worldly goods than was necessary for bare existence, it was a hollow agreement and everyone knew it then and knows it now. As businessmen are notoriously poor witnesses before congressional investigating committees, this put some of those handling huge government contracts in a bad light, including one head of a mid-western steel company whom Senator Truman intimated strongly, might be guilty of "treason."

* * *

He was however, a man of decision in a period when more world policy was decided than before or since, and much of present U. S. foreign policy is based on those decisions. Under the world circumstances then prevailing, a strong opinion still exists in many quarters that the condoning of Red infiltration of China which resulted in complete Communist control there, and which came while General George Marshall, as a special ambassador to China and later as secretary of state directing foreign policy and the attitude toward Korea which encouraged the Communist Chinese to attack there were the result of Truman decisions. But there are numerous other Truman performances which taken together with his personality, have maintained his popularity at a high level.

Due to personal scandals in his administration it is doubted whether he could have been reelected in 1952 and by delaying his decision, he left his own party in a state of confusion about picking a presidential nominee.

To The Editor:

I would like to express my appreciation to you for buying my pig at the Northeast District Junior Livestock Show.

Without the help of fine people like you it would be impossible for 4-H Club members to carry on their projects.

I plan to use this money to pay the expenses on projects in the future and to finish my education.

Once again, I wish to express my appreciation to you for your support.

Dear Editor:

With reference to your editorial of May 1, regarding the legislative program of the PTA, I wish to thank the writer of that editorial. This was an excellent, correct and thorough explanation of the PTA's stand on appointive Superintendent of Education. After reading this summation one can readily see the merits of the appointive system.

Also, we consider our leginlation on health to be important and wheels have already been set in motion in local units for health surveys and continuous health records of the child. This is only the first step toward complete immunization, (where practical) against polio, smallpox, diptheria, whooping cough and tetanus.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Aubrey Wallace

LONG QUESTIONED

An open letter to the Governor

The Hon. Earl K. Long

Dear Mr. Long:

It is now apparent that you are sincere in your threat to resign from office and run for re-election. This really doesn't come as much of a surprise to some of us: we would expect something like that from you, Governor.

Since your resignation is the topic of discussion around the state these days, I would like to say a few things to you about it. There are some people in this fine state, Mr. Long, who believe in Constitutional Government, even though you apparently don't, except when it is in line with your desires. Just how do you feel about our state constitution, Mr. Long? Do you consider it the foundation of our government, to be followed completely; or are your feelings toward it similar to those expressed by a German diplomat in 1914 about the German treaty with Belgium — only a "scrap of paper."

Now I won't dispute the fact that our constitution needs "overhauling" - no sir; not for one minute will I argue this point. But I will say that it is disgraceful when a citizen of this state - especially the Governor - takes this document, no matter how lengthy and out of date it might be, and makes a mockery of it. Some of your other actions, have been deplorable enough, Governor. But if you go through with this, it will leave no doubt in many of our minds what you stand for — selfish personal gain at any expense.

If you do run and if you should be re - elected, you may be certain that this unorthydox re-election was gained without my vote. I feel, Mr. Long, that I reflect not only my own feelings but also those of many other citizens who desire GOOD government in the State of Louisiana.

Georgia Marches On Industrially

ATLANTA, Georgia — "Markets, manpower and material," the speaker said, were the ingredients of industrial success. He was speaking at the ground - breaking ceremonies of the Southeastern Merchandise Mart, a $20 million free enterprise investment in the aforesaid formula. "If we're going to manufacture in the South, we're going to sell in the South," another speaker asserted. The people from the farms and forests, the workers in the increasing Southern factories, the salesmen who go forth each week from scores of small Southern towns, all had a stake in this big, important attempt at what should be called regional self-sufficiency.

All over the USA people are suffering from lack of the self-sufficiency drive which is illustrated here in Atlanta. The pockets of unemployment which make up most of the workless misery would disappear if the inhabitants of those places could learn from Georgia. The Atlanta plan is to challenge such cities as Dallas, which is the marketing center of the booming Southwest, San Francisco which does the dealing in the Pacific Northwest, Chicago and New York City which are other places where the big buyers go to bid for the manufactured household goods — apparel, appliances, toys and the like.

* * *

Governor Ernest Vandiver, the handsome husband of Georgia Senator Dick Russell's niece, told the gathering which included a press party from Washington, as well as trade officials from Great Britain and Spain, that, "We are getting along well in Georgia (where) progress is our business." The Governor's optimism seemed in admirable contrast to much of the blubbering self-pity which States' spokesmen bring to Washington. The Southeastern Merchandise Mart, all built with venture capital, is the needed substitute for such defeatist monstrosities as the Area Redevelopment bill, which passed the Senate with nearly half a billion dollars of Federal funds potentially earmarked for distribution.

Gov. Vandiver is laboring under a load of misfortunes left behind by his predecessor. The new man has been trying since January to bring business practices into State government, and has been conspicuously happy in raiding the Trust Company of Georgia to get one of the vice presidents, William Bowdoin, Jr., to be the State's chief purchasing agent. Mr. Bowdoin told this reporter that for the first time in Georgia history, vendors of goods bought with public money are required to give their bank references and to have their partnerships and corporations examined for probity and good community standing.

* * *

Results since January have been astonishing. The State has made a 50 per cent saving on cloth purchased for use at the penitentiary, lowered the price of trousers from $6.95 to $5.05 for the Fish and Wild Life Commission's personnel, saved three cents a gallon on bulk purchases of fuel, and in similar ratios lowered the cost of State - purchased asphalt, creosote, paint and automobile tires.

These facts are given in some detail because they relate to the cost of government in all the States which are seeking new revenue. It seems likely that any Governor with the will to do so could find businessmen able to make savings that would cause States' revenue to go further and States' independence to last much longer.

Mr. Bowdoin, who had another brief span of service under Governor Herman Talmadge, seems to be stepping warily around the ideological booby traps which many businessmen have brought to Washington, notably in the Eisenhower Administrations. Former Defense Secretary Charles Wilson has the misfortune to be the Number One example of how a tycoon can do quite badly as a bureaucrat. Wilson, who came from the automobile industry which became rich without advancing much in 50 years, had a blind spot for new ideas that related to space flight and trips to the moon. But he was not alone. Plenty of others, in Congress and in the executive departments, have thought they were doing fine with schemes to store up foods, fabrics, metals, water, fuels, military paper work and highways.

But Mr. Bowdoin gave his interviewer the impression of having already learned that the chief duty of a government officer is, conversely and negatively, to save as much money as he can. Government is not the investment business, and is not conducted for the purpose of storing up investories. The public has a friend in the bureaucrat who will reverse, even on a modest scale, the Harry Hopkins law of spend-to-elect.

Cancer Expert Favors Research On Radioactivity

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A cancer expert said Saturday a "remendous amount" of research is needed to determine the actual effect of radioactive strontium 90 upon human beings.

Dr. Robert J. Hasterlik, associate director of the Argonne Cancer Research Hospital, Chicago said many scientists feel it has not been "decisively proved" that strontium causes bone cancer and leukemia (blood cancer).

He told a radiation symposium at the U. S. Naval Medical Center that there has not been a single case of bone tumor or leukemia directly traceable to strontium.

He said estimates of the number of cases that could be caused by strontium in nuclear fallout have been based upon "extrapolation" of data on radium's effect upon the body.

Hasterlik said people vary considerably in the amount of strontium their bodies retain. He said "a tremendous amount needs doing in the labratory before final answers can be obtained upon strontium's effect.

"Many answers will not be forthcoming for many years and some, never," he said.

DECISION TO COME LATER

Congress Acting Slowly On Financing Education

By LOUIS CASSELS

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Congress is moving slowly toward a choice among three fundamentally different views of the federal government's role in financing the mounting costs of education.

A decision probably will be put off until late in the season. It could be—many observers think it will be—a decision by default.

As background for future news dispatches reporting congressional developments on this issue, here is a thumbnail summary of the three alternatives which confront the lawmakers:

Alternatives Listed

1. Accept a permanent federal responsibility to help underwrite the budgets of public schools all over the nation. This view is embodied in the so-called Murray-Metcalf Bill, which provides for annual federal grants to the states on the basis of $25 per school-age child.

2. Accept a temporary federal responsibility to help overcome the classroom shortage in "needy" school districts. This view is embodied in the administration bill, which provides for federal grants to cover up to 50 per cent of the cost of amortizing long - term bonds issued by school districts to finance new buildings which they could not otherwise afford.

3. Deny any federal responsibility for financing public schools, and leave it up to state and local governments to work out the problem with their own tax powers. This view calls for sidetracking or defeating both of the pending federal aid proposals. It could triumph if Congress failed to vote on any education bill, which would be the decision by default mentioned above.

Each of the three viewpoints has articulate supporters, in and out of Congress.

Advocates of inaction argue that the federal budget is big enough already without adding another billion or two for education. They say that many states and communities have inadequate schools because they have been unwilling to raise their own taxes, and that it would be unfair to bail them out with federal money raised in part from areas that are taxing themselves heavily to provide good schools.

They also contend that federal aid would inevitably be followed, sooner or later, by federal control. And they say it would be an historic mistake to intrude federal power into one of the few governmental functions which is still decentralized.

Directly opposing arguments are put forward by those who think the time has come for the federal government to assume a major, continuing responsibility for providing decent schools for all American children.

They contnd that ducation serves national interests—increasing economic productivity and keeping the United States abreast of Russia in the technological race for survival. Therefore, they say, it is right and necessary for the national government to bear part of the costs of education.

Alternative number 2—the administration proposal to underwrite bonds for classroom construction—is essentially an attempt to strike a compromise between the other two views.

Its supportrs hold that the controversial issues of permanent federal responsibility and possible control can be sidestepped by sticking to a temporary, short-term program of classroom construction.

Those are the alternatives. The choice is up to Congress.

Archeologists Find Ancient Syria City

By FAROUK NASSAR

DAMASCUS (AP)— An ancient city discovered by Danish archeologists beneath a teeming Syrian village may have much to tell about how man lived 3,200 years ago.

It's the Syrian coast city of Paltos, where Phoenician and Greek met at the crossroads of ancient civilization. Today it lies buried under the inhabited village of Arab el Mulk, seven miles south of Jeble on the Mediterranean coast.

An eight-man Danish archeological expedition sponsored by the Carlsberg Foundation and led by Prof. Paul J. Riis of Copenhagen University, found and identified the city after three months of tentative excavation. The team plans a complete unearthing of Paltos and its harbor next fall.

What they learn from the ruins of the buried city is expected to cast light on a 700-year period—from 1200 to 500 B.C. It was in this era that interaction between the Phoenician and Greek civilization reached its zenith.

Hisham Safady, chief of excavations in the Syrian Department of Antiquities, says the city's name was mentioned as Usnu in Assyrian texts during Shalmaneser II's invasion of the Phoenician coast in 854 B.C. Later a Greek colony established itself in the city, probably giving it its Greek name, Paltos.

Prof. Riis believes Paltos is the city buried under the Syrian village and that Usnu was its harbor town situated some four miles to the north of a hill now called Tal Soukas. The hill, rising 30 yards above sea level, commands two Mediterranean bays.

Safady says the Danes have begun a careful search to verify a historic legend that Memnon, a famed Trojan war hero, was entombed somewhere in the vicinity of the newly located town. Memnon, king of the Ethiopians, was slain in battle by Achilles, Greece's greatest warrior.

The tentative excavations of Paltos, Safady says, determined that its oldest inhabited layer dated back to the late bronze age, between 1400-1200 B.C.

The expedition then moved to dig in Tal Soukas. Preliminary excavations uncovered the remains of crusader fortifications which were later used by Moslem Arabs. This layer was the latest trace of life in the hill.

The second uncovered layer belonged to the Hellenistic age. Here the expedition found a small treasure of silver coins issued by Alexander the Great and his successors in the third and fourth centuries B.C.

After that came the layer of Greek civilization that prospered from the eighth to the fourth centuries B.C. The features of this layer do not appear clearly because the crusaders used most of its remains to build their own fortifications. But Safady says the expedition dug out many imported Greek earthenwares and potsherds, in addition to Phoenician relics.

These artifacts, Safady says, will help determine the history of the Greek colony that lived in Tal Soukas.

In other excavated positions at the hill the expedition found two layers dating back to the late and middle Bronze Age. In the first, a piece of an Egyptian scarab of about 1400 B.C. and bearing the name of Amenophis III was unearthed. He reigned when Egypt's empire was at its height. The second layer varies from the middle to the end of the early Bronze Age, between 1600-2200 B.C.

Attorney Hopes To Delay Trial In Assault Case

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — An attorney representing one of four white youths charged with the mass rape of a Negro college coed said Saturday he will seek a delay in the trial.

Circuit Judge W. May Walker Friday set May 27 for the jury trial of all four defendants.

But attorney S. Gunter Toney, retained by the wife of defendant Willon T. Collinsworth for her husband, said a delay is needed "to let things settle down." He said the "climate of passion and public excitement is too high to insure a fair trail" in Tallahassee now.

Collinsworth, 24-year-old father of two children, is the only married man in the group, and the only one with a hired attorney. The court appointed attorneys for Patrick Scarborough, 20, David E. Beagles, 18, and Ollie Stoutamire, 16.

Toney said he has not decided if he will seek a transfer of the trial away from Tallahassee, but indicated he probably would not.

Nor has he decided if he will seek bond and a separate trial for Collinsworth.

"That is under study," he said.

The youths entered formal pleas of innocent Friday, and were returned to county jail where they have been since their arrest shortly after the girl was raped May 2.

A deputy found the rape victim bound and gagged on the floor of the defendants' car.

Sheriff W. P. Joyce said the youths confessed taking turns raping her.

23 Persons Get Medals For Bravery

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—A Connecticut schoolgirl who pulled a man from a burning truck and a Minnesota clergyman who saved a child from being slain by her crazed father were among 23 persons cited for bravery Thursday by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

Bronze medals were presented in all 23 cases, four of them posthumously. The ages of the heroes ranged from 11 to 66 years. Those cited came from 16 states and Ontario, Canada.

Alida E. Pettit, 15, Stratford, Conn., saw Herman C. Simmons, 36, trapped in a burning truck near her home on Dec. 27, 1958. Simmons' garbage truck had veered out of control, overturned on a highway and then burst into flames.

His clothing afire, Simmons attempted to crawl through an open window of the truck, but retreated from the flames and began screaming for help.

Alida ran to the truck and pleaded with the trapped man to climb part way through the window as flames shot several feet into the air.

Simmons managed to push through the window, but collapsed across the hood of the truck. He was pulled from the vehicle by the girl. However, Simmons suffered burns over 65 per cent of his body and died four days later. Alida was not injured.

Ernest Haddad, a 31-year - old clergyman from Round Lake, Minn., crawled on his hands and knees in zero weather on Dec. 12, 1957 and risked being shot to save a 3-year-old girl whose father had already slain her sister.

The town's only police officer was ill and Haddad ran to the home only to be forced back by the crazed father, who had threatened his wife and two small daughters. Haddad left to telephone police in an adjoining town and later returned to the house.

The father threw his 14-month-old daughter and the 3-year-old onto a lawn. Both girls had been stabbed by the father during a fit of violence.

Seeing the 3-year-old was still breathing, Haddad crept on his hands and knees and risked being shot by the father. Haddad seized the older child and ran to the rear of the home. Sheriff's deputies apprehended the father, who was waving a crowbar, and removed the younger girl who was dead. The 3-year-old recovered after being hospitalized for eight days.

Earthquake Felt On West Coast

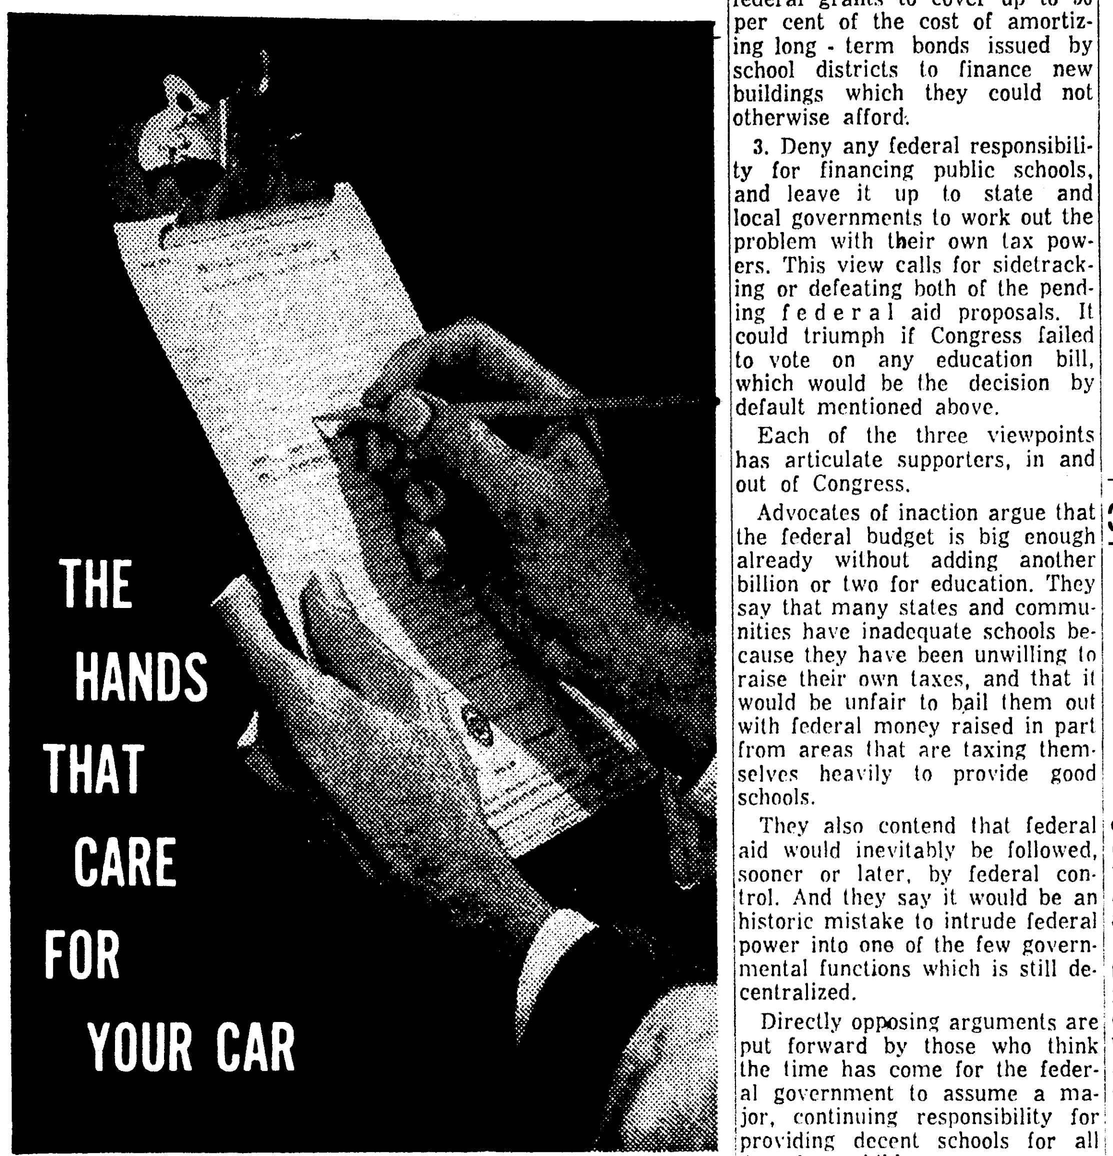
earthquake was felt in San Francisco Saturday but apparently caused no damage. The police department received a score of telephone calls from widespread sections of the city.

The seismograph at the University of California in Berkeley recorded the quake at 10:26:08 a.m. PDT.



The other day we asked a friend why he always brings his car in to Ryan Chevrolet for service. "Shorty Hindman, your Service Manager," he answered promptly. "Shorty takes care of my car as if it were his own." And that, we think, is the secret of Shorty's popularity here in Monroe.

Shorty Hindman has been with us for years now. And every year he collects a flock of new friends—motorists who appreciate his department's speed, accuracy and reasonable prices. Why not take advantage of Shorty's training and experience next time your car needs servicing? You'll be in good company!

Shorty Hindman, your Service Manager of Ryan Chevrolet for years, is a member of the Baptist Church, family man with 1 child and makes his home at 303 Isobel.

But attorney S. Gunter Toney, retained by the wife of defendant Willon T. Collinsworth for her husband, said a delay is needed "to let things settle down." He said the "climate of passion and public excitement is too high to insure a fair trail" in Tallahassee now.

Collinsworth, 24-year-old father of two children, is the only married man in the group, and the only one with a hired attorney. The court appointed attorneys for Patrick Scarborough, 20, David E. Beagles, 18, and Ollie Stoutamire, 16.

Toney said he has not decided if he will seek a transfer of the trial away from Tallahassee, but indicated he probably would not.

Nor has he decided if he will seek bond and a separate trial for Collinsworth.

"That is under study," he said.

The youths entered formal pleas of innocent Friday, and were returned to county jail where they have been since their arrest shortly after the girl was raped May 2.

A deputy found the rape victim bound and gagged on the floor o' the defendants' car.

Sheriff W. P. Joyce said the youths confessed taking turns raping her.

23 Persons Get Medals For Bravery

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—A Connecticut schoolgirl who pulled a man from a burning truck and a Minnesota clergyman who saved a child from being slain by her crazed father were among 23 persons cited for bravery Thursday by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

Bronze medals were presented in all 23 cases, four of them posthumously. The ages of the heroes ranged from 11 to 66 years. Those cited came from 16 states and Ontario, Canada.

Alida E. Pettit, 15, Stratford, Conn., saw Herman C. Simmons, 36, trapped in a burning truck near her home on Dec. 27, 1958. Simmons' garbage truck had veered out of control, overturned on a highway and then burst into flames.

His clothing afire, Simmons attempted to crawl through an open window of the truck, but retreated from the flames and began screaming for help.

Alida ran to the truck and pleaded with the trapped man to climb part way through the window as flames shot several feet into the air.

Simmons managed to push through the window, but collapsed across the hood of the truck. He was pulled from the vehicle by the girl. However, Simmons suffered burns over 65 per cent of his body and died four days later. Alida was not injured.

Ernest Haddad, a 31-year-old clergyman from Round Lake, Minn., crawled on his hands and knees in zero weather on Dec. 12, 1957 and risked being shot to save a 3-year-old girl whose father had already slain her sister.

The town's only police officer was ill and Haddad ran to the home only to be forced back by the crazed father, who had threatened his wife and two small daughters. Haddad left to telephone police in an adjoining town and later returned to the house.

The father threw his 14-month-old daughter and the 3-year-old onto a lawn. Both girls had been stabbed by the father during a fit of violence.

Seeing the 3-year-old was still breathing, Haddad crept on his hands and knees and risked being shot by the father. Haddad seized the older child and ran to the rear of the home. Sheriff's deputies apprehended the father, who was waving a crowbar, and removed the younger girl who was dead. The 3-year-old recovered after being hospitalized for eight days.

Earthquake Felt On West Coast

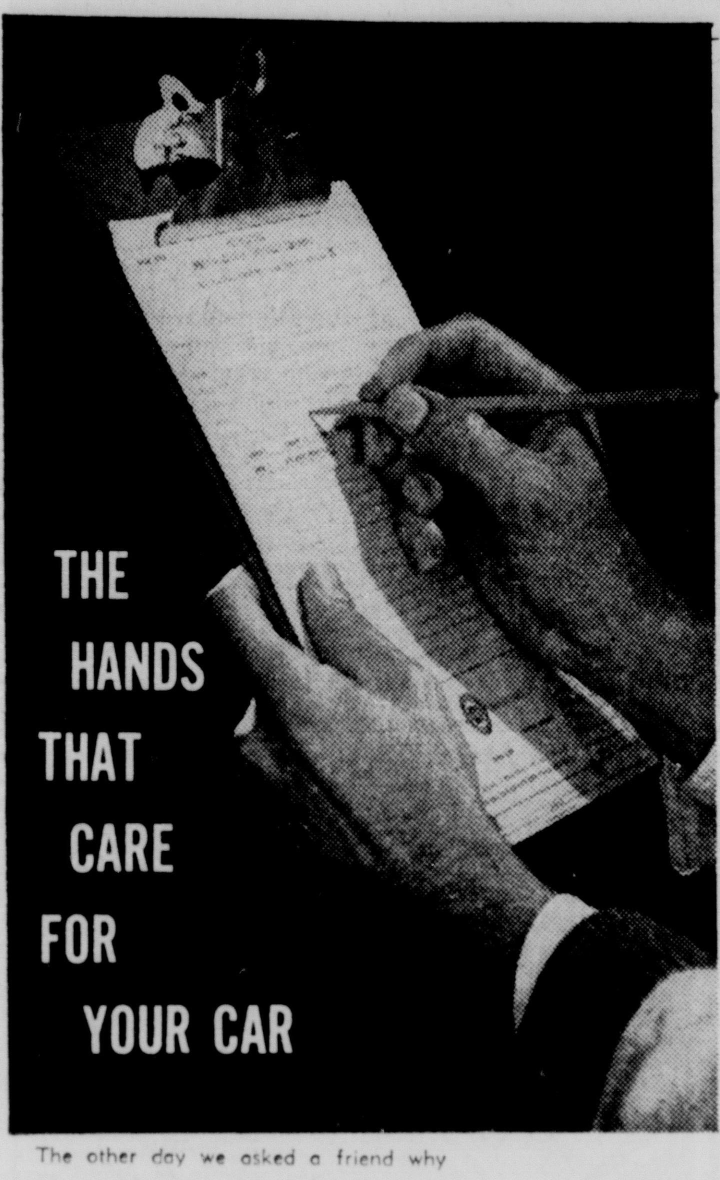
earthquake was felt in San Francisco Saturday but apparently caused no damage. The police department received a score of telephone calls from widespread sections of the city.

The seismograph at the University of California in Berkeley recorded the quake at 10:26:08 a.m. PDT.



The other day we asked a friend why he always brings his car in to Ryan Chevrolet for service. "Shorty Hindman, your Service Manager," he answered promptly. "Shorty takes care of my car as if it were his own." And that, we think, is the secret of Shorty's popularity here in Monroe.

Shorty Hindman has been with us for years now. And every year he collects a flock of new friends—motorists who appreciate his department's speed, accuracy and reasonable prices. Why not take advantage of Shorty's training and experience next time your car needs servicing? You'll be in good company!

Shorty Hindman, your Service Manager of Ryan Chevrolet for years, is a member of the Baptist Church, family man with 1 child and makes his home at 303 Isabel.

Politics, Long Style

Gov. Earl K. Long is looking to the future as he hands a quarter to one of numerous youngsters who received his shiny gifts at the Ruston Diamond Jubilee. # Long To Resign By Late Summer four years from now," he stated.

Rep. J. Marshall Brown of New Orleans and Atty. Gen. P. F. Jack Gremillion spoke briefly prior to Long's arrival.

Long said he didn't know how many bills he will introduce (administration sources say 15) in the fiscal session, but rapidly explained "three or four" in "Long-ese" like this:

DESCRIPTION

"I'm going to have a bill in there to change up the registration law to help the women. I'll have an illegimate bill to stop payments on the second baby. I'm going to raise the conservation director's salary and extend the filing date for elections by two weeks."

The governor added, "It's not but about six months until the election and nobody knows it. I'll set the filing date back to September 19 and resign a few days ahead."

Then he called Sec. of State Wade O. Martin Jr. a "silly little thing that used to be a Long" and said Plaquemine parish political boss Leander Perez was the "sorriest thing that ever lived."

But John J. McKeithen, Public Service Commission chairman, was "all right," Long said as he modeled a "hundred dollar" hat given him by Congressman Otto E. Passman.

"I'm not mad at anybody," the governor said, "but Leander Perez, the King of the south-of-the border and double-first cousin to PAR is getting closer and closer to hell. It's getting hotter and hotter for him and I hope it gets him. He's got an override on everything."

On other legislative matters, Long said he would authorize a 12½ per cent pay raise for the teachers and allocate $900,000 for Northeast State College and Louisiana Tech.

PLEDGED

In brief talks prior to the governor's arrival, Brown, a New Orleans gubernatorial candidate, pledged a no-tax platform and said Louisiana has two governments:

1. A government of Civil Service. 2. A government of boards loaded with deadheads.

Long touched on deadheads too. Vowing he wouldn't use his office to seek re-election, the governor said, "The best race I ever run was when I didn't have not one deadhead job to offer. When you got one deadhead you got a thousand."

Gremillion, seeking, re-election, said his initials stood for "poor folks" and the "people's friend." He pointed to his fights for segregation and the tidelands as basic platform planks.

Although on political outs, Gremillion and the governor exchanged cordial words when Long arrived. He asked Gremillion, "Who spoke ahead of?" Gremillion answered, "I did and Brown did."

Gremillion told Long that Brown spoke for 10 minutes. "I'm going to speak for 20, " Long answered as the crowd roared.

Long lost himself in the crowd when arriving, calling out first names, shaking hands and passing quarters to children. The Governor tugged at his trousers bound by galluses as he spoke.

"I've been governor four years this time and four years last time and a year before that," he said. "That's almost nine years, but it's not going to be that way. It's going to be seven months less than nine years, because I'm going to resign and run again."

"The constitution says a governor can't be his immediate successor so how can I be my immediate successor when I resign," Long shouted. "What's to keep Ole Earl from running again?"

QUIPPED

The mike went dead. "Tune her up a little," quipped the governor as his audience broke into laughter again.

Waving a Times-Picayune in the air, Long said, "The Times-Picayune talks about all that gambling around New Orleans. They're not doing anything down there but shottin' a little craps."

He pointed a finger to the sky and screamed, "And they'll be gambling in New Orleans when you and I are up there with St. Peter, I hope."

Again the mike went dead. Long blew into it and said, "I don't know whose outfit this is. I use to have one just like it."

Returning to the Times-Picayune, Long read the racing results and said the paper recommended horses to bet on.

"My friend little Wade said I like to do two things—run for governor and go to the races," the governor said. "My wife said he's right, but I like to race billygoats, too, and raise peas and potlikkor."

Later Long said he enjoyed the Kentucky Derby. "I won," he explained "But don't tell my wife or she'll want my winnings."

Touching on the state's financial status, Long described $59 million recently received in oil revenues as making Louisiana "sorta sawmill Saturday night rich."

TICKET

Long gave his ticket as follows:

Auditor, C. J. Dugas, Donaldsonville; Treasurer, A. P. Tugwell, Supervisor of Public Funds, J. B. Lancaster, Commissioner of Agriculture, Sidney J. McCrory.

He added, "And for superintendent of education, Shelby M. Jackson, if he behaves himself."

Long said he was still trying to get Highway Director R. B. Richardson to run for lieutenant governor. But he added, "Bob Richardson wanted to run for governor; now he don't want to run for anything."

Sen. B. B. Raburn, the Senate Leader, will be Long's choice for secretary of state if Raburn wants it.

If elected, Long said he would take care of Lt. Gov. Lether Frazar, who might become assistant president at LSU, according to the governor.

Long said Former Gov. Jimmy Davis would be his main opponent unless New Orleans Mayor Chep Morrison gets in the race.

He gave the outcome like this: Long, Davis, Morrison, Sen. W.M. Rainach, Comptroller Bill Dodd, Brown, Rep. Claude Kirkpatrick.

Long added, "I hear that colored fellow, Parker is running again. He'll beat two or three of them."

On the local scene, the governor tipped his hat to Rep. T. T. Fields and Sen. B. R. Patton, both of Farmerville, and passed out a kind remark to Rep. L. D. Napper, Ruston's "34 Club member."

"You have one of the most intelligent representativse in the state. All you need to do is go get old Napper to loosen up a bit. Then he wouldn't be a member of the 34 Club but a member of the Earl Long club."

About 15 mayors were special guests at the speaking. Other officials present included Rep. Wimpy Jones, Bossier, and Rep. F. S. Sutton, Gibsland.

Patton, Fields and Clarence Faulk, Ruston Daily-Leader publisher, introduced the speakers.

ing World several days ago that Clement was on the verge of resigning and that Menefee was in line for the job if he wanted it.

When asked to confirm the reports, Long said, "That's right. Clement is thinking about quitting. I want Pete Menefee to get the job."

At the same time, Long disclosed that about $5 - million from oil revenues on either Rockefeller Refuge or Marsh Island had been used for teachers' salaries.

Several months ago F. F. Wimberly, legislative chairman for the Louisiana Teachers Association, asked Long to use funds from oil taxes on Rockefellar Refuge, which are lawfully dedicated to the teachers.

When asked about Wimberly's idea, to take the Rockefeller funds, Long answered, "That's already been used. About $5 - million worth to pay the teachers."

But he added, "Either from Marsh Island or Rockefeller Refuge."

Asked if the Wild Life and Fisheries Commission objected, Long said, "They don't need it."

Rockefeller was dedicated to the state with the stipulation that funds from oil would be used primarily to develop the refuge, which is heavily laden with oil.

Larry Edmondson, a Miami, Okla., architect, said he sighted at least two twisters near Grove as he was driving away from the town.

The highway patrol said $50,000 damage was done by a twister which struck the H.V. Van Pelt ranch near Talala. Barns, trucks, corrals and cattle were destroyed but there were no reports of personal injuries.

Twelve persons had to make their way across Lake of the Cherokees to report damage caused by the twister which slammed into Camp Caraway. They said all roads leading into the camp were blocked by debris.

In the southeast, twisters churned through the edge of Fittstown and also tore up a barn and farmhouse near McAlester.

There also were reports of tornadoes in Missouri and Kansas.

One hit a rural area south of Goodman, in the southwestern corner of Missouri bordering Oklahoma, destroying a house. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

Gibbs said the entire cost of the new health center, laboratory, and administrative office would probably run about $250,000 if his bill went through.

The health unit is now housed in the old post office building in downtown Monroe which the city plans to convert into offices for the utilities commission when the new health center is completed.

New evidence of cancer in the abdominal area was first discovered on Feb. 13 when he underwent a hernia operation. He had undergone successful surgery for a similar cancer in 1956. This time, Dulles was given massive X-ray treatments and injectionn of radioactive gold.

At the end of March he flew to Florida for "rest and recuperation" but cut short his stay and re-entered Walter Reed on April 12. A malignancy was discovered in the neck area and he submitted his resignation three days later.

Radiation treatments for the neck malignancy were abandoned after four days when doctors reported they were not relieving the pain.

Negro Youth Shoots Two, Then Himself

OXFORD, Ohio (UPI) — A Miami (Ohio) University freshman Saturday shot and seriously wounded his rival for a coed's affections, killed another student who tried to block his escape, and then fatally wounded himself in a telephone booth in another college domitory.

Herbert A. Lucas, 18, Springfield, Ohio, a Negro, died in a hospital here at 2:05 p.m., nearly 13 hours after he wounded James Walker, 18, also a Negro, Cincinnati freshman, and killed T. Sayles, 20, Gary, Ind.

College authorities said Lucas apparently attempted to kill Walker in a jealous rage over his dating Sandra Epps, 18, a Negro freshman from Greenville, Ohio. The shooting of the two students occurred in Reid Hall, a men's dormitory.

Sayles, a student counsellor at Reid Hall, was killed when he sought to prevent Lucas from fleeing the building after he shot Walker.

The shootings cast a pall over the scheduled festive weekend of a Mother's Day program, a track meet and other activities in connection with the university's 150th anniversary celebration.

About 6,000 are enrolled at the school, including an estimated 150 Negroes.

Walker, the "other man" in the lovers' triangle, was shot through the upper part of the right shoulder. The bullet went through the back of his neck barely missing his spinal column. His condition was not considered serious.

Lucas, armed with two pistols and 250 rounds of ammunition stolen from a campus ROTC firing range, then went to a telephone booth and shot himself in the head. He was taken to a hospital where his condition was critical. Doctors said they did not plan immediate surgery to remove the bullet from his head.

Lucas was found slumped in a phone booth by Edward Imwalle, 22, a junior from Maria Stein, Ohio, when he opened the booth to make a telephone call. This was about seven hours after the shooting.

A posse of 30t o 40 officers and volunteers had searched the woods and fields in the vicinity of the state university for Lucas.

Mayor Says Georgia Not To Integrate

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—If a showdown comes, Georgia state officials will close public schools rather than integrate the races, Mayor William B. Hartsfield of Atlanta predicted Saturday.

Speaking over a special telephone circuit to a desegregation symposium at the University of Notre Dame Law School, Hartsfield said Georgia's "best elements have been largely silent, while the demagogues have been active for many years."

The southern mayor described himself as a moderate and said the U. S. Supreme Court's 1954 desegregation decision "must be recognized as an accomplished fact and the law of the land."

"The most important thing is not how fast we're moving in school desegregation, but in what direction," he said.

Mayor Hartsfield suggested creation of placement boards to examine capabilities of Negro children during a gradual procedure of school integration, because "any unwise, ill-considered mixing up of children, disregarding their capabilities, would cause harm."

Two southern clergymen at the symposium emphasized church responsibilities in desegregation. Bishop Vincent S. Waters, Raleigh, N. C., described interracial banquets and sports events arranged since he banned segregation in the churches of his diocese in 1953.

"Occasions must be created which improve racial relationships, each a further step in the right direction," Bishop Waters said. "Segregation is a morally wrong and sinful practice which may not be approved by any Catholic."

The Rev. J. J. Murray, former Moderator of the Virginia Presbyterian Synod, warned, "a seggregated church cannot speak with any sincerity or power about integration in education. The first duty of the churches is to refuse to assist in any effort to evade or delay the process of integration in our public schools.

"In this, as in all human relationships, it is not a battle which we are trying to win, but a fellowship which we are trying to achieve. Any success here that leaves bitterness is far less than the best," said Mr. Murray, who is now visiting professor at Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

Long To Push Bill For Martin Ouster

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Gov. Earl Long took a second look Saturday at his proposed move in the fiscal Legislature, which opens Monday, to oust Secretary of State Wade O. Martin Jr. from the state voting machine board.

"If he insists on remaining on the board and the Legislature wants him," Long said in an interview, "I'll go along."

Long already has drafted the controversial bill and he said he is going ahead with it, "but that doesn't mean I won't back up."

Martin has remained silent since Long first voiced his legislative threat in a news conference last Tuesday.

Long is running at full throttle for a fourth term as governor.

The governor's move, if he pushes hard, may touch off another uproar similar to the fireworks in the 1956 session when Long removed Martin as state voting machine custodian and state insurance commissioner.

But any nonfiscal legislation in the 30-day session convening at noon Monday must gain a three-fourths majority vote for introduction.

Long's bill also would continue the voting machine board in business next year, revising present law which would discontinue the board in 1960.

Martin and Long, top political antagonists since 1956, tore at each other again in recent months after Martin forced the resignation of Long's first state custodian, James M. Melemore, with critical blasts about administration handling of voting machines.

Long did suggest Martin ought to step off the board.

"It's hard," Long grumbled, "to make the public know all I know about Martin."

"I'm not a rule or ruin man," Long insisted. "I'll back up a thousand times, and if I find out I'm wrong, I'll back up again."

Sen. Robert A. Ainsworth Jr., New Orleans, an anti-administration leader, was asked for comment on the governor's proposals to push the voting machine board legislation and other bills shifting the Dec. 5 gubernatorial primary back to Dec. 19. Thin would also push back the qualification deadline for gubernatorial candidates from Sept. 15 to Sept. 29.

Ainsworth said, "there seems seems little chance of a hotly controversial nonfiscal bill receiving a three-fourths vote of the elected members in the House.

Under fiscal session rules, nonfiscal measures must have a three-fourths majority vote in each house for introduction. A screening committee, however, can decide whether bills are fiscal or nonfiscal.

Rep. Claude Kirkpatrick, Jefferson Davis Parish, another anti-administration voice, predicted "Gov. Long, who knows how hard it was to get a two-thirds majority for tax raises, will find even greater difficulty rounding up a three-fourths majority for controversial legislation. This session by law is restricted to fiscal matters."

While neither Ainsworth nor Kirkpatrick said so, any effort to bypass the three - fourth rule through the screening committee could lead to a posible court attack later.

Back in 1956 when Long rode atop his power in the Legislature, the Senate vote removing voting machines from Martin's custody was 26-8, the House vote 51-36—a bare majority in the House where 51 votes is the minimum for passage.

Should Long push ahead with the new ouster move, the Legislature is likely to see political shooting from the hip that would put a television western to shame.

Long, with a record - cracking 501-million operating budget to be introduced, oddly enough for years has opposed the fiscal Legislatures meeting in odd - numbered years.

This one will be the third, since the first bowed in under former Gov. Robert Kennon in 1955. Ainsworth was the chief sponsor.

Long, on the key issue of teachers pay, said he's sticking to half the 10-million pay raise his budget committee recommended. But he said will go along with the second half provided the Sept. 17 oil sales brings 30 million dollars.

The second half of the teacher pay boost is expected to be introduced as a separate item, based only on "money not otherwise appropriated," Long indicated.

Esso Consents To Bargaining Agent Election

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Esso Standard Oil Co. Saturday told the National Labor Relations Board it would consent to a bargaining agent election for 4,000 maintenance and production workers at its plant here.

The Independent Industrial Workers Assn. now represents the workers. A new contract agreed to overwhelmingly by the workers earlier in the week is being held in abeyance pending agreement on the election.

The Baton Rouge Metal Trades Council gained NLRB certification last week of a bargaining agent election after signing the required 30 per cent of the workers. The council is affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

The BRMTC is expected Monday to waive its rights under federal labor laws if the IIWA and Esso sign the work contract. But it is expected to insist on a package deal requiring immediate consent from both the IIWA and esso to an election.

Two other unions would vie to represent the production and maintenance workers. The Teamsters union and the United Mine Workers have indicated desire to organize and represent them.

The company and the IIWA both have agreed putting the new contract into effect should be delayed until the bargaining agent request is settled.

Seven American Veterans Visit Soviet Premier

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev Saturday received seven American veterans of the historic lineup of Soviet and U.S. forces at the Elbe River River in World War II.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Khrushchev "had a talk" with the Americans who came here for the annual V-E Day reunion with Soviet soldiers they met in the middle of Germany in 1945. The conversations were not disclosed.

The Americans were received later by Soviet First Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan.

The American delegation is headed by Joseph Polowsky, a Chicago bus-driver, who brought a gold-framed U. S. Army patrol map used in the lineup to give to Khrushchev.

Tractor-Trailer Hauling Butane Burns On Road

LUCEDALE, Miss. (UPI) — A tractor - trailer tank truck fully loaded with butane gas burned Saturday afternoon on Highway 26 about 12 miles southwest of here.

There were no injuries and the gas did not explode, officers said.

The driver of the truck, Raymond Eubanks of nearby Bexley community, told officers he leaped from the truck cab when he noticed smoke in the cab shortly after noon. He said he was driving toward Wiggins at the time.

Eubanks said the cab burst into flames as he escaped. He said the fire spread immediately to the tank on the trailer portion of the truck.

Highway Patrolmen and deputies halted all traffic on the highway until the fire burned out.

Cars waited in lines about one mile long in each direction.

Officers said no attempt was made to put the fire out because of the danger of an explosion.

The tanker was owned by United Butane Gas Co. of Mobile, Ala., officers said.

ON U.S. ECONOMY

Officials Issue Glowing Report

HOT SPRING, Va. (AP) — A glowing report on the economy—including word that unemployment dropped by some 500,000 last month—emerged Saturday from a conference of industrialists and government officials.

Business will keep expanding at least until mid-1960, the experts agreed, and by then will have hit a production rate close to half a trillion dollars a year.

An automobile industry leader predicted that Americans will buy between six million and 6,300,000 new cars this year, including 500,000 to 600,000 foreign models.

The forecasts were made at a closed meeting of the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council, made up of the heads of scores of the nation's biggest corporations, with Secretary of Commerce Lewis L. Strauss, White House economists, and other officials.

Strauss announced that the monthly job report to be issued Monday will show "a sharp further improvement." Unemployment declined and employment rose in April, both more than seasonally, officials reported.

Strauss gave no figure but reporters learned from other sources that unemployment is expected to dip b low 3,800,000. This is better than in any month since the onset of the recession in 1957 and is more than 1¼ million below the level a year ago.

The improvement was even more striking last month than in March, officials reported privately. In March, joblessness declined 387,000 to a total of 4,362,000.

Reporters are barred from sessions of the BAC but after Saturday's meeting Strauss and officers of the council gave newsmen a jubilant briefing.

Dr. Donald David chairman of the Ford Foundation and head of th Council's Economic Policy Committee, said that scores of economists retained by major corporations expect a "gradual steady, healthy rise, lasting certainly through the first half of the next year."

Total national production is estimated in this quarter at a record rate of 473 billion dollars annually and will rise to 485 billion in the final quarter of the year. David called this an average estimate of the economic consultants.

By the second quarter of 1960, he went on, the average estimat of the production rate is $499,300,000,000. Some of the economists, he added, believe the production rate—the gross national product, or value of all goods and services produced — will have topped the half-trillion dollar mark by this time next year.

Heart Attack Proves Fatal For Quarles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An autopsy Saturday showed that Deputy Defense Secretary Donald A. Quarles died of a heart attack.

A defense department announcement attributed death to an "obstructive coronary sclerosis... a narrowing of the blood vessels" which cut off the supply of blood to his heart.

The 64-year-old government official who was in line to become President Eisenhower's next defense secretary, was found dead at his home here early Friday. He will be buried Tuesday in Arlington National Cemetery after simple military services.

The loss of Quarles presented President Eisenhower with the task of finding a successor and may signal a shake-up of the top civilian command at the Pentagon.

Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy has said he wants to retire later this year but Quarles' death may delay this.

The job of deputy secretary carries with it authority almost equal to that of secretary.

Five names have figured in speculation on Quarles' successor. They are:

Assistant Defense Secretary W. J. McNeil who has been defense comptroller since 1947 when the armed services were unified.

Air Force Secretary James H. Douglas who took over that job when Quarles was promoted to deputy in 1957.

William C. Foster who was deputy secretary under former President Harry S. Truman and served as chairman of Eisenhower's special committee on foreign military aid.

Perkins McGuire, assistant defense secretary for supply.

Interior Secretary Fred A. Seaton who has had previous Pentagon experience.

McElroy said Quarles was "irreplaceable" and acknowledged he might have to reconsider his plans to resign. However, most Pentagon authorities feel that he will quit sooner or later.

Whoever is named to succeed Quarles will probably be groomed to take over as defense secretary should McElroy leave.

Heavy Rain Cuts Short Graham's Meet In Sydney

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Heavy rain Saturday night cut short the final evening meeting of Evangelist Billy Graham's month-long Sydney crusade and sent a crowd estimated at 17,000 running for cover.

Graham ended his address at the Sydney Showground 10 minutes early, put on an overcoat and invited people to come forward to make decisions for Christ.

"I believe the Lord sent this rain to make things difficult for people who want to make decisions," he said. "I ask you to come forward . . . in this heavy rain to show you mean business."

Eight hundred and fifteen people responded.

Trial Of Convict For Kidnaping Begins Monday

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Cove M. Bell, already serving life for the kidnap, rape and robbery of a Baton Rouge mother, goes on trial here Monday for kidnaping in the same case.

Bell was convicted in East Feliciana Parish in the case.

Judge Fred S. LeBlanc has rejected a plea of jurisdiction. The defense argued in the plea that the East Baton Rouge kidnap charges should not be brought to trial because it is part of the East Feliciana offense.

The prosecution argued the deadline for motions in the case had long since passed.

Ike Instructs Cabinet Against Censoring News

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House news secretary James C. Hagerty said Saturday President Eisenhower has explicitly instructed his cabinet members against imposing needless government censorship on news.

He said the orders which he also received were that "unless the matter under discussion is secret then it should be made public."

"I have tried religiously and scrupulously to observe these orders and I think cabinet officers have done the same thing," he said.

Hagerty was interviewed on a Mutual Broadcasting System program in a special "Salute to Radio Month" presentation.

TECH AMONG FEW

Only 8 Colleges Stick To 'Poly'

RUSTON (Special) —Although the name "Polytechnic Institute" is over a century old, only eight American colleges have retained this term as part of their title, according to information in Lovejoy's College Guide.

Louisiana Tech is the only one west of the Mississippi River.

Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of New York adopted its present name when the college was opened in 1850 and several schools followed suit only to alter their names later, until the list of "Polys" has dwindled finally to eight.

Louisiana Tech is the third largest "Polytechnic Institute" in the nation, according to unofficial tabulations, and its female enrollment is second highest.

Of the eight schools, Alabama Polytechnic (Auburn) is the largest, and Rose in Idniana has the smallest enrollment.

Bradley University, of Peoria, Ill., which in 1946 was the last college to leave the select list of "Polys" and Rocky Mountain College, formerly Billings Polytechnic Institute, Montana, until 1908, had raised the total to ten at tht turn of the 20th century.

At present there are no Polytechnic Institutes in the West, while the North and South claim four apiece.

Other schools with this title include Worcester (Mass.), Brooklyn, Tennessee, and Virginia.

ON U.S. ECONOMY

Officials Issue Glowing Report

HOT SPRING, Va. (AP) — A glowing report on the economy—including word that unemployment dropped by some 500,000 last month—emerged Saturday from a conference of industrialists and government officials.

Business will keep expanding at least until mid-1960, the experts agreed, and by then will have hit a production rate close to half a trillion dollars a year.

An automobile industry leader predicted that Americans will buy between six million and 6,300,000 new cars this year, including 500,000 to 600,000 foreign models.

The forecasts were made at a closed meeting of the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council, made up of the heads of scores of the nation's biggest corportations, with Secretary of Commerce Lewis L. Strauss, White House economists, and other officials.

Strauss announced that the monthly job report to be issued Monday will show "a sharp further improvement." Unemployment declined and employment rose in April, both more than seasonally, officials reported.

Strauss gave no figure but reporters learned from other sources that unemployment is expected to dip b low 3,800,000. This is better than in any month since the onset of the recession in 1957 and is more than 1¼ million below the level a year ago.

The improvement was even more striking last month than in March, officials reported privately. In March, joblessness declined 387,000 to a total of 4,362,000.

Reporters are barred from sessions of the BAC but after Saturday's meeting Strauss and officers of the council gave newsmen a jubilant briefing.

Dr. Donald David chairman of the Ford Foundation and head of th Council's Economic Policy Committee, said that scores of economists retained by major corporations expect a "gradual steady, healthy rise, lasting certainly through the first half of the next year."

Total national production is estimated in this quarter at a record rate of 473 billion dollars annually and will rise to 485 billion in the final quarter of the year. David called this an average estimate of the economic consultants.

By the second quarter of 1960, he went on, the average estimat of the production rate is $499,300,000,000. Some of the economists, he added, believe the production rate—the gross national product, or value of all goods and services produced — will have topped the half-trillion dollar mark by this time next year.

Heart Attack Proves Fatal For Quarles

EASTWARD FROM SEATTLE

Floating Bridge Is World's First

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—Riding on great, gray blocks of floating concrete, the world's first and largest permanent floating bridge stretches eastward from Seattle.

It hugs the gently lapping waters of Lake Washington and points a blunt finger at the snow-tipped Cascade Mountains to the east.

Except for one just half its size in the remote island of Tasmania, the Lake Washington bridge is the only one of its kind in the world.

But soon, Seattle will be up to its ears in floating bridges.

Burgeoning population in Seattle, across the lake and across the turbulent salt waters of Puget Sound, has created a need for two and possibly three more bridges.

In the Seattle area, bridges mean floating bridges because of the need for superhighways across long stretches of deep water and at a cost which the state can afford.

BARGAIN

The present lake bridge cost $8,850,000, probably the best bargain the State of Washington has ever made.

A second Lake Washington floating bridge has been approved by the State Legislature. This, 3.8 miles to the north of the present span, will be almost a companion piece. The floating portion will cost something like 12 million dollars—A goodly sum but less expensive than, say, a truss bridge, or a suspension bridge. When completed, its 7,518 feet on pontoons will make it the longest.

Tin-hatted construction workers have almost completed one phase of another bridge which floats — a $14,226,000, two-lane highway to span Hood Canal, on the Olympic Peninsula west of Seattle, a rambunctious, wind-swept arm of water which cuts down south and west from the stormy Strait of Juan de Fuca.

CANAL

(It is called a "canal" because this long arm of salt water is narrow and regular in its more than a mile width throughout its 50 or more miles of length. It is in no sense a man-made canal.)

The Hood Canal span is an ambitious bit of engineering daring. Its roadway will rest high on concrete stilts. The stilts will rest on floating concrete pontoons.

Why this Seattle bent for floating bridges?

Engineers planning the present lake bridge were faced with the problem of spanning something like a mile and a half of water, as deep as 210 feet in many places. Before 1940, bridge builders didn't believe a floating span could be built for more than 1,000 feet. For long hauls, you took the ferry.

ON EVE OF BIG FOUR MEET

Experts Provides Glimpse On Thinkng Of Russians

(EDITOR'S NOTE: On the eve of the Big Four foreign ministers' meeting starting in Geneva Monday former French Premier Jules Moch presents in this dispatch a rare behind-the-scenes glimpse of Soviet thinking, based on years of negotiating with the Russians. He is his country's representative on disarmament. Moch is not too hopeful of any great accomplishment at the East-West conference, but feels there is some room for a meeting of minds.)

By JULES MOCH
Former Premier of France
(Written For UPI)

PARIS (UPI)—As the representative of France for the past seven years in disarmament negotiations, I have known six successive Soviet chiefs of delegation, ministers or vice-ministers of foreign affairs.

There have been two completely separate phases in this long period. Until Stalin's death, there was no human contact, no get-together outside the official sessions. Nothing but the constant repetition of the same attacks (Particularly concerning the dropping of poisoned candy and disease-bearing insects on China), the same arguments tediously reiterated despite repeated refutaitons.

In short, there was no possibility of agreement nor even of mutual understanding.

Later, there was a brusque change. The Soviets accepted personal contacts and invitations to the residences of Western negotiators.

At first the Russians came by twos—one to keep watch on the other?

This was a short-lived custom. Since 1955, they can be met alone or in twos and threes. The men and women have shown themselves cultivated, thoroughly acquainted with controversial subjects and others far removed: Marxism-Leninism, which is not surprising, but also French literature and art.

They want to be charming.

They also have profound gaps in understanding, committing astonishing blunders. "The Americans are detested in your country," one of them told me, citing the example of a town where he had read a chalked inscription saying "U. S. go home!"

I replied, "you have certainly picked a good one. I know that city which with 23,000 inhabitants, has a cell of 50 Communists, of whom five younger ones spend their nights scrawling on walls. If you believe they reflect the general opinion, you are deceiving yourself and you are leading your government into error."

I was explaining to another the instability of the governments of the Fourth Republic through the converting of the Communist votes with those of the opposition, alternatipely left or right.

"If they are hampering you so much," he replied with apparent sincerity, "why don't you arrest them and dissolve their party?"

Did he think he was in the U.S.S.R.?

At present, the Soviet chiefs of delegation willingly confide their concerns with a frankness that does not seem feigned. Here are some of their declarations. I guarantee their authenticity, without naming their authors, for obvious reasons.

On Berlin: "It is a hotbed of incidents. We want to be done with it. Let us both withdraw, as far as you like. You accuse us of delivering an ultimatum, because you do not understand us. When Krhruschev spoke of settling the problem in six months, it was not to threaten you, but simply to emphasize the urgency of the matter. It matters little to us if it requires a few more months."

On German unification: "Why proclaim your desire for unity? It can hardly be sincere; Germany has done you too much harm."

On American industrialists: "The businessmen are not as wicked as is said. I have talked with big producers of rockets. It is false that they fear disarmament will hurt their businesses. They would prefer to produce large series of commercial jet airplanes, rather than weapons which are never mass - produced because they are obsolete before they have been perfected."

On peace: "We have so much work to accomplish in seven years — more than ever before—that we have an overriding need of peace. Also, we want disarmament. You say it is necessary to re-establish confidence. But we propose all sorts of pacts to you which you reject, and you suggest inspectin which would amount to espionage. Confidence can not be re-established in the present atmosphere of distrust."

The Russians sincerely want to end the cold war, I believe, but they do not understand us any more than we understand them. This mutual understanding is the first step which must be accomplished on the road to peace.

EASTWARD FROM SEATTLE

Floating Bridge Is World's First

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—Riding on great, gray blocks of floating concrete, the world's first and largest permanent floating bridge stretches eastward from Seattle.

It hugs the gently lapping waters of Lake Washington and points a blunt finger at the snow-tipped Cascade Mountains to the east.

Except for one just half its size in the remote island of Tasmania, the Lake Washington bridge is the only one of its kind in the world.

But soon, Seattle will be up to its ears in floating bridges.

Burgeoning population in Seattle, across the lake and across the turbulent salt waters of Puget Sound, has created a need for two and possibly three more bridges.

In the Seattle area, bridges mean floating bridges because of the need for superhighways across long stretches of deep water and at a cost which the state can afford.

BARGAIN

The present lake bridge cost $8,850,000, probably the best bargain the State of Washington has ever made.

A second Lake Washington floating bridge has been approved by the State Legislature. This, 3.8 miles to the north of the present span, will be almost a companion piece. The floating portion will cost something like 12 million dollars—A goodly sum but less expensive than, say, a truss bridge, or a suspension bridge. When completed, its 7,518 feet on pontoons will make it the longest.

Tin-hatted construction workers have almost completed one phase of another bridge which floats — a $14,226,000, two-lane highway to span Hood Canal, on the Olympic Peninsula west of Seattle, a rambunctious, wind-swept arm of water which cuts down south and west from the stormy Strait of Juan de Fuca.

CANAL

(It is called a "canal" because this long arm of salt water is narrow and regular in its more than a mile width throughout its 50 or more miles of length. It is in no sense a man-made canal.)

The Hood Canal span is an ambitious bit of engineering daring. Its roadway will rest high on concrete stilts. The stilts will rest on floating concrete pontoons.

Why this Seattle bent for floating bridges?

Engineers planning the present lake bridge were faced with the problem of spanning something like a mile and a half of water, as deep as 210 feet in many places. Before 1940, bridge builders didn't believe a floating span could be built for more than 1,000 feet. For long hauls, you took the ferry.

ON EVE OF BIG FOUR MEET

Experts Provides Glimpse On Thinkng Of Russians

(EDITOR'S NOTE: On the eve of the Big Four foreign ministers' meeting starting in Geneva Monday former French Premier Jules Moch presents in this dispatch a rare behind-the-scenes glimpse of Soviet thinking, based on years of negotiating with the Russians. He is his country's representative on disarmament. Moch is not too hopeful of any great accomplishment at the East-West conference, but feels there is some room for a meeting of minds.)

By JULES MOCH
Former Premier of France
(Written For UPI)

PARIS (UPI)—As the representative of France for the past seven years in disarmament negotiations, I have known six successive Soviet chiefs of delegation, ministers or vice-ministers of foreign affairs.

There have been two completely separate phases in this long period. Until Stalin's death, there was no human contact, no get-together outside the official sessions. Nothing but the constant repetition of the same attacks (Particularly concerning the dropping of poisoned candy and disease-bearing insects on China), the same arguments tediously reiterated despite repeated refutaitons.

In short, there was no possibility of agreement nor even of mutual understanding.

Later, there was a brusque change. The Soviets accepted personal contacts and invitations to the residences of Western negotiators.

At first the Russians came by twos—one to keep watch on the other?

This was a short-lived custom. Since 1955, they can be met alone or in twos and threes. The men and women have shown themselves cultivated, thoroughly acquainted with controversial subjects and others far removed: Marxism-Leninism, which is not surprising, but also French literature and art.

They want to be charming. They also have profound gaps in understanding, committing astonishing blunders. "The Americans are detested in your country," one of them told me, citing the example of a town where he had read a chalked inscription saying "U. S. go home!"

I replied, "you have certainly picked a good one. I know that city which with 23,000 inhabitants, has a cell of 50 Communists, of whom five younger ones spend their nights scrawling on walls. If you believe they reflect the general opinion, you are deceiving yourself and you are leading your government into error."

I was explaining to another the instability of the governments of the Fourth Republic through the converting of the Communist votes with those of the opposition, alternatipely left or right.

"If they are hampering you so much," he replied with apparent sincerity, "why don't you arrest them and dissolve their party?"

Did he think he was in the U.S.S.R.?

At present, the Soviet chiefs of delegation willingly confide their concerns with a frankness that does not seem feigned. Here are some of their declarations. I guarantee their authenticity, without naming their authors, for obvious reasons.

On Berlin: "It is a hotbed of incidents. We want to be done with it. Let us both withdraw, as far as you like. You accuse us of delivering an ultimatum, because you do not understand us. When Krhruschev spoke of settling the problem in six months, it was not to threaten you, but simply to emphasize the urgency of the matter. It matters little to us if it requires a few more months."

On German unification: "Why proclaim your desire for unity? It can hardly be sincere; Germany has done you too much harm."

On American industrialists: "The businessmen are not as wicked as is said. I have talked with big producers of rockets. It is false that they fear disarmament will hurt their businesses. They would prefer to produce large series of commercial jet airplanes, rather than weapons which are never mass - produced because they are obsolete before they have been perfected."

On peace: "We have so much work to accomplish in seven years — more than ever before— that we have an overriding need of peace. Also, we want disarmament. You say it is necessary to re-establish confidence. But we propose all sorts of pacts to you which you reject, and you suggest inspectin which would amount to espionage. Confidence can not be re-established in the present atmosphere of distrust."

The Russians sincerely want to end the cold war, I believe, but they do not understand us any more than we understand them. This mutual understanding is the first step which must be accomplished on the road to peace.

Doctor Shortage Not Their Worry

GARNETT, Kan (AP) — The telephone rings in an upstairs bedroom of the roomy old house. It's 2 a. m.

Dr. Bob Stevens answers sleepily. "Yes. Yes, she's here. It's for you, Mildred." He hands the receiver to his wife.

She, too, is a doctor.

Dr. Mildred Stevens listens, assessing the situation. Emergency. She dressed hurriedly.

"I'll take the car with the chains, Bob. It snowed again, and I'm afraid it's slick."

Within minutes, she grabs her 22-pound medical bag, climbs in one of their two cars and drives off.

If Dr. Bob should get a summons while she's away, he'll call one of the neighborhood babysitters prepared for just such a contingency. The Stevenses are also parents of a growing family, Laurae, 8, Victor, 7, Rhoads, 5, Jane, 3, and James, 2.

With feminine pride, Mildred recalls that she precticed medicine "through all five pregnancies, right up to labor. My patients needed me."

Naturally, she gets more obstetrical cases than her husband, but Bob has plenty to do. Together, they account for 40 to 60 patients a day. But as busy as they are, the doctors manage to find time for their youngsters.

"We usually have a long, pleasant breakfast period with the children," Mildred says. "And we're all at home at noon togethar for about an hour; and, of course, again at night."

During the day a husekeeper watches the children too young to attend school while the doctors are away at the office, a historic structure built in 1858 as a frontier hotel and stage-coach stop.

"For all I know, Kit Carson might have slept here," Dr. Bob jokes.

They have had the century-old place reinforced and converted. There is a waiting room for 12 to 15 patients who are dispatched to either office by an attendant.

The old kitchen serves as a laboratory. And if Mildred or Bob is puzzled by a case, their offices are handy. Either can step across the hall, like doctors do in the movies, and say, "Doctor, I'd like to have your view on this."

In fact, the Stevens romance reads just like a Hollywood scenario. Both are 36, native Kansans and 1947 graduates, with honors, of the University of Kansas School of Medicine. They met in their pre-med days on the campus at Lawrence.

They were married in April 1947 and got their medical degrees in June. The following year they lived at Knasas City, Kan., near the K. U. Medical Center where Bob intended. Mildred intened at St. Margaret's Hospital in Kansas City, Kan.

Deciding to practice at Garnett, an eastern Kansas community of 3,000 people, they moved here in 1948. Bob put in military service from 1951 to 1952 while Mildred minded the office.

There's no field like mediciane, they agree.

But Mildred confides that she would like more time to herself, "an hour or two extra in the morning, and an extra couple of hours in the afternoon," so she could sew.

AS FBI BUREAU CHIEF

Hoover Observes 35th Anniversary

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Thirty-five years ago this Sunday, a young, one-time night school law student became head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

His name was John Edgar Hoover. Today, he still heads the agency that has come to stand for the finest in law enforcement.

When Hoover took over, the FBI had the lowest morale, poorest personnel and worst reputation of any agency in the federal government. It was loaded with political appointees who couldn't have solved the theft of a five cent candy bar in broad daylight.

There were FBI agents with long police records. Ex- convicts carried FBI credentials.

Special agent badges were given to politicians; to a theatrical producer who brought a girlie show to Washington; and to a drunk who used to stand outside the Department of Justice at lunchtime and sing bawdy songs.

Hoover was only 29 when Atty. Gen. Harlan Fisk Stone told him to "clean up the mess." He used more than a broom. He fumigated.

The ex-convicts were fired. The political hacks were treated even rougher. Hoover transferred them from city to city so often they finally quit. And gradually, he built the FBI into a symbol of efficient, honest law enforcement.

Hoover used to know every one of his agents by name, but the FBI has long since outgrown this personal touch. Yet the growing process never offected his greatest achievement — the esprit de corps that has made the FBI one of the most respected, and feared, investigative bodies in the world.

This respect reflects the character of Hoover himself. Like his coldly-efficient agents, he is more of a symbol than an individual. Now 64, he never married— explaining to friends, logically, that any woman who married him also would have to marry the FBI.

He loves horses, dogs, gardening, art, popular music, sports, sculpture and above all, his job, which he treats with rigid concentration.

Under Hoover, the FBI has obtained convictions or pleas of guilty in more than 90 per cent of the cases it has investigated. In four years of global was, not a single case of foreign-directed sabotage was reported, kidnaping has become one of the "least-likely-to-succeed" major crimes.

No man could have acquired the influence enjoyed by Hoover without also acquiring some enemies— racketeers, Communists and fellow-travelers. But there also are some liberals who fear the FBI occasionally treads on civil rights, tags innocent people with Red labels and is by its very nature a potential Gestapo.

Such charges disturb Hoover, who has leaned over backwards to keep the agency exactly what it was intended to be — a nonpolitical investigative agency which digs up the facts and lets someone else judge them.

Hoover has no plans to retire. He still runs the FBI with an iron hand.

He has many friends, yet is intimate with few. One of them is showman Billy Rose who some years ago was showing a visitor around his just-completed "Aquacade" water show.

Up to Rose stepped a flashily-dressed man.

"You still owe me $10,000 for that construction job, Billy."

"The hell I do," snapped Rose. "I paid you every cent due under the contract. You're a cheap racketeer and you won't get another penny."

"Oh yes I will," the man replied, "because I know just where to find you."

Two Cases Set For Trial In South Ark.

CROSSETT (Special—Two personal injury suits seeking a total of one half-million dollars in damages will come before the May session of the Circuit Court in Hamburg next week.

Slated for May 12, is a case which will be heard before Judge G. B. Colvin, which resulted from a car and truck accident on December 6, 1957, in which four Hamburg high school girls lost their lives. The plaintiffs in the case are: C. W. Henderson, Mrs. Bernice Henderson, Dan Bunn, Mrs. Jeffie Bunn, Mrs. Bernice Chapman, and Mrs. O. C. Grim, versus Jesse Howard Harrelson, Otis Taylor, V. J. Tovatt Co. The car-truck collision occured on Highway 82 near Mist, Arkansas, in which Myrtle Bunn, Jimmie Nell Ruff, Kay Carver and Faith Henderson were killed. Each plaintiff is suing for $100,00.

The plaintiffs allege that the trailer truck driven by Jesse Harolson was traveling at a "fast, dangerous, and reckless rate of speed on the wrong side of the road, and ran into the car driven by Faith Henderson, in which the other three girls were guests, completely demolishing the car and killing all girls; that defendant, Otis Taylor had parked his car on the side of the highway and was too far on the pavement. It is alleged that at the time of the collision the defendant, Jesse Harolson was acting as the agent and employee of the V. J. Tovatt Co., also named in the suit.

4 IRON MEN OF '58

Many instructors termed the festival" unusually inspiring and practical."

Is your "lazy" money building a second income?

Lazy Money: Huh? (Yawn) You talking to me?

Invested Money: I certainly am—if you'll just sit up in that hammock and listen to me.

Lazy Money: I'm all ears—even though my eyes are closed.

Invested Money: You might be building a second income for your owner.

Lazy Money: How in the world could I do that?

Invested Money: By going to work . . . being invested in stocks or bonds—like I am!

Lazy Money: You mean my boss should take a "hot tip" and shove me into some ol' stock?

Invested Money: Heavens, no! He should never rely on tips or rumors. He should get facts and figures from a Member Firm of the New York Stock Exchange.

Lazy Money: If my boss does decide to invest me in stocks or bonds, how does he get started?

Invested Money: He should get in touch with any Member Firm. There your boss will talk with a Partner or Registered Representative who will use his training and experience to aid and advise him. And this interest doesn't end with the first visit. So tell your boss to check his securities with his Registered Representative regularly—discuss whether to buy or sell or any other question he might have.

Lazy Money: . . . and I'm sure to grow?

Invested Money: Well—sometimes a company may not pay a dividend or keep up with the interest. And stock and bond prices go down as well as up. That's why your owner should invest only you.

Lazy Money: What do you mean—only me?

Invested Money: Because you're you—money he has left over after he has taken care of regular expenses and provided for emergencies. Therefore, you're extra . . . and perhaps you can earn him extra income.

Lazy Money: But doesn't he need a lot more than lil' ol' me to start investing?

Invested Money: I started smaller than you. Under the Monthly Investment Plan, your owner can start with as little as $40 every 3 months . . . up to $1,000 a month.

Lazy Money: It sounds great to me. But—how to convince the boss? Well, they say money talks—so, I'll see if I can get through to him.

They have had the century-old place reinforced and converted. There is a waiting room for 12 to 15 patients who are dispatched to either office by an attendant.

The old kitchen serves as a laboratory. And if Mildred or Bob is puzzled by a case, their offices are handy. Either can step across the hall, like doctors do in the movies, and say, "Doctor, I'd like to have your view on this."

In fact, the Stevens romance reads just like a Hollywood scenario. Both are 36, native Kansans and 1947 graduates, with honors, of the University of Kansas School of Medicine. They met in their pre-med days on the campus at Lawrence.

They were married in April 1947 and got their medical degrees in June. The following year they lived at Knasas City, Kan., near the K. U. Medical Center where Bob intended. Mildred intened at St. Margaret's Hospital in Kansas City, Kan.

Deciding to practice at Garnett, an eastern Kansas community of 3,000 people, they moved here in 1948. Bob put in military service from 1951 to 1952 while Mildred minded the office.

There's no field like mediciane, they agree.

But Mildred confides that she would like more time to herself, "an hour or two extra in the morning, and an extra couple of hours in the afternoon," so she could sew.

AS FBI BUREAU CHIEF

Hoover Observes 35th Anniversary

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Thirty-five years ago this Sunday, a young, one-time night school law student became head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

His name was John Edgar Hoover. Today, he still heads the agency that has come to stand for the finest in law enforcement.

When Hoover took over, the FBI had the lowest morale, poorest personnel and worst reputation of any agency in the federal government. It was loaded with political appointees who couldn't have solved the theft of a five cent candy bar in broad daylight.

There were FBI agents with long police records. Ex- convicts carried FBI credentials.

Special agent badges were given to politicians; to a theatrical producer who brought a girlie show to Washington; and to a drunk who used to stand outside the Department of Justice at lunchtime and sing bawdy songs.

Hoover was only 29 when Atty. Gen. Harlan Fisk Stone told him to "clean up the mess." He used more than a broom. He fumigated.

The ex-convicts were fired. The political hacks were treated even rougher. Hoover transferred them from city to city so often they finally quit. And gradually, he built the FBI into a symbol of efficient, honest law enforcement.

Hoover used to know every one of his agents by name, but the FBI has long since outgrown this personal touch. Yet the growing process never offected his greatest achievement — the esprit de corps that has made the FBI one of the most respected, and feared, investigative bodies in the world.

This respect reflects the character of Hoover himself. Like his coldly-efficient agents, he is more of a symbol than an individual. Now 64, he never married— ex-plaining to friends, logically, that any woman who married him also would have to marry the FBI.

He loves horses, dogs, gardening, art, popular music, sports, sculpture and above all, his job, which he treats with rigid concentration.

Under Hoover, the FBI has obtained convictions or pleas of guilty in more than 90 per cent of the cases it has investigated. In four years of global was, not a single case of foreign-directed sabotage was reported, kidnaping has become one of the "least-likely-to-succeed" major crimes.

No man could have acquired the influence enjoyed by Hoover without also acquiring some enemies— racketeers, Communists and fellow-travelers. But there also are some liberals who fear the FBI occasionally treads on civil rights, tags innocent people with Red labels and is by its very nature a potential Gestapo.

Such charges disturb Hoover, who has leaned over backwards to keep the agency exactly what it was intended to be — a non-political investigative agency which digs up the facts and lets someone else judge them.

Hoover has no plans to retire. He still runs the FBI with an iron hand.

He has many friends, yet is intimate with few. One of them is showman Billy Rose who some years ago was showing a visitor around his just-completed "Aquacade" water show.

Up to Rose stepped a flashily-dressed man.

"You still owe me $10,000 for that construction job, Billy."

"The hell I do," snapped Rose. "I paid you every cent due under the contract. You're a cheap racketeer and you won't get another penny."

"Oh yes I will," the man replied, "because I know just where to find you."

Two Cases Set For Trial In South Ark.

CROSSETT (Special—Two personal injury suits seeking a total of one half-million dollars in damages will come before the May session of the Circuit Court in Hamburg next week.

Slated for May 12, is a case which will be heard before Judge G. B. Colvin, which resulted from a car and truck accident on December 6, 1957, in which four Hamburg high school girls lost their lives. The plaintiffs in the case are: C. W. Henderson, Mrs. Bernice Henderson, Dan Bunn, Mrs. Jeffie Bunn, Mrs. Bernice Chapman, and Mrs. O. C. Grim, versus Jesse Howard Harrelson, Otis Taylor, V. J. Tovatt Co. The car-truck collision occured on Highway 82 near Mist, Arkansas, in which Myrtle Bunn, Jimmie Nell Ruff, Kay Carver and Faith Henderson were killed. Each plaintiff is suing for $100,00.

The plaintiffs allege that the trailer truck driven by Jesse Harolson was traveling at a "fast, dangerous, and reckless rate of speed on the wrong side of the road, and ran into the car driven by Faith Henderson, in which the other three girls were guests, completely demolishing the car and killing all girls; that defendant, Otis Taylor had parked his car on the side of the highway and was too far on the pavement. It is alleged that at the time of the collision the defendant, Jesse Harolson was acting as the agent and employee of the V. J. Tovatt Co., also named in the suit.

Many instructors termed the festival" unusually inspiring and practical."

Lazy Money: Huh? (Yawn) You talking to me?

Invested Money: I certainly am—if you'll just sit up in that hammock and listen to me.

Lazy Money: I'm all ears—even though my eyes are closed.

Invested Money: You might be building a second income for your owner.

Lazy Money: How in the world could I do that?

Invested Money: By going to work . . . being invested in stocks or bonds—like I am!

Lazy Money: You mean my boss should take a "hot tip" and shove me into some ol' stock?

Invested Money: Heavens, no! He should never rely on tips or rumors. He should get facts and figures from a Member Firm of the New York Stock Exchange.

Lazy Money: If my boss does decide to invest me in stocks or bonds, how does he get started?

Invested Money: He should get in touch with any Member Firm. There your boss will talk with a Partner or Registered Representative who will use his training and experience to aid and advise him. And this interest doesn't end with the first visit. So tell your boss to check his securities with his Registered Representative regularly—discuss whether to buy or sell or any other question he might have.

Lazy Money: . . . and I'm sure to grow?

Invested Money: Well—sometimes a company may not pay a dividend or keep up with the interest. And stock and bond prices go down as well as up. That's why your owner should invest only you.

Lazy Money: What do you mean—only me?

Invested Money: Because you're you—money he has left over after he has taken care of regular expenses and provided for emergencies. Therefore, you're extra . . . and perhaps you can earn him extra income.

Lazy Money: But doesn't he need a lot more than lil' ol' me to start investing?

Invested Money: I started smaller than you. Under the Monthly Investment Plan, your owner can start with as little as $40 every 3 months . . . up to $1,000 a month.

Lazy Money: It sounds great to me. But—how to convince the boss? Well, they say money talks—so, I'll see if I can get through to him.

Youngest 'Y' Group, Indian, Guides, Centers Around Indian Lore

'Y' PROJECT

Hope Spirals

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
STAFF WRITER

"I sure would like it if the new YMCA were built this year — none of us want to wait around four years more; why, by that time, I'll be 15."

John Salisbury, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Salisbury, and YMCA member since he was 6, was speaking.

The Jr. Hi-Y participant gave the best reason possible for construction of the building this year: Ouachita Parish youngsters need it right away — not merely by 1963.

The "Y" building committee, realizing this need, has launched an intensive drive to round up the money for the project immediately.

"Pay up your pledge now, instead of waiting until four years roll around," is their cry.

PLEDGED

Approximately $300,000 was pledged for the modernistic building. $30,000 went for the 300 by 400 foot lot at 1800 Glenmar Ave., in a select area near the new parish library.

"We need $100,000 to $150,000" cash to start work on the building if the citizens who promised to contribute would pay now, rather than gradually."

With 11-year-old bluntness, John remarked: "The building they have now is small and we don't have enough space to do everything. All it is, is an office. One year, we had the boys come up, we watched TV, made airplanes . . . but it was just too small to do anything bigger."

"If we had the new building this summer, it would be a good place to go on weekends or in our spare time . . . and you could swim in the pool, even if they didn't get it built until winter.

"The indoor pool is going to lengthen the swimming season, so we can swim all year round," John added.

TYPICAL

He is typical of other parish youngsters who have learned much through the "Y", but who long for the added benefits of a well-equipped building.

"Y" membership has sky-rocketed 600 per cent, since the parish YMCA was opened in an office at the Courthouse 5 years ago.

Now located in a small house at 217 Breard St., the "Y" looks back to its 1954 membership of 907 persons; 8,404 attendances were counted at 466 meetings.

Now, 5,494 young boys, men, and girls (age 9-12 in the Tri-Gra-Y girls program) raised the attendance at 1418 sessions in 1958 to a total of 48,375.

"A big increase in enrollment — but little increase in our space," frowned G. L. Morgan, building committee chairman.

Summertime sees the "Y" day camp for young boys and girls conducted in Forsythe Park. A total of 225 youngsters learned to swim and 399 passed swimming tests in the 1958 session — a small percentage compared to the number who could learn in the proposed building's full-time pool.

"And if we had a swimming meet scheduled, we could practice in the "Y" pool to get ready for the meet so our team could be good," commented John, adding, "it's pretty hard at times to practice in the Swayze pool — we have to reserve space and even then nobody likes it when we take up part of the pool."

CLASSES

"It would be better for swimming classes to have a separate pool," he continued, "because it's difficult to learn when lots of other people are around using the pool and you're distracted to watch someone diving in."

A sixth grader at Robert E. Lee Junior High on the northside, John meets with his Jr. Hi-Y group at the school.

"We have regular meetings, elect our own officers, and sometimes we have a camp-out on a weekend night near Choudrant. We play football and baseball, and participated in the Y basketball tournament at Vicksburg," he explained.

For those who wonder what benefit a youngster gains from the Y, here is a brief outline of John's activities in the Y:

He started in the "Y" Indian Guide program when he was six. A father - and - son group, it is designed to foster comradeship, and is centered around Indian lore. It includes crafts, ceremonials, group games, cooperative projects, camp outs, archery and rituals.

For the past few years, he participated in the Gra-Y group, for grade school boys.

PROGRAM

Their program consisted of devotionals, athletics, singing, camp outs, service projects, horseback riding, archery, riflery, movies, hiking and group games, under well - qualified Christian leadership.

Now in Junior Hi-Y, for junior high school boys, he has a similar program to the Gra-Y. The Jr. Hi-Y works to help the boys strengthen their bodies, develop their minds, worship God and work together for a better community.

His next step, in high school, will be membership in the Hi-Y program. Its purpose is "to create, maintain and extend high standards of Christian character throughout the home, school and community," explained "Y" president Jamar W. Adcock.

Special interest groups, including the Basketball League, gymnastics classes and Housing Authority held 10 meetings at the "Y" with 450 participating last year.

Although the adult program is extremely limited at present due to lack of facilities, 230 persons participated in 25 different sessions in 1958.

"Y" figures would be doubled, with the use of a new building. A full - scale adult program, including volley ball, badminton, swimming, and physical fitness classes would be available, making full use of the proposed "Y" gymnasium.

George Forman, son of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Forman, 1102 N. McGuire St., started working as a "Y" daycamp counsellor between his sophomore and junior years at Neville High school.

DEFINITE VIEWS

Now a graduating senior and member of the "Crusaders", Neville's Hi-Y group, George has some definite views on the "Y", and the extensive advantages which it offers.

Speaking on the "Y"'s basketball coaching clinic for grade-school boys, he pointed out:

"A lot of boys were timid at first . . . but others there couldn't play as well as they could. They watched the progress both in themselves and others, and gained confidence.

"The "Y" is so much different from a school basketball team. Everybody plays on the "Y" team, and it brings out the timid boys' personalities. The "Y" shows more concern for the underdog, and the stress is not so much on winning the game as in teaching the individual how to play," he revealed.

"The "Y" also teaches a lot of water safety," he continued.

"It makes a youngster pass a beginning test before he is allowed into deeper water. A series of progressive tests makes him aware of his lack of skill. The person who thinks that he knows more than he actually does can be dangerous in water."

Day camp also came in for comment:

"At Day Camp, we teach the boys archery, swimming, softball, most outdoor sports, and take them on hikes. The hike may be just over the levee, but it makes them appreciate what's around them.

"And they have something in common with the other boys on the hike."

CHANCE

"They get a chance to do lots of crafts, which not only develops finger dexterity, but also teaches them patience."

"Overnight camping helps the boys to be a little bit independent. They're away from their parents, and find out how it feels to be "on their own."

George sees the need for a new "Y" building soon.

"I think the sooner we obtain the building, the better it will be. It's so hard for the "Y" to take care of all the boys in this area, due to its present lack of facilities," he frowned.

He explained, "If we want to practice basketball, we have to borrow a school gym. When we want swimming team practice, we have to borrow the city pool . . . and with so many other people in the pool, it's very hard to do anything."

"To use the "Y" building for a club, we have to meet in the attic. That's not a very good atmosphere, so we meet at Neville instead.

"But if we had a club room of our own at the new "Y", we would feel so much more like a club," he stressed.

BIRDS MAY YIELD

Secret Of Weight Control

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Birds could yield a secret for losing weight.

Some birds gain 50 to 100 per cent of their body weight in fueling up for long migratory flights. The gain is all fat. It is put on in a few days.

Scientists are trying to learn how they do it.

If this process can be reversed, it might be helpful for many humans who fight a constant war against obesity, says Dr. Eugene Odum, University of Georgia zoologist who is directing some unusual studies of migratory birds.

OTHER FACTORS

Fatness in humans is generally considered to be a matter of consuming more calories than you need. But there could be other factors.

Migratory birds have a still-secret way of putting on fat.

It seems to be due to hormone action in response to the increasing length of daylight in the spring, Dr. Odum reports.

This is borne out by experiments in which birds are artifically exposed to extra amounts of light—as though days were growing longer.

For a time nothing happens. Then in a quick few days the birds put on fantastic amounts of fat. More light triggers off some mechanism so the birds beef up their fat or fuel stores for long trips north.

In the fall, when days are growing shorter, the birds fatten up again for their journeys south.

Dr. Odum and associates are measuring the actual amounts of fat put on by various species of migratory birds. From this, they can estimate how far the birds could travel. Fat is one of the best energy fuels. It is comparable to loading an airplane with lots of high-octane gasoline.

The hummingbird weighs only two grams — about one-fourteenth of an ounce — but doubles this weight when it starts migrating. That gives it enough "gas" to zoom clear across the Gulf of Mexico to Central or South America in a nonstop flight of 600 miles.

Generally, the fattest birds are those which had the farthest to go. Leaner birds, on the average, had shorter journeys to their winter grounds, or could make stopovers for feeding and refueling along the way, Dr. Odum reports.

The fat fuel for migrations seems to be stored in all parts of the birds' bodies, but it does not harm their hearts.

Talk Of 'Givers' Revolt'

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
Associated Press Writer

There is talk of a "givers' revolt" and evidence of a "welfare war." Yet Americans gave more last year to philanthropy than ever before, more than seven billion dollars.

This is almost twice as much as was contributed in 1950 and enough to keep philanthropy comfortably up among the top 10 of the nation's biggest businesses.

What then about the rumored revolt of the givers? Statistically there is no evidence that Americans are tightening their purse-strings. Last year the nation's 2,100 community chests and united funds raised almost 425 million dollars. Last year 40 of the big independent national health organizations and the Red Cross raised well over 200 million dollars.

There are, however, hints of trouble. The cause of the trouble is an old sore: too many organizations, too many appeals for funds, too many outstretched hands.

A community service organization in a suburban area surveyed residents on the charity-solitication question. One rich man estimated he receives at least 150 appeals a year—by personal visit, telephone and mail. A middle-income, middle-class housewife rattled off names of 31 organizations which had asked her for funds within 12 months. A volunteer worker for a national health agency reported she had called 20 friends without finding one who was willing to undertake a door-to-door neighborhood funds appeal.

The welfare war has been in progress for several years between advocates of independent fund drives and proponents of the once-a-year, one-shot campaign.

Both sides have adherents. Both sides are armed with statistics to prove they are right. The independents, most of which have strong emotional appeals, believe they can raise more money and educate the public better with a campaign of their own.

Federated fund boosters argue that overlapping and multiple appeals harry contributors and tire volunteers.

"It's not easy to take sides," commented one woman. "I personally like the idea of one funds drive. But it's not easy to tell the mother of a child with cerebral palsy or a woman whose husband died of cancer that you think their organization should be in the same category with the Girl Scouts or a council of social agencies."

CONTRIBUTORS

In some places contributors are taking matters into their own hands. A couple of years ago, women in Gates Mills, Ohio, organized and collected money for a lot of health organizations. Then they offered the money to the agencies. One, the National Foundation, refused the money. The others took it, many reluctantly.

But the idea proved epidemic, spreading through the Cleveland area. Today, funds-raisers everywhere know "what happened in Cleveland," and many don't like it a bit.

Plagued by solicitations inside plants and offices, which had become so frequent they were disrupting production, labor and management teamed up in Los Angeles to form a contributors' organization. Donors may pick the philanthropies they choose to give to—whether it is an eastern engineering school or a local orphan's home—and the funds are forwarded.

When the contributors set themselves up in business and start telling philanthropy what they will do a revolutionary situation is in the making.

Another blow to the independent campaigners was the recent executive order that federal employes may be hit only three times a year for contributions: once for Red Cross, once for welfare and once for health. The order has stimulated discussion in many drive-weary communities about organizing one-shot health campaigns.

There may also be grim portent for health and welfare organizations in a recent tabulation of giving trends by the top philanthropical foundations of the nation. Foundations traditionally are the pioneers in giving.

These foundations in 1957 — the most recent year for which figures are available — boosted grants in the educational field to 47 per cent of funds dispensed. At the same time they dropped health grants from 39 to a mere 14 per cent.

Paramount TV boss Jim Schulke thinks so. He is masterminding the film company's break into the TV filming business with a new hour show called Destination Space. It's Schulke's opinion that the next big cycle in home-screen entertainment will be space exploration.

'Y' PROJECT

Hope Spirals

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
STAFF WRITER

"I sure would like it if the new YMCA were built this year — none of us want to wait around four years more; why, by that time, I'll be 15."

John Salisbury, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Salisbury, and YMCA member since he was 6, was speaking.

The Jr. Hi-Y participant gave the best reason possible for construction of the building this year: Ouachita Parish youngsters need it right away — not merely by 1963.

The "Y" building committee, realizing this need, has launched an intensive drive to round up the money for the project immediately.

"Pay up your pledge now, instead of waiting until four years roll around," is their cry.

PLEDGED

Approximately $300,000 was pledged for the modernistic building. $30,000 went for the 300 by 400 foot lot at 1800 Glenmar Ave., in a select area near the new parish library.

"We need $100,000 to $150,000" cash to start work on the building if the citizens who promised to contribute would pay now, rather than gradually."

With 11-year-old bluntness, John remarked: "The building they have now is small and we don't have enough space to do everything. All it is, is an office. One year, we had the boys come up, we watched TV, made airplanes . . . but it was just too small to do anything bigger."

"If we had the new building this summer, it would be a good place to go on weekends or in our spare time . . . and you could swim in the pool, even if they didn't get it built until winter.

"The indoor pool is going to lengthen the swimming season, so we can swim all year round," John added.

TYPICAL

He is typical of other parish youngsters who have learned much through the "Y", but who long for the added benefits of a well-equipped building.

"Y" membership has sky-rocketed 600 per cent, since the parish YMCA was opened in an office at the Courthouse 5 years ago.

Now located in a small house at 217 Breard St., the "Y" looks back to its 1954 membership of 907 persons; 8,404 attendances were counted at 466 meetings.

Now, 5,494 young boys, men, and girls (age 9-12 in the Tri-Gra-Y girls program) raised the attendance at 1418 sessions in 1958 to a total of 48,375.

"A big increase in enrollment — but little increase in our space," frowned G. L. Morgan, building committee chairman.

Summertime sees the "Y" day camp for young boys and girls conducted in Forsythe Park. A total of 225 youngsters learned to swim and 399 passed swimming tests in the 1958 session — a small percentage compared to the number who could learn in the proposed building's full-time pool.

"And if we had a swimming meet scheduled, we could practice in the "Y" pool to get ready for the meet so our team could be good," commented John, adding, "it's pretty hard at times to practice in the Swayze pool — we have to reserve space and even then nobody likes it when we take up part of the pool."

CLASSES

"It would be better for swimming classes to have a separate pool," he continued, "because it's difficult to learn when lots of other people are around using the pool and you're distracted to watch someone diving in."

A sixth grader at Robert E. Lee Junior High on the northside, John meets with his Jr. Hi-Y group at the school.

"We have regular meetings, elect our own officers, and sometimes we have a camp-out on a weekend night near Choudrant. We play football and baseball, and participated in the Y basketball tournament at Vicksburg," he explained.

For those who wonder what benefit a youngster gains from the Y, here is a brief outline of John's activities in the Y:

He started in the "Y" Indian Guide program when he was six. A father - and - son group, it is designed to foster comradeship, and is centered around Indian lore. It includes crafts, ceremonials, group games, cooperative projects, camp outs, archery and rituals.

For the past few years, he participated in the Gra-Y group, for grade school boys.

PROGRAM

Their program consisted of devotionals, athletics, singing, camp outs, service projects, horseback riding, archery, riflery, movies, hiking and group games, under well - qualified Christian leadership.

Now in Junior Hi-Y, for junior high school boys, he has a similar program to the Gra-Y. The Jr. Hi-Y works to help the boys strengthen their bodies, develop their minds, worship God and work together for a better community.

His next step, in high school, will be membership in the Hi-Y program. Its purpose is "to create, maintain and extend high standards of Christian character throughout the home, school and community," explained "Y" president Jamar W. Adcock.

Special interest groups, including the Basketball League, gymnastics classes and Housing Authority held 10 meetings at the "Y" with 450 participating last year.

Although the adult program is extremely limited at present due to lack of facilities, 230 persons participated in 25 different sessions in 1958.

"Y" figures would be doubled, with the use of a new building. A full - scale adult program, including volley ball, badminton, swimming, and physical fitness classes would be available, making full use of the proposed "Y" gymnasium.

George Forman, son of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Forman, 1102 N. McGuire St., started working as a "Y" daycamp counsellor between his sophomore and junior years at Neville High school.

DEFINITE VIEWS

Now a graduating senior and member of the "Crusaders", Neville's Hi-Y group, George has some definite views on the "Y", and the extensive advantages which it offers.

Speaking on the "Y"'s basketball coaching clinic for gradeschool boys, he pointed out:

"A lot of boys were timid at first . . . but others there couldn't play as well as they could. They watched the progress both in themselves and others, and gained confidence.

"The "Y" is so much different from a school basketball team. Everybody plays on the "Y" team, and it brings out the timid boys' personalities. The "Y" shows more concern for the underdog, and the stress is not so much on winning the game as in teaching the individual how to play," he revealed.

"The "Y" also teaches a lot of water safety," he continued.

"It makes a youngster pass a beginning test before he is allowed into deeper water. A series of progressive tests makes him aware of his lack of skill. The person who thinks that he knows more than he actually does can be dangerous in water."

Day camp also came in for comment:

"At Day Camp, we teach the boys archery, swimming, softball, most outdoor sports, and take them on hikes. The hike may be just over the levee, but it makes them appreciate what's around them.

"And they have something in common with the other boys on the hike."

CHANCE

"They get a chance to do lots of crafts, which not only develops finger dexterity, but also teaches them patience."

"Overnight camping helps the boys to be a little bit independent. They're away from their parents, and find out how it feels to be "on their own."

George sees the need for a new "Y" building soon.

"I think the sooner we obtain the building, the better it will be. It's so hard for the "Y" to take care of all the boys in this area, due to its present lack of facilities," he frowned.

He explained, "If we want to practice basketball, we have to borrow a school gym. When we want swimming team practice, we have to borrow the city pool . . . and with so many other people in the pool, it's very hard to do anything."

"To use the "Y" building for a club, we have to meet in the attic. That's not a very good atmosphere, so we meet at Neville instead.

"But if we had a club room of our own at the new "Y", we would feel so much more like a club," he stressed.

BIRDS MAY YIELD

Secret Of Weight Control

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Birds could yield a secret for losing weight.

Some birds gain 50 to 100 per cent of their body weight in fueling up for long migratory flights. The gain is all fat. It is put on in a few days.

Scientists are trying to learn how they do it.

If this process can be reversed, it might be helpful for many humans who fight a constant war against obesity, says Dr. Eugene Odum, University of Georgia zoologist who is directing some unusual studies of migratory birds.

OTHER FACTORS

Fatness in humans is generally considered to be a matter of consuming more calories than you need. But there could be other factors.

Migratory birds have a still-secret way of putting on fat.

It seems to be due to hormone action in response to the increasing length of daylight in the spring, Dr. Odum reports.

This is borne out by experiments in which birds are artifically exposed to extra amounts of light—as though days were growing longer.

For a time nothing happens. Then in a quick few days the birds put on fantastic amounts of fat. More light triggers off some mechanism so the birds beef up their fat or fuel stores for long trips north.

In the fall, when days are growing shorter, the birds fatten up again for their journeys south.

Dr. Odum and associates are measuring the actual amounts of fat put on by various species of migratory birds. From this, they can estimate how far the birds could travel. Fat is one of the best energy fuels. It is comparable to loading an airplane with lots of high-octane gasoline.

The hummingbird weighs only two grams — about one-fourteenth of an ounce — but doubles this weight when it starts migrating. That gives it enough "gas" to zoom clear across the Gulf of Mexico to Central or South America in a nonstop flight of 600 miles.

Generally, the fattest birds are those which had the farthest to go. Leaner birds, on the average, had shorter journeys to their winter grounds, or could make stopovers for feeding and refueling along the way, Dr. Odum reports.

The fat fuel for migrations seems to be stored in all parts of the birds' bodies, but it does not harm their hearts.

Talk Of 'Givers' Revolt'

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
Associated Press Writer

There is talk of a "givers' revolt" and evidence of a "welfare war." Yet Americans gave more last year to philanthropy than ever before, more than seven billion dollars.

This is almost twice as much as was contributed in 1950 and enough to keep philanthropy comfortably up among the top 10 of the nation's biggest businesses.

What then about the rumored revolt of the givers? Statistically there is no evidence that Americans are tightening their purse-strings. Last year the nation's 2,100 community chests and united funds raised almost 425 million dollars. Last year 40 of the big independent national health organizations and the Red Cross raised well over 200 million dollars.

There are, however, hints of trouble. The cause of the trouble is an old sore: too many organizations, too many appeals for funds, too many outstretched hands.

A community service organization in a suburban area surveyed residents on the charity-solitication question. One rich man estimated he receives at least 150 appeals a year—by personal visit, telephone and mail. A middle-income, middle-class housewife rattled off names of 31 organizations which had asked her for funds within 12 months. A volunteer worker for a national health agency reported she had called 20 friends without finding one who was willing to undertake a door-to-door neighborhood funds appeal.

The welfare war has been in progress for several years between advocates of independent fund drives and proponents of the once-a-year, one-shot campaign.

Both sides have adherents. Both sides are armed with statistics to prove they are right. The independents, most of which have strong emotional appeals, believe they can raise more money and educate the public better with a campaign of their own.

Federated fund boosters argue that overlapping and multiple appeals harry contributors and tire volunteers.

"It's not easy to take sides," commented one woman. "I personally like the idea of one funds drive. But it's not easy to tell the mother of a child with cerebral palsy or a woman whose husband died of cancer that you think their organization should be in the same category with the Girl Scouts or a council of social agencies."

CONTRIBUTORS

In some places contributors are taking matters into their own hands. A couple of years ago, women in Gates Mills, Ohio, organized and collected money for a lot of health organizations. Then they offered the money to the agencies. One, the National Foundation, refused the money. The others took it, many reluctantly.

But the idea proved epidemic, spreading through the Cleveland area. Today, funds-raisers everywhere know "what happened in Cleveland," and many don't like it a bit.

Plagued by solicitations inside plants and offices, which had become so frequent they were disrupting production, labor and management teamed up in Los Angeles to form a contributors' organization. Donors may pick the philanthropies they choose to give to—whether it is an eastern engineering school or a local orphan's home—and the funds are forwarded.

When the contributors set themselves up in business and start telling philanthropy what they will do a revolutionary situation is in the making.

Another blow to the independent campaigners was the recent executive order that federal employes may be hit only three times a year for contributions: once for Red Cross, once for welfare and once for health. The order has stimulated discussion in many drive-weary communities about organizing one-shot health campaigns.

There may also be grim portent for health and welfare organizations in a recent tabulation of giving trends by the top philanthropical foundations of the nation. Foundations traditionally are the pioneers in giving.

These foundations in 1957 — the most recent year for which figures are available — boosted grants in the educational field to 47 per cent of funds dispensed. At the same time they dropped health grants from 39 to a mere 14 per cent.

PAUL MARTIN LOOKS 'EM OVER

You either hate the Yankees or love 'em.

You're either happy as at least seven American League members about Casey Stengel's reverses of late, or are silently suffering as you wait for that surge of power to begin showing again to the distress of the rest of the junior league.

Take it from Harold Dennis, a confirmed Yankee fan, the other side of the crowd had better be enjoying itself while the anti-Yank fun is on. It won't last long.

Dennis, some of you'll remember, is an "original" Northeast Indian who was a grider and student football manager for the Redskins in 1931 and '32. In residence at G. B. Cooley Sanitorium, West Monroe, most of the time (friends are welcome to visit), Dennis follows sports closely and is a convincing defender of his beloved Yanks.

Any Yankee fans feeling down in the dumps need only to listen to Dennis, who doesn't hesitate to tell you: "By July 4th the Yankees will be five games out front. They just naturally have the horses."

"The Yankees are the best club by far in either league," continues Dennis who never misses a broadcast of any Yankee game. (He has a shortwave radio that gets New York games when they're not on a national hookup). "It's just a matter of ironing out a few matters, and they'll be away and winging. Kubek is not in shape. Neither is Mantle. Both will be ready in a few days, however. Richardson is probably the best glove man in the league, but evidently he can't hit big league pitching. He will probably be traded."

Stengel did some strong talking during the winter, getting tough with some of his players about training regulations and as good as telling the rest of the league how his Yanks would be mopping up again. How about it, Harold?

"Casey popped off too much this winter and he knows it. However, he made the statement that he had the rest of the league by the tail, and therefore will put more effort out because he has got to win or never live it down.

"George Weiss (the front office boss) is going to trade a couple of good ball players away any day, and then watch the team get on the ball. They have plenty of expendables, all of whom could make any club in the league as a regular. They're going to trade for what they need, and whatever they give up will be some help to the club involved in the deal.

"Any players the Yankees give up will be expendable. They will know that they're doing. Stengel knows his men like a book. Remember all the moaning when he let Billy Martin go in a trade with Kansas City? Well, the only reason Martin stayed with the Yanks as long as he did was because he was with Casey when Stengel managed in the Pacific Coast League, and Casey, as a friend, carried him until he had to let him go. Kansas City wasn't able to use him and peddled him off to Detroit which just as quickly shunted him off to Cleveland.

"The other day Martin hits a home run for Cleveland and everbody goes wild. He probably won't hit five more home runs the whole season."

Frank Lane, the Cleveland Indians' general manager, has been doing a lot of talking for the press about how the Yankees are as good as washed up this year as he had forecast last winter while making trades designed to improve Cleveland.

"The thing that burns me to a crisp," sizzled Dennis, "is all this talk by Lane and the fact that a lot of folks will listen to him. He has built a reputation as a smooth trader. Just tell me where he got it? What did Lane ever do to help anybody?

"What did he do with the White Sox? True, his manipulations helped pull them up to third place. That's as high as they ever got. And what about the Cardinals? He sure made some big deals there. For a while last year it looked like he might have left them something, but the foundation was bad and couldn't hold up. Just look at the Cardinals today. I'd be careful about listening to one who has never really built a pennant contender.

"While we're still on Cleveland . . . my blood boils at people trying to compare the 1954 Cleveland club with the 1927 Yankees. Cleveland had a medicore ball club in '54 and won 111 games while the Yanks were winning 103. Every team in the league saved its best pitchers for the Yankees that year, and mostly their second line hurlers were left to go against Cleveland. If you don't believe it, just check the records. And then the Giants sack Cleveland four straight in the World Series. It is a disgrace to organized ball to compare the '54 Indians and their 111 victories with the old Yankees of '27 who had the previous league high of 110 wins.

Some time ago, when comments he considered not to be complimentary to the Yankees were being made about player trades with Kansas City, Dennis tells up:

"Lay off the Yankees, especially all this bunk about Kansas City being a farm club. If it wasn't for the Yankees, Kansas City wouldn't be in the big league, but any move New York makes is for the sole purpose of improving the Yankees. If it takes more than players, the Yanks are ready to put out the cash. New York has money and is not afraid to spend it. Anything the Yankees do will be strictly for their own good."

Our pro-Yankee fans find consolation in your defenses, Harold. But the Yankees haters are going to have to be convinced. Until the Stengelites show their old bat power and clutch pitching, the antis merrily pick over the pieces.

SIX RECORDS FALL

Ruston Wins Fourth State AA Track Crown In Row

RUSTON, La. (Special) — Ruston High School won its fourth straight class AA track and field title as six records fell in the state meet here Friday and Saturday.

Existing marks in four events were broken in Friday's action and two yesterday as Ruston edged past Natchitoches to win the team title.

Opelousas had 27½, DeRidder 25, Haynesville 22½, Minden 18, Jena 17½, Crowley 11, Jonesboro-Hodge 10, North Caddo 9, Reserve 8, Marion of Lake Charles 9, Jennings 8, Oakdale 6½, Hahnville and Neville 5, Pineville 4, Homer and Ponchatoula 3½, Springhill 2, and Behrman 1.

LAST-MINUTE MOVES

Majors Cut Down To 25-Man Limit

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The big deals failed to materialize and most of the major league baseball teams had to do some last-minute cutting to reach the 25-player limit by Saturday's midnight deadline.

Under baseball law clubs must whittle their playing rosters to 25 men, plus any military personnel, a month after start of the season.

The New York Yankees, who had hoped to swing a trade for Washington's Camilo Pascual, instead sold pitcher Murry Dickson back to Kansas City and sent catcher Darrell Johnson and pitcher Zach Monroe to Richmond of the International League.

The Washington Senators and Detroit Tigers also had to reduce their squads by three. The Senators put catcher Clint Courtney on the disabled list because of his mumps, sold infielder Bobby Malkmus to Denver of the American Assn. and optioned pitcher Jack Kralick to Chattanooga of the Southern Assn.

The Tigers optioned pitcher George Susce, catcher Charles Lau and pitcher Hank Aguirre to Charleston of the American Assn.

Optioned players may be recalled on a 24-hour basis. Those put on the disabled list must stay out 30 days.

The two Chicago clubs were the last to get under the wire. The Cubs, one over, were waiting the results of a possible trade before placing Dick Drott on the disabled list or optioning outfielder Chick King.

Other moves:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Boston—optioned pitcher Herb Moford to Minneapolis of the American Assn.

Kansas City—Optioned outfielder Zeke Bella to Shreveport of the Southern Assn. John Tsitouris is a military returnee giving the A's 26.

Baltimore—Optioned pitcher Wes Stock to Miami of the International League.

S'West Loop Warns Against Athletic Aid

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP)—The Southwest Conference found Saturday what it called an alarming increase in the number of athletic scholarships and delivered an ultimatum to athletic directors to bring them within "reasonable limits."

No action was taken on a proposed limit. Brt a committee studying scholarships was continued and will make another report at the conference's December meeting.

What the committee considers reasonable was not stated. Conference schools average about 150 scholarships a year in all sports.

The committee said it is hoped the situation can be handled by the athletic directors but if it isn't, action will be taken.

Only one recruiting violation was discussed. Howard Grubbs, conference secretary, said the violation was found to be technical, and the violation was "unintentional" so no one was penalized. The school involved was not named.

Purkey Shuts Out Milwaukee, 3-0

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Bob Purkey of Cincinnati shut out the Milwaukee Braves on seven hits 3-0, handling Warren Spahn his fourth defeat. The victory moved the Reds into first place in the National League standings and dropped Milwaukee into second.

Purkey went the distance. The Reds have now beaten Spahn three times.

The Reds rapped out nine hits against the Braves, including a leadoff homer by Roy McMillan in the seventh inning.

It was Purkey's fourth victory against two losses.

Don McMahon replaced Spahn at the start of the ninth.

In the bottom of the ninth, Milwaukee collected a pair of hits, putting Henry Aaron on third base, but again the National League champions failed to score.

Spahn gave up only one hit—a third inning single by Johnny Temple — and issued only one walk through the first five innings. The 38-year-old veteran lefthander was making his second try for the 250th victory of his major league career.

With one out in the top of the sixth, Johnny Temple singled and Vada Pinson walked. Then Frank Robinson doubled down the left field line, sending Temple home and Pinson to third. After Frank Thomas fouled to Frank Torre, Spahn purposely passed Jim Pendleton, filling the bases. But the threat was ended when Gus Bell was called out on strikes.

Spahn reached second base in the Braves' half of the sixth when Pendleton dropped his fly bali, ball, but Purkey retired the next three batters.

McMillan opened the seventh inning with his fourth home run of the season over the left field fence. After that the Redlegs filled the bases. Dutch Dotterer singled to center and Purkey attempted to sacrifice, but he forced dotterer, Spahn to Johnny Logan. With one out, Pinson moved Purkey to second with a single to left center and when Wes Covington fumbled, Purkey went on to third and Pinson to second. Spahn purposely passed Robinson, filling the bases. Purkey scored when Thomas walked. The side wan retired as Pendleton forced Robinson at third.

PAUL MARTIN LOOKS 'EM OVER

You either hate the Yankees or love 'em.

You're either happy as at least seven American League members about Casey Stengel's reverses of late, or are silently suffering as you wait for that surge of power to begin showing again to the distress of the rest of the junior league.

Take it from Harold Dennis, a confirmed Yankee fan, the other side of the crowd had better be enjoying itself while the anti-Yank fun is on. It won't last long.

Dennis, some of you'll remember, is an "original" Northeast Indian who was a grider and student football manager for the Redskins in 1931 and '32. In residence at G. B. Cooley Sanitorium, West Monroe, most of the time (friends are welcome to visit), Dennis follows sports closely and is a convincing defender of his beloved Yanks.

Any Yankee fans feeling down in the dumps need only to listen to Dennis, who doesn't hesitate to tell you: "By July 4th the Yankees will be five games out front. They just naturally have the horses."

"The Yankees are the best club by far in either league," continues Dennis who never misses a broadcast of any Yankee game. (He has a shortwave radio that gets New York games when they're not on a national hookup). "It's just a matter of ironing out a few matters, and they'll be away and winging. Kubek is not in shape. Neither is Mantle. Both will be ready in a few days, however. Richardson is probably the best glove man in the league, but evidently he can't hit big league pitching. He will probably be traded."

Stengel did some strong talking during the winter, getting tough with some of his players about training regulations and as good as telling the rest of the league how his Yanks would be mopping up again. How about it, Harold?

"Casey popped off too much this winter and he knows it. However, he made the statement that he had the rest of the league by the tail, and therefore will put more effort out because he has got to win or never live it down.

"George Weiss (the front office boss) is going to trade a couple of good ball players away any day, and then watch the team get on the ball. They have plenty of expendables, all of whom could make any club in the league as a regular. They're going to trade for what they need, and whatever they give up will be some help to the club involved in the deal.

"Any players the Yankees give up will be expendable. They will know that they're doing. Stengel knows his men like a book. Remember all the moaning when he let Billy Martin go in a trade with Kansas City? Well, the only reason Martin stayed with the Yanks as long as he did was because he was with Casey when Stengel managed in the Pacific Coast League, and Casey, as a friend, carried him until he had to let him go. Kansas City wasn't able to use him and peddled him off to Detroit which just as quickly shunted him off to Cleveland.

"The other day Martin hits a home run for Cleveland and everbody goes wild. He probably won't hit five more home runs the whole season."

Frank Lane, the Cleveland Indians' general manager, has been doing a lot of talking for the press about how the Yankees are as good as washed up this year as he had forecast last winter while making trades designed to improve Cleveland.

"The thing that burns me to a crisp," sizzled Dennis, "is all this talk by Lane and the fact that a lot of folks will listen to him. He has built a reputation as a smooth trader. Just tell me where he got it? What did Lane ever do to help anybody?

"What did he do with the White Sox? True, his manipulations helped pull them up to third place. That's as high as they ever got. And what about the Cardinals? He sure made some big deals there. For a while last year it looked like he might have left them something, but the foundation was bad and couldn't hold up. Just look at the Cardinals today. I'd be careful about listening to one who has never really built a pennant contender.

"While we're still on Cleveland . . . my blood boils at people trying to compare the 1954 Cleveland club with the 1927 Yankees. Cleveland had a medicore ball club in '54 and won 111 games while the Yanks were winning 103. Every team in the league saved its best pitchers for the Yankees that year, and mostly their second line hurlers were left to go against Cleveland. If you don't believe it, just check the records. And then the Giants sack Cleveland four straight in the World Series. It is a disgrace to organized ball to compare the '54 Indians and their 111 victories with the old Yankees of '27 who had the previous league high of 110 wins.

Some time ago, when comments he considered not to be complimentary to the Yankees were being made about player trades with Kansas City, Dennis tells up:

"Lay off the Yankees, especially all this bunk about Kansas City being a farm club. If it wasn't for the Yankees, Kansas City wouldn't be in the big league, but any move New York makes is for the sole purpose of improving the Yankees. If it takes more than players, the Yanks are ready to put out the cash. New York has money and is not afraid to spend it. Anything the Yankees do will be strictly for their own good."

Our pro-Yankee fans find consolation in your defenses, Harold. But the Yankees haters are going to have to be convinced. Until the Stengelites show their old bat power and clutch pitching, the antis merrily pick over the pieces.

Existing marks in four events were broken in Friday's action and two yesterday as Ruston edged past Natchitoches to win the team title.

Coach Hoss Garrett's Bearcats piled up 57 ½ points to 46½ for Natchitoches. Opelousas had 27½, DeRidder 25, Haynesville 22½, Minden 18, Jena 17½, Crowley 11, Jonesboro-Hodge 10, North Caddo 9, Reserve 8, Marion of Lake Charles 9, Jennings 8, Oakdale 6½, Hahnville and Neville 5, Pineville 4, Homer and Ponchatoula 3½, Springhill 2, and Behrman 1.

Ruston used victories in all three relays to jump to the title, with the Bearcat mile relay team setting a new mark of 3:29.0 in the final event of the meet.

LAST-MINUTE MOVES

Majors Cut Down To 25-Man Limit

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The big deals failed to materialize and most of the major league baseball teams had to do some last-minute cutting to reach the 25-player limit by Saturday's midnight deadline.

Under baseball law clubs must whittle their playing rosters to 25 men, plus any military personnel, a month after start of the season.

The New York Yankees, who had hoped to swing a trade for Washington's Camilo Pascual, instead sold pitcher Murry Dickson back to Kansas City and sent catcher Darrell Johnson and pitcher Zach Monroe to Richmond of the International League.

The Washington Senators and Detroit Tigers also had to reduce their squads by three. The Senators put catcher Clint Courtney on the disabled list because of his mumps, sold infielder Bobby Malkmus to Denver of the American Assn. and optioned pitcher Jack Kralick to Chattanooga of the Southern Assn.

The Tigers optioned pitcher George Susce, catcher Charles Lau and pitcher Hank Aguirre to Charleston of the American Assn.

Optioned players may be recalled on a 24-hour basis. Those put on the disabled list must stay out 30 days.

The two Chicago clubs were the last to get under the wire. The Cubs, one over, were waiting the results of a possible trade before placing Dick Drott on the disabled list or optioning outfielder Chick King.

Other moves:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Boston—optioned pitcher Herb Moford to Minneapolis of the American Assn.

Kansas City—Optioned outfielder Zeke Bella to Shreveport of the Southern Assn. John Tsitouris is a military returnee giving the A's 26.

Baltimore—Optioned pitcher Wes Stock to Miami of the International League.

Cleveland — Optioned catcher Dick Brown to Buffalo of the International League.

Chicago—Released outfielder Don Mueller outright and sent pitcher Claude Raymond to Wichita of the American Assn. First baseman Norm Cash is 26th man on military status.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Pittsburgh—Placed pitcher George Witt on the disabled list. Has R. C. Stevens from military, making 26 men.

Philadelphia — Optioned pitcher Chris Short to Buffalo of the International League.

Cincinnati — Optioned outfielder Bob Thurman to Omaha of the American Assn.

St. Louis—Sent pitcher Phil Clark outright to Omaha of the American Assn. Pitcher Tom Cheney and Bill White are service returness.

Milwaukee—Reached limit Friday when Red Schoendienst was placed on disabled list.

San Francisco—Reached limit previously. Jack Brandt carried as returning serviceman.

Los Angeles—Sent Jim Baxes to Spokane of Pacific Coast League.

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP)—The Southwest Conference found Saturday what it called an alarming increase in the number of athletic scholarships and delivered an ultimatum to athletic directors to keep them within "reasonable limits."

No action was taken on a proposed limit. Brt a committee studying scholarships was continued and will make another report at the conference's December meeting.

What the committee considers reasonable was not stated. Conference schools averege about 150 scholarships a year in all sports.

The committee said it is hoped the situation can be handled by the athletic directors but if it isn't, action will be taken.

Purkey Shuts Out Milwaukee, 3-0

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Bob Purkey of Cincinnati shut out the Milwaukee Braves on seven hits 3-0, handling Warren Spahn his fourth defeat. The victory moved the Reds into first place in the National League standings and dropped Milwaukee into second.

Purkey went the distance. The Reds have now beaten Spahn three times.

The Reds rapped out nine hits against the Braves, including a leadoff homer by Roy McMillan in the seventh inning.

It was Purkey's fourth victory against two losses.

Don McMahon replaced Spahn at the start of the ninth.

In the bottom of the ninth, Milwaukee collected a pair of hits, putting Henry Aaron on third base, but again the National League champions failed to score.

Spahn gave up only one hit—a third inning single by Johnny Temple — and issued only one walk through the first five innings. The 38-year-old veteran lefthander was making his second try for the 250th victory of his major league career.

With one out in the top of the sixth, Johnny Temple singled and Vada Pinson walked. Then Frank Robinson doubled down the left field line, sending Temple home and Pinson to third. After Frank Thomas fouled to Frank Torre, Spahn purposely passed Jim Pendleton, filling the bases. But the threat was ended when Gus Bell was called out on strikes.

Spahn reached second base in the Braves' half of the sixth when Pendleton dropped his fly ball, but Purkey retired the next three batters.

McMillan opened the seventh inning with his fourth home run of the season over the left field fence. After that the Redlegs filled the bases. Dutch Dotterer singled to center and Purkey attempted to sacrifice, but he forced dotterer, Spahn to Johnny Logan. With one out, Pinson moved Purkey to second with a single to left center and when Wes Covington fumbled, Purkey went to third and Pinson to second. Spahn purposely passed Robinson, filling the bases. Purkey scored when Thomas walked. The side wan retired as Pendleton forced Robinson at third.

ROUSE PITCHES WIN

Northeast Divides Twin Bill With SLI In Season Finale

By JIM CALHOUN
Staff Sports Writer

Jerry Rouse, Northeast righthander just out of the sickbed after a bout with the flu, scattered nine hits effectively for a 4-1 victory over Southwestern in the nightcap of a season-ending twin bill here Saturday afternoon, after rubber-armed Lee Castagnos and a 16-hit bombardment had downed the Tribe, 11-9, in the opener.

Castagnos, a bespectacled junk thrower, attempted a near-iron-man stint and almost succeeded, coming on in relief to win the first game and tossing 5 1-3 frames in the second battle before being shelled out. The durable righthander hurled nine innings Friday, stopping Gulf States Champion Louisiana Tech, 7-5.

The invading Bulldogs sprayed line drives to all fields in the opener off Indian starter Terry Reeves who gave way to Louis Kincaid in the sixth. SLI jumped into a quick 7-0 lead but Northeast, packing all its scoring in the middle three stanzas, bounded back to go ahead, 9-7. The Southwestern nine then pushed across three in the sixth and one insurance run in the seventh to put the game out of reach.

The invaders broke into the scoring column in the initial inning with some nifty base running after two were out. With Steve Gossen on third after Brackin's single, Brackin broke for second and stopped, drawing a throw from the catcher.

In the rundown, Gossen dashed across the plate to score just before Brackin was tagged out.

The Bulldogs batted around in the third, collecting six runs on five hits and a walk. Tommy Fernandez singled and Willie Baronet, Southwestern's slugging pitcher-leftfielder, moved him to third with a double. Gossen walked to load the sacks and Shelby Aulds, a West Monroe product flied out.

Singles by Tommy Levy, Brackin and Ellis Vincent and a sacrifice fly by Phil Arena made it 7-0.

Reeves started the Indian surge in the third with a base on balls. Harry Rushing tapped a single and James Mock cleared the bases with a long triple. Mock scored a moment later on Buddy O'Conner's sacrifice fly.

In the fourth, Coach George Luffey's Redskins batted around, chalking up four runs to tie the score. First baseman George Bryan, who had two hits in each game, led off with a towering 340-foot home run over the right field fence. Singles by Mitchell Hughes, Homer Rouse, Rushing, Mock and O'Conner and a fielder's choice by Eddie McGowan sent over three more tallies to knot the score.

With two men on, Gary Huckabay lined hard to short for the final out.

Bryan again began things for the Tribe in the fifth with a single and advanced on a sacrifice by Homer Rouse. McGowan's single brought him in and Reeves drove in McGowan with another hit.

Held scoreless since the third inning uprising, Southwestern teed off on Reeves again in the sixth. Four singles, a walk and an error plated three markers to put the Bulldogs in front to stay.

With Baronet on second after a ground-rule double in the seventh, Gossen poked a single to bring him home and climax the scoring.

Baronet collected four hits in four trips, including two doubles and pitched four innings before Castagnos in the fifth. Brackin and Gossen collected three hits apiece as did Hughes for Northeast.

The second game started out as a pitching duel between Castagnos and Jerry Rouse, but niether were around at the finish. Rouse made a game try, allowing only one run before departing in the seventh with the sacks loaded, but Collins came on to put out the fire.

The Indians scored first in the third inning on a walk to Ralph Ward and a double by Rushing, but the Bulldogs came right back with a run in the fourth.

Vincent doubled, went to third on a hit by Davis Madere and trotted in on a long fly by Baronett.

With Rouse hurling steadily, Northeast iced the game with two more runs in the fourth. Huckabay opened with a single and raced to third when Phil Petras got two bases on errors by Vincent.

Homer Rous slammed a single to score both runners

Hughes, Homer Rouse and Ward combined singles in the sixth to kayo Castagnos and add the final tally.

Souheastern made a last-minute gasp in the seventh, putting together three hits to load the bags but Collins, cool as a hired gunslinger took over for the tiring Rouse and got Levy on a fly and Brackin on a grounder for the last out.

Gossen had six hits in the twin bill for the Bulldogs, while Bryan, with a homer, triple and two singles, paced the Tribe at the plate.

BEHIND BUNNING

Hot Tigers Beat Kansas City, 7-4

DETROIT — The Detroit Tiggrs made it six out of seven for Manager Jimmie Dykes, beating the Kansas City Athletics Saturday 7-4 behind the 11-strikeout pitching of Jim Bunning.

The lanky right-hander had trouble in the first two innings as the A's broke into a 3-0 lead on Wayne Terwilliger's wind-blown homer and Bill Tuttle's two-run double.

But Bunning was in command the rest of the way as he won his second game—both for Dykes—against three early losses for Bill Norman, the deposed manager of the Tigers.

The A's, in losing their fifth straight game, committed repeated errors in helping the Tigers to four runs in the third inning—two of them unearned.

The Tigers weren't much better in the field, also committing three errors—with catcher Lou Berberet missing two consecutive foul pops by Hal Smith.

Bob Grim was the loser. He lasted only 2 1-3 innings. His record evened out at 3-3.

After Kansas City's early burst, Al Kaline led off the second for Detroit with his sixth homer. He knocked it into the lower right field seats.

The Tigers added two more runs before the inning was over. Harvey Kuenn tripled and came home on an infield out. Lou Berberet, who had walked, scored on a passed ball.

Detroit got its four runs in the third on only two hits—kuenn's single and a double by Osborne. Roger Maris dropped a fly ball to let in one run. Terwilliger fumbled a grounder to let in another. And pitcher Rip Coleman threw wildly to the plate to score a third.

Vern Morgan Leads Batting In Southern

ATLANTA (AP) — Vern Morgan of Chattanooga clung to his Southern Assn. batting lead during the past week, but Birmingham rookie Jay Cooke showed signs of wanting his No. 1 spot back.

Cooke, the second week's leader, trailed Morgan's leading .426 figure by only one point, according to figures released today by Howe News Bureau.

Nashville's Crawford Davidson, hitting at a better than .500 clip for the week, zoomed to .390 and took over third place. Also in the top five were Jay Hankins of Shreveport with .385 and Tookie Gilbert of New Orleans with .360. Gilbert led in home runs with nine and was second to Ultus Alvarez of Nashville in total bases with 58. Alvarez had 60.

Two Shreveport infielders, Al Grunwald and Lou Klimchock, shared the lead in two-base hits with nine.

Although languishing in the cellar, Shreveport led in team hitting with .289 to .284 for Nashville. However, the Sports trailed the league in fielding with a .957 mark, two points lower than Atlanta's .959. New Orleans led in team fielding with .979.

OKLAHOMA CITY OPEN

Palmer Overtakes Jacobs With Sparkling Subpar 67

By WILBUR JOHNSON

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Former Masters champion Arnold Palmer of Ligonier, Pa., came through with a sparkling 5-under-par 67 Saturday to take command of the $25,000 Oklahoma City Open Golf Tournament in the third round.

Palmer's 54-hole total of 204 was 14 shots under par for 54 holes over the 6,640 yard par 36-36—72 Twin Hills Country Club course. It gave him a two-stroke edge over young Tommy Jacobs of Whittier, Calif.

Jacobs started the third ruond with a 133 total and a four-shot bulge over Palmer. But he slipped to a 38 on the front nine to lose valuable ground and couldn't make up the defect coming home. He wound up with a 35 for a 73 and a 206 total.

Palmer, playing in a threesome with Jacobs and Oklahoma amateur champion Glen Fowler of Oklahoma City, turned on the heat on the back side with a 32. His card showed an eagle and four birdies on the home nine, but he also had two bogies which spoiled an otherwise brilliant performance.

Palmer ran in a 15-foot putt for a birdie on 10 sank a five-footer for another birdie on the 12th and then rammed home a 20-footer for his eagle on the 505-yard par 13th.

Another 10-footer dropped for a birdie on the 15th and a 12-footer found its mark in the 17th. His bogies came on the par three 14th where he caught a trap and the par four 18th where he twice went into the rough.

The field was bunched fairly evenly as it headed into Sunday's final round. Close on the heels of Palmer and Jacobs were Bob Goalby of Crystal River, Fla., and Don Fairifield of Casey, Ill., with 208 totals.

Fairfield was two under par at 70 while Goalby had to be satisfied with a 71.

Fowler, who gave up a professional career to become an insurance salesman, kept a home town gallery of some 5,000 persons on edge throughout the tense 18-hole struggle. His fine 72 which left him at 210 and an outside chance for top honors.

Best score of the day was manufactured by Wesley Ellis Jr., the Texas Open champion from Aldecress, N.J. He shot a 33-33—66 for a 54 hole total of 217.

Senators Batter Stumbling Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Right-hander Hal Griggs shackled the Yankees with two hits Saturday and Homerin' Harmon Killebrew clouted two more in pacing the charged-up Washington Senators to a 7-0 victory over the stumbling world champions.

Killebrew's ninth and tenth homers drove in four runs. Bob Allison hit his fifth home run for the Senators. It was the third time in eight games that Killebrew homered twic in the same game.

Grigg, a fastballing, six-footer, pitched hitless ball for the first 5 2-3 innings. Tony Kubek ruined his bid for a no-hitter by lining a single to center in the sixth.

Gil McDougald got the second Yankee hit with one out in the seventh. It was a smash through the middle that sent Griggs tumbling to the ground. Hal looked in danger when first baseman Julio Becquer fumbled Norm Siebern's roller.

But the 31 - year - old pitcher from Hickory, N. C., eased out the jam by starting a double play on Jerry Lumpe's grounder.

Griggs had the Yankees slicing, popping and rolling the ball with his fastballs and fast curves. Errors by Reno Bertoia on a grounder and Jim Lemon on Mickey Mantle's liner had Griggs in a jam in the first inning but he got Yogi Berra on a fly and McDougald on a pop. Hank Bauer walked with one out in the third but was picked off first.

Killebrew's first homer came off starter and loser Bob Turley in the first inning. His second, with two on, was belted off reliever Johnny Kucks in the eighth.

Two singles and Ron Samford's sacrifice fly made it 2-0 for Washington in the fifth. Allison's solo four-bagger in the sixth, a walk to Killebrew, Jim Lemon's single and a force play gave the Senators two more runs for a 4-0 lead.

It was the second straight victory for Griggs in a starting role and gave him a 2-0 record. He beat the league - leading Indians six days ago. Turley's r cord now is 3-4.

Witt Placed On Disabled List

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday cut to the legal roster limit by placing pitcher George Witt on the disabled list. He must remain on that list for a minimum of 30 days.

Witt's arm tightentd on him early in Friday night's game with the Philadelphia Phillies and later he was examined by Pirate physician Dr. Joseph Finegold. The trouble was diagnosed as a contused capsular ligament which has thickened, Dr. Finegold said it prevented complete extension and flexibility.

Witt will remain in Pittsburgh and work out daily. He has been ordered not to throw for at least ten days.

The Pirates roster now contains 25 players plus R. C. Stevens, who can be carried as a returnee from military service.

Northeast Divides Twin Bill With SLI In Season Finale

By JIM CALHOUN
Staff Sports Writer

Jerry Rouse, Northeast righthander just out of the sickbed after a bout with the flu, scattered nine hits effectively for a 4-1 victory over Southwestern in the nightcap of a season-ending twin bill here Saturday afternoon, after rubber-armed Lee Castagnos and a 16-hit bombardment had downed the Tribe, 11-9, in the opener.

Castagnos, a bespectacled junk thrower, attempted a near-iron-man stint and almost succeeded, coming on in relief to win the first game and tossing 5 1-3 frames in the second battle before being shelled out. The durable righthander hurled nine innings Friday, stopping Gulf States Champion Louisiana Tech, 7-5.

The invading Bulldogs sprayed line drives to all fields in the opener off Indian starter Terry Reeves who gave way to Louis Kincaid in the sixth. SLI jumped into a quick 7-0 lead but Northeast, packing all its scoring in the middle three stanzas, bounded back to go ahead, 9-7. The Southwestern nine then pushed across three in the sixth and one insurance run in the seventh to put the game out of reach.

The invaders broke into the scoring column in the initial inning with some nifty base running after two were out. With Steve Gossen on third after Brackin's single, Brackin broke for second and stopped, drawing a throw from the catcher.

In the rundown, Gossen dashed across the plate to score just before Brackin was tagged out.

The Bulldogs batted around in the third, collecting six runs on five hits and a walk. Tommy Fernandez singled and Willie Baronet, Southwestern's slugging pitcher-leftfielder, moved him to third with a double. Gossen walked to load the sacks and Shelby Aulds, a West Monroe product flied out.

Singles by Tommy Levy, Brackin and Ellis Vincent and a sacrifice fly by Phil Arena made it 7-0.

Reeves started the Indian surge in the third with a base on balls. Harry Rushing tapped a single and James Mock cleared the bases with a long triple. Mock scored a moment later on Buddy O'Conner's sacrifice fly.

In the fourth, Coach George Luffey's Redskins batted around, chalking up four runs to tie the score. First baseman George Bryan, who had two hits in each game, led off with a towering 340-foot home run over the right field fence. Singles by Mitchell Hughes, Homer Rouse, Rushing, Mock and O'Conner and a fielder's choice by Eddie McGowan sent over three more tallies to knot the score.

With two men on, Gary Huckabay lined hard to short for the final out.

Bryan again began things for the Tribe in the fifth with a single and advanced on a sacrifice by Homer Rouse. McGowan's single brought him in and Reeves drove in McGowan with another hit.

Held scoreless since the third inning uprising, Southwestern teed off on Reeves again in the sixth. Four singles, a walk and an error plated three markers to put the Bulldogs in front to stay.

With Baronet on second after a ground-rule double in the seventh, Gossen poked a single to bring him home and climax the scoring.

Baronet collected four hits in four trips, including two doubles and pitched four innings before Castagnos in the fifth. Brackin and Gossen collected three hits apiece as did Hughes for Northeast.

The second game started out as a pitching duel between Castagnos and Jerry Rouse, but niether were around at the finish. Rouse made a game try, allowing only one run before departing in the seventh with the sacks loaded, but Collins came on to put out the fire.

The Indians scored first in the third inning on a walk to Ralph Ward and a double by Rushing, but the Bulldogs came right back with a run in the fourth.

Vincent doubled, went to third on a hit by Davis Madere and trotted in on a long fly by Baronett.

With Rouse hurling steadily, Northeast iced the game with two more runs in the fourth. Huckabay opened with a single and raced to third when Phil Petras got two bases on errors by Vincent.

Homer Rous slammed a single to score both runners

Hughes, Homer Rouse and Ward combined singles in the sixth to kayo Castagnos and add the final tally.

Souheastern made a last-minute gasp in the seventh, putting together three hits to load the bags but Collins, cool as a hired gunslinger took over for the tiring Rouse and got Levy on a fly and Brackin on a grounder for the last out.

Gossen had six hits in the twin bill for the Bulldogs, while Bryan, with a homer, triple and two singles, paced the Tribe at the plate.

BEHIND BUNNING

Hot Tigers Beat Kansas City, 7-4

DETROIT — The Detroit Tigers made it six out of seven for Manager Jimmie Dykes, beating the Kansas City Athletics Saturday 7-4 behind the 11-strikeout pitching of Jim Bunning.

The lanky right-hander had trouble in the first two innings as the A's broke into a 3-0 lead on Wayne Terwilliger's wind-blown homer and Bill Tuttle's two-run double.

But Bunning was in command the rest of the way as he won his second game—both for Dykes—against three early losses for Bill Norman, the deposed manager of the Tigers.

The A's, in losing their fifth straight game, committed repeated errors in helping the Tigers to four runs in the third inning—two of them unearned.

The Tigers weren't much better in the field, also committing three errors—with catcher Lou Berberet missing two consecutive foul pops by Hal Smith.

Bob Grim was the loser. He lasted only 2 1-3 innings. His record evened out at 3-3.

After Kansas City's early burst, Al Kaline led off the second for Detroit with his sixth homer. He knocked it into the lower right field seats.

The Tigers added two more runs before the inning was over. Harvey Kuenn tripled and came home on an infield out. Lou Berberet, who had walked, scored on a passed ball.

Detroit got its four runs in the third on only two hits—kuenn's single and a double by Osborne. Roger Maris dropped a fly ball to let in one run. Terwilliger fumbled a grounder to let in another. And pitcher Rip Coleman threw wildly to the plate to score a third.

Vern Morgan Leads Batting In Southern

ATLANTA (AP) — Vern Morgan of Chattanooga clung to his Southern Assn. batting lead during the past week, but Birmingham rookie Jay Cooke showed signs of wanting his No. 1 spot back.

Cooke, the second week's leader, trailed Morgan's leading .426 figure by only one point, according to figures released today by Howe News Bureau.

Nashville's Crawford Davidson, hitting at a better than .500 clip for the week, zoomed to .390 and took over third place. Also in the top five were Jay Hankins of Shreveport with .385 and Tookie Gilbert of New Orleans with .360. Gilbert led in home runs with nine and was second to Ultus Alvarez of Nashville in total bases with 58. Alvarez had 60.

Two Shreveport infielders, Al Grunwald and Lou Klimchock, shared the lead in two-base hits with nine.

Although languishing in the cellar, Shreveport led in team hitting with .289 to .284 for Nashville. However, the Sports trailed the league in fielding with a .957 mark, two points lower than Atlanta's .959. New Orleans led in team fielding with .979.

OKLAHOMA CITY OPEN

Palmer Overtakes Jacobs With Sparkling Subpar 67

By WILBUR JOHNSON

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Former Masters champion Arnold Palmer of Ligonier, Pa., came through with a sparkling 5-under-par 67 Saturday to take command of the $25,000 Oklahoma City Open Golf Tournament in the third round.

Palmer's 54-hole total of 204 was 14 shots under par for 54 holes over the 6,640 yard par 36-36—72 Twin Hills Country Club course. It gave him a two-stroke edge over young Tommy Jacobs of Whittier, Calif.

Jacobs started the third ruond with a 133 total and a four-shot bulge over Palmer. But he slipped to a 38 on the front nine to lose valuable ground and couldn't make up the defect coming home. He wound up with a 35 for a 73 and a 206 total.

Palmer, playing in a threesome with Jacobs and Oklahoma amateur champion Glen Fowler of Oklahoma City, turned on the heat on the back side with a 32. His card showed an eagle and four birdies on the home nine, but he also had two bogies which spoiled an otherwise brilliant performance.

Palmer ran in a 15-foot putt for a birdie on 10 sank a five-footer for another birdie on the 12th and then rammed home a 20-footer for his eagle on the 505-yard par 13th.

Another 10-footer dropped for a birdie on the 15th and a 12-footer found its mark in the 17th. His bogies came on the par three 14th where he caught a trap and the par four 18th where he twice went into the rough.

The field was bunched fairly evenly as it headed into Sunday's final round. Close on the heels of Palmer and Jacobs were Bob Goalby of Crystal River, Fla., and Don Fairifield of Casey, Ill., with 208 totals.

Fairfield was two under par at 70 while Goalby had to be satisfied with a 71.

Fowler, who gave up a professional career to become an insurance salesman, kept a home town gallery of some 5,000 persons on edge throughout the tense 18-hole struggle. His fine 72 which left him at 210 and an outside chance for top honors.

Best score of the day was manufactured by Wesley Ellis Jr., the Texas Open champion from Aldecress, N.J. He shot a 33-33—66 for a 54 hole total of 217.

Senators Batter Stumbling Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Right-hander Hal Griggs shackled the Yankees with two hits Saturday and Homerin' Harmon Killebrew clouted two more in pacing the charged-up Washington Senators to a 7-0 victory over the stumbling world champions.

Killebrew's ninth and tenth homers drove in four runs. Bob Allison hit his fifth home run for the Senators. It was the third time in eight games that Killebrew homered twic in the same game.

Grigg, a fastballing, six-footer, pitched hitless ball for the first 5 2-3 innings. Tony Kubek ruined his bid for a no-hitter by lining a single to center in the sixth.

Gil McDougald got the second Yankee hit with one out in the seventh. It was a smash through the middle that sent Griggs tumbling to the ground. Hal looked in danger when first baseman Julio Becquer fumbled Norm Siebern's roller.

But the 31 - year - old pitcher from Hickory, N. C., eased out the jam by starting a double play on Jerry Lumpe's grounder.

Griggs had the Yankees slicing, popping and rolling the ball with his fastballs and fast curves. Errors by Reno Bertoia on a grounder and Jim Lemon on Mickey Mantle's liner had Griggs in a jam in the first inning but he got Yogi Berra on a fly and McDougald on a pop. Hank Bauer walked with one out in the third but was picked off first.

Killebrew's first homer came off starter and loser Bob Turley in the first inning. His second, with two on, was belted off reliever Johnny Kucks in the eighth.

Two singles and Ron Samford's sacrifice fly made it 2-0 for Washington in the fifth. Allison's solo four-bagger in the sixth, a walk to Killebrew, Jim Lemon's single and a force play gave the Senators two more runs for a 4-0 lead.

It was the second straight victory for Griggs in a starting role and gave him a 2-0 record. He beat the league - leading Indians six days ago. Turley's r cord now is 3-4.

Witt Placed On Disabled List

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday cut to the legal roster limit by placing pitcher George Witt on the disabled list. He must remain on that list for a minimum of 30 days.

Witt's arm tightentd on him early in Friday night's game with the Philadelphia Phillies and later he was examined by Pirate physician Dr. Joseph Finegold. The trouble was diagnosed as a contused capsular ligament which has thickened, Dr. Finegold said it prevented complete extension and flexibility.

Witt will remain in Pittsburgh and work out daily. He has been ordered not to throw for at least ten days.

The Pirates roster now contains 25 players plus R. C. Stevens, who can be carried as a returnee from military service.

SCORES EIGHT RUNS ON FOUR HITS

White Sox Take 9-5 Win Over First-Place Indians

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox scored eight runs on only four hits in the second and third innings for a 9-5 victory over the first-place Cleveland Indians Saturday.

Indian starter Herb Score and his immediate successor, Jim Perry, yielded six walks and a hit batsman in the two-inning span which sewed up the game for the White Sox and ended their five-game losing streak. It was Score's second defeat against two victories.

Ray Moore, who replaced Sox starter Barry Latman in the fourth, was the winner, scoring his first decision against two defeats.

The Sox needed only one hit to tally three runs in the second as they chased Score, who walked three and hit a batter before Perry replaced him.

Perry pitched only one ball in the second, but on the toss Chicago shortstop Luis Aparicio tried to steal home. Aparicio was called out at the plate and then ejected from the game by Umpire Joe Paparella for throwing dirt in protest.

Perry was just as wild as Score in Chicago's five-run third, giving three walks and a single to the first four batters. He was replaced by Gary Bell, who was rapped by Bubba Phillips for a two-run, ground rule double which bounced into the center field bullpen.

Chicago's Latman, who was seeking his first triumph after two defeats, was yanked after yielding four runs and six hits. The clincher was Jim Piersall's two-run double to the left-center field wall with two out in the fourth.

Moore did a fine relief job. He had a spot of trouble in the sixth, but surrendered only one run on three hits. Don Dillard's first major league hit pushed across the fifth Cleveland run.

The Sox picked up their ninth run in the eighth inning off Cleveland's third pitcher, Gary Bell. Against it was a walk which caused the damage as Nellie Fox strolled to open the inning. Fox reached third on Jim Landis' single and a long fly and then scored on Bell's balk.

The drawn-out game lasted 3 hours and 2 minutes and gave the White Sox a 4-2 record against the league leaders.

FOR CHAMPIONSHIP?

Cook, McKoin In Rematch Battle Here Tuesday Night

Hungry Clarence Cook and confident Johnny McKoin tangle at B & B Arena Tuesday night, a situation just the opposite of their last meeting here March 10.

Then Cook was the kingpin of Northeast Louisiana boxing, a fighter who had met—and beaten—some of the best in the business and had not been beaten by an area boxer since early in his long career.

Now, thanks to his knockout loss to McKoin in the sixth round, Cook has lost two bookings and needs a rematch win over Louisiana welterweight champion McKoin to get his career back on the track.

McKoin, like Cook, a Bastrop native, was behind on two score cards when he sent Cook to the floor with two punches in the sixth round of the March 10 bout.

Winner over Al Boudreaux of Westwego for the Monroe version of the state welterweight title, McKoin will be defending his title for the second time Tuesday—if Cook can make the 147-pound welter limit. Clarence made it for the March 10 bout.

If Cook makes the weight again, Tuesday's fight will be a 12-rounder for the title. If he doesn't, the fight will be slated for 10 rounds with nothing at stake except prestige but plenty of that. McKoin will come in at around 142 pounds.

With four prelims slated, Tuesday's ring card will start at 8 o'clock with the main event to go on at 9 o'clock in order to enable graveyard shift workers to see it.

Advance tickets sales are reported going well at Fink's Mens Store on DeSiard in Monroe and at the City C & A Club in Bastrop. Seats on the first three rows around ringside are selling for $4.00, rewerve seats for $3.00, general admission tickets for $2.00 and children from seven to 13 can get in for a dollar and children under seven free.

Promoter August Baumgartner yesterday announced two more four-round bouts to complete the supporting card.

Sam Rivers and Ed Harris, a couple of hard-hitting colored boys from around Bastrop, will tangle in one four-rounder. Both weigh around 140.

In the other bout announced, Cecil Sims of Bonita and Clyde Deal of Bastrop will meet. Both boys should tip the scales at around 150.

In a special exhibition, amateurs Bill McKoin, Johnny's kid brother, will fight Frankie Lewis. Both boys are from Bastrop. Bill has been working with his brother and Lewis has been taking some lessons from Cook.

Other prelims already scheduled will match unbeaten Ladell Pate of West Monroe against Denis Boney in a light weight bout and Henry Brock vs. Charles Williams in a middleweight contest.

OVER McNEESE

Tech Ends Slate By Taking Pair

RUSONT, La. (Special) —Gulf States Conference champion Louisiana Tech ended its baseball season on a winning note here Saturday by taking a pitcher's duel and a slugging match from McNeese, 3-1 and 12-10.

The wins gave Tech a 12-3 record for the season in the GSC and an 18-6 mark for the year. Tech also won the GSC title in 1958.

Lefthander Sonny Parker pitched four - hitter to best Billy Johnston in the first game. The Tech curveballer was in command all the way. Amos Ivey gave McNeese its only run with a two-out homer over the right center fence in the sixth.

McNeese outhomered the Techmen in the second game, three to one, but the Bulldogs sent over five runs in the bottom of the sixth to take a 12-9 lead and held on for the win.

Third sacker Charlie Stephens on hit a three-run homer to give McNeese a 7-6 lead in the wild game and catcher Lenny Kahn sent another pitch over the fence in the fifth for a 9-6 margin.

Tech scored one run in the fifth to narrow the count to 9-7 and their five-run rally, highlighted by a three-run homer by center fielder Charley Garris, gave them the lead for good in the sixth.

Howard Schmidt hit a solo homer in the seventh for McNeese's final run.

Freshman righthander Charles Fuller picked up the win for Tech in relief of starter Willie Williams. Johnny Riddle started and lost for McNeese.

Tech hurler Gareth Methvin, scheduled to pitch the second game for the Techmen, suffered a locked knee Friday while jogging around the outfield and the knee was still locked Saturday. Methvin is slated to undergo surgery sometime this week.

Norton Equals Dash Mark In Coast Relays

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — San Jose State's lithe Ray Norton equalled the world record of 9.3 seconds for the 100-yard dash in the preliminaries and went on to nip Texan Bobby Morrow with a 9.4 victory Saturday night in the West Coast Relays.

The 6-2 speedster caught the Olympic triple gold medal winner at the 50-yard mark in the final. They matched strides until the last 10, when Norton pulled inches ahead.

Norton's record-tying effort, the second of his career, came in the opening heat with a wind of 3.6 m.p.h., within the allowable limits. The 180-pounder seemed to ease up at the end of the race but one timer caught him in 9.2 and four had 9.3.

The long striding Spartan, a native of Tulsa, Okla., previously equalled Mel Patton's record on April 12, 1958, at San Jose, Calif. This year he did it again but with an aiding wind.

In duels with Morrow, Norton had come out victorious only once previously in five races.

Three false starts and one break came this time before starter Tom Moore finally sent the runners on their way.

Norton appeared slow off the blocks and Morrow, the former Abilene Christian ace, took the lead.

Norton moved up at the midway mark and the two, running in adjacent lanes, were shoulder to shoulder the rest of the way. Timers caught both in 9.4.

SCORES EIGHT RUNS ON FOUR HITS

White Sox Take 9-5 Win Over First-Place Indians

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox scored eight runs on only four hits in the second and third innings for a 9-5 victory over the first-place Cleveland Indians Saturday.

Indian starter Herb Score and his immediate successor, Jim Perry, yielded six walks and a hit batsman in the two-inning span which sewed up the game for the White Sox and ended their five-game losing streak. It was Score's second defeat against two victories.

Ray Moore, who replaced Sox starter Barry Latman in the fourth, was the winner, scoring his first decision against two defeats.

The Sox needed only one hit to tally three runs in the second as they chased Score, who walked three and hit a batter before Perry replaced him.

Perry pitched only one ball in the second, but on the toss Chicago shortstop Luis Aparicio tried to steal home. Aparicio was called out at the plate and then ejected from the game by Umpire Joe Paparella for throwing dirt in protest.

Perry was just as wild as Score in Chicago's five-run third, giving three walks and a single to the first four batters. He was replaced by Gary Bell, who was rapped by Bubba Phillips for a two-run, ground rule double which bounced into the center field bullpen.

Chicago's Latman, who was seeking his first triumph after two defeats, was yanked after yielding four runs and six hits. The clincher was Jim Piersall's two-run double to the left-center field wall with two out in the fourth.

Moore did a fine relief job. He had a spot of trouble in the sixth, but surrendered only one run on three hits. Don Dillard's first major league hit pushed across the fifth Cleveland run.

The Sox picked up their ninth run in the fourth inning off Cleveland's third pitcher, Gary Bell. Against it was a walk which caused the damage as Nellie Fox strolled to open the inning. Fox reached third on Jim Landis' single and a long fly and then scored on Bell's balk.

The drawn-out game lasted 3 hours and 2 minutes and gave the White Sox a 4-2 record against the league leaders.

FOR CHAMPIONSHIP?

Cook, McKoin In Rematch Battle Here Tuesday Night

Hungry Clarence Cook and confident Johnny McKoin tangle at B & B Arena Tuesday night, a situation just the opposite of their last meeting here March 10.

Then Cook was the kingpin of Northeast Louisiana boxing, a fighter who had met—and beaten—some of the best in the business and who had been unbeaten by an area boxer since early in his long career.

Now, thanks to his knockout loss to McKoin in the sixth round, Cook has lost two bookings and needs a rematch win over Louisiana welterweight champion McKoin to get his career back on the track.

McKoin, like Cook, a Bastrop native, was behind on two score cards when he sent Cook to the floor with two punches in the sixth round of the March 10 bout.

Winner over Al Boudreaux of Westwego for the Monroe version of the state welterweight title, McKoin will be defending his title for the second time Tuesday—if Cook can make the 147-pound welter limit. Clarence made it for the March 10 bout.

If Cook makes the weight again, Tuesday's fight will be a 12-rounder for the title. If he doesn't, the fight will be slated for 10 rounds with nothing at stake except prestige but plenty of that. McKoin will come in at around 142 pounds.

With four prelims slated, Tuesday's ring card will start at 8 o'clock with the main event to go on at 9 o'clock in order to enable graveyard shift workers to see it.

Advance tickets sales are reported going well at Fink's Mens Store on DeSiard in Monroe and at the City C & A Club in Bastrop. Seats on the first three rows around ringside are selling for $4.00, reverse seats for $3.00, general admission tickets for $2.00 and children from seven to 13 can get in for a dollar and children under seven free.

Promoter August Baumgartner yesterday announced two more four-round bouts to complete the supporting card.

Sam Rivers and Ed Harris, a couple of hard-hitting colored boys from around Bastrop, will tangle in one four-rounder. Both weigh around 140.

In the other bout announced, Cecil Sims of Bonita and Clyde Deal of Bastrop will meet. Both boys should tip the scales at around 150.

In a special exhibition, amateurs Bill McKoin, Johnny's kid brother, will fight Frankie Lewis. Both boys are from Bastrop. Bill has been working with his brother and Lewis has been taking some lessons from Cook.

Other prelims already scheduled will match unbeaten Ladell Pate of West Monroe against Denis Boney in a light weight bout and Henry Brock vs. Charles Williams in a middleweight contest.

Tech Ends Slate By Taking Pair

RUSONT, La. (Special) —Gulf States Conference champion Louisiana Tech ended its baseball season on a winning note here Saturday by taking a pitcher's duel and a slugging match from McNeese, 3-1 and 12-10.

The wins gave Tech a 12-3 record for the season in the GSC and an 18-6 mark for the year. Tech also won the GSC title in 1958.

Lefthander Sonny Parker pitched four - hitter to best Billy Johnston in the first game. The Tech curveballer was in command all the way. Amos Ivey gave McNeese its only run with a two-out homer over the right center fence in the sixth.

McNeese outhomered the Techmen in the second game, three to one, but the Bulldogs sent over five runs in the bottom of the sixth to take a 12-9 lead and held on for the win.

Third sacker Charlie Stephens on hit a three-run homer to give McNeese a 7-6 lead in the wild game and catcher Lenny Kahn sent another pitch over the fence in the fifth for a 9-6 margin.

Tech scored one run in the fifth to narrow the count to 9-7 and their five-run rally, highlighted by a three-run homer by center fielder Charley Garris, gave them the lead for good in the sixth.

Howard Schmidt hit a solo homer in the seventh for McNeese's final run.

Freshman righthander Charles Fuller picked up the win for Tech in relief of starter Willie Williams. Johnny Riddle started and lost for McNeese.

Tech hurler Gareth Methvin scheduled to pitch the second game for the Techmen, suffered a locked knee Friday while jogging around the outfield and the knee was still locked Saturday. Methvin is slated to undergo surgery sometime this week.

Did Bandits Lack Pep Friday Night?

By JACK OWENS

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Were the Chinese Bandits short of pep Friday night?

Did the Bandits' 13-0 loss in Louisiana State's intersquad game indicate the n a t i o n a l football champions have an abundance of off nse power in reserve?

The Bandits fell to a watered-down combine of the No. 1 White and No. 3 Go teams. All-America Billy Cannon and all-Southeastern Conference players Johnny Robinson and Warren Rabb were not in the lineup.

No college team has scored twice against the glamorous Bandits, who last year carried their own coterie of rooters.

But an LSU striking squad sparked by a sophomore and a junior, labeled the Purples, made two touchdowns at the Bandits, or Golds, expense.

Coach Paul Dietzel was conservative with his answers. But he said the Bandits were trying hard and the national champions had some potential power in reserve—which was far from being developed.

"I'm sure the Bandits didn't move the ball as good as they might have," Dietzel said. "But they were fighting hard. They fumbled eight times, you know."

"There was nothing spectacular about the game," he said. "It was just an ordinary spring game. This was only 60 minutes out of a period of 40 hours of spring practice."

But Dietzel admitted some of his players made a good showing in their first public appearance.

One was Wendell Harris, 185-pound halfback who will be a sophomore during the coming season. Under pressure he mentioned Merle Schexnaildre, 185 - pound fullback, and Melvin Branch, 210-pound tackle who made some shattering stops.

Harris, quarterback on last season's freshman team and a former Baton Rouge high ace, scored for the Purples on a 33-yard broken field run. He took rushing honors with 70 yards net in eight carries for a 6-7 yard averag. And he made a 30-yard run that put the ball on the one, from where veteran Durel Matherne plunged through to score.

Matherne, junior quarterback with game experience, was a Purple driving force.

Earl Gros, 210-pound sophomore back from Houma, La., had 50 yards rushing in 10 attempts and a 5-yard average.

How does Dietzel evaluate these youngsters?

Harris is a good probability as a running back, he said, and Gros is too, but not as versatile as Harris.

Shaughnessy Playoffs Back In Southern

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Southern Assn. directors voted Saturday to reinstate the Shaughnessy playoffs.

The action means that the playoffs will be held this year as in the past and not discontinued as previously decided by the directors.

League President Charlie Hurth said after the special meeting that the directors have no desire to continue the Dixie Series, in which the playoff winner meets the winner of the Texas League playoffs.

The league officials also voted to raise the player limit for each club from 18 to 19 for one year only.

The salary limit for each club was increased from $10,000 to $10,525 a month to provide for the additional player.

Hurth did not say how the directors voted on the proposals, but he commented that it was "a harmonious meeting."

He named a committee to work out details of the playoffs. Members are Owen Maritnez, Mobile, chairman; Eddie Glennon, Birmingham; and Bill McCarthy, Nashville.

Gold passes were given to officers of clubs with more than 25 years of service. They went to Jasper Donaldson, Atlanta, and Zinn Beck, Chattanooga.

Grid Eagles Ink Two Linemen

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles announced Saturday they had signed linemen Bill Striegel and Ed Cooke to 1959 National Football League contracts.

Striegel, from College of Pacific, was a top draft choice by the Eagles for the 1958 season but was out for the entire year with an injury suffered in practice with the college all-star squad. Cooke, a defensive end, started last year with the Chicago Bears and played his last seven games with the Eagles.

Nothing Keeps True Baltimore Fan From Park

BALTIMORE (AP)—Nothing—but nothing — keeps a true Baltimore Oriole fan away from the baseball game.

Police said 50 - year - old William Wann fell on a drinking glass in his apartment and punctured his chest. He hurriedly bandaged himself and went on to Friday night's Baltimore - Boston game.

Midway in the game, he began to bleed profusely and had to be taken to Union Memorial Hospital. He was treated and released.

Skinner Stars As Pittsburgh Beats Phillies

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Bob Skinner, who ended a long batting slump Friday night, rapped out two home runs and two singles in a perfect day Saturday as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-1.

Skinner had gone hitless in 30 times at bat before he doubled in the seventh inning of Friday night's game between the Pirates and Phillies. Philadelphia won the night game 9-1.

Skinner's thrilling hitting helped Ronnie Kline pick up his third victory against one defeat. Kline kept the Phillies scoreless for seven innings but weakened in the eighth.

Roberto Clemente added to the Pirate hitting power with two triples.

All of Skinner's hits and both Clemente's triples were off of losing pitcher Ruben Gomez, who figured in his first decision.

Four of the eight hits given up by Kline were singles by Granny Hamner who also had a perfect day.

The Pirates moved into the lead in the first inning when Clemente hit the first of his two triples and scored on Smoky Burgess' sacrifice fly.

Skinner opened the second inning with a single—his first of the afternoon, moved to second on Bill Mazeroski's sacrifice and scored on a hard hit single by Bill Virdon.

Gomez kept the game tight until the big seventh when with two out, Clemente connected for his second triple and started a four-run scoring spree.

Gomez was lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth — the inning the Phillies prevented a shutout by getting to Kline for three his and a run.

The Piraes added two more insurance runs in the eighth on three hits.

Skinners hits boosted his batting average from .105 to .164. He hit his singles in the second and fourth and homers in the sixth and seventh.

ELEVEN INNINGS

Dodgers Pin 6-5 Loss On 'Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Wally Moon's run-producing single and flawless relief pitching by Clem Labine gave the Los Angeles Dodgers an 11 inning 6-5 victory over San Francisco Saturday.

The victory moved the Dodgers into third place, 14 percentage points ahead of San Francisco.

Moon's single scored Junior Gilliam, who had singled and been sacrificed to second.

The Giants had made it 5-5 in the bottom of the ninth, costing Don Drysdale his second decision this week. He went 11 innings against Milwaukee Tuesday night. Each time he gave way to a pinch hitter.

Labine thus got his first triumph for pitching hitless ball for two innings. It also was his first win over the Giants since Aug. 9, 1955.

Gordon Jones, the fourth Giant hurler, was the loser.

A second successive sellout Seals Stadium crowd of 22,679 saw the Giants tie in the ninth on Andre Rodgers' single, a sacrifice and Willie Kirkland's sharp single.

In the first inning, Duke Snider's third homer of the season brought in Charlie Neal who had singled. Norm Larker followed with a 410-foot shot over the right center field fence.

The Giants bounced back for one in their half of the first when Kirkland walked, went to second when Willie Mays grounded out and scored on Leon Wagner's double.

The Dodgers picked up two more in the third on singles by Snider and John Roseboro, a hit batter and a force-out.

Drysdale hit Mays in the shoulder in the third, starting a two-run inning. Wagner's second hit sent Willie to third and he scored when Roseboro let a pitch get by him. Wagner came home on a single by Orlando Cepeda.

Two walks and pinch hitter Bot Speake's first hit of the year, a single, got the Giants their fourth run.

Smith Slams Two Homers As Cards Win

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Catcher Hal Smith slammed two homers good for five runs and Ken Boyer smacked a grand slam homer as the last-place St. Louis Cardinals erupted for an 11-1 triumph over the Chicago Cubs Saturday.

Larry Jackson, expected to be the top man on the Red Bird pitching staff this season, coasted to his first victory. He had lost four.

Smith's blasts both were to the left field bleachers, one in the fourth for three runs and another in the eighth for two runs. Smith now has five homers and leads the club. He had only eight in three previous major league seasons.

Boyer's grand slammer — the fourth of his major league career —topped the Cardinals' big seven-run eighth.

Jackson scattered seven hits. Smith's first homer knocked out starter Glen Hobbie, handing him his third defeat. He's won three.

The Cards had 15 hits as they took a 2-1 edge in the five-game series. A split of a doubleheader Sunday would give the Cards their first series victory all season.

Bayer Fined For Reckless Play In Meet

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—The Professional Golfers Assn. Saturday announced that three players competing in the Oklahoma City Open Golf Tournament had been assessed fines for conduct detrimental to the game.

George Bayer, recognized as golf's longest hitter, was fined $200 because he played two holes in reckless fashion in an apparent attempt to run his score higher.

He took a 10 on the par 3 fourteenth hole in Friday's second round on the Twin Hills Country Club course. He missed a short putt for a bogie and then hit the ball back handed six more times. He also took seven strokes on the 18th hole after being just off the green in two.

This gave him an 80 for the round and a 36-hole total of 153. It took a score of 152 or better to qualify for the final 36 holes.

Bayer left the course immediately after his round and said he was going to Little Rock and Hot Springs, Ark., where he would compete next week.

Stan, Ted To Receive Plaques

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Stan Musial and Ted Williams, two of baseball's greatest hitters, will be honored by the Pittsburgh Chapter of the Baseball Writers Assn. of America on the eve of the annual All-Star Game here July 7.

The veteran St. Louis and Boston Red Sox sluggers will be presented plaques by the chapter for their contribution to baseball. The awards will be made at a banquet attended by the biggest names in baseball and some Hall of Famers.

Yanks Purchase Rookie Pitcher From Athletics

KANSAS CITY (AP)—The Kansas City Athletics sold rookie pitcher Mark Freeman back to the New York Yankees Friday for an undisclosed price and the Yankees sent him to Seattle of the Pacific Coast League.

Freeman was obtained from the Yanks earlier this season in a trade for Jack Urban, who is now with Richmond of the International League.

For Kansas City, Freeman appeared in three games, pitched 3 2-3 innings, gave up 6 hits and 6 runs. His departure leaves the A's still one over the cut-down limit.

Ohio State U. Against Rose Bowl Contract

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State University trustees Friday voted 5-0 to approve a faculty council decision opposing future Rose Bowl participation by Ohio State football teams.

University President Novice G. Fawcett read the faculty council's March 10 decision and recommended the trustees approve the action.

Approval was given immediately with practically no discussion.

Trustee Carlton Dargusch of Columbus, who previously had said he opposed the faculty council's decision, said simply: "I cannot conscientiously vote for this." He remained silent when the roll was called.

Ohio State has won its last three New Year's Day Rose Bowl games in 1950, 1955 and 1958 in the course of the Big Ten's exclusive contract with the Pacific Coast Conference.

Layne Inks 12th Pro Grid Pact

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Quarterback Bobby Layne, who fired up the Pittsburgh Steelers with six victories and one tie in the last seven 1958 starts, signed his 1959 contract Saturday—his 12th in the National Football League.

The 32-year-old Texan was traded by the Detroit Lions to the ailing Steelers after the 1958 season had begun and started the Steelers on one of the biggest win streaks in their history. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

AT B AND B

Relay Bout Tops Wrestling Card

Most of the principals of last week's six - man relay riot will be back at B & B Arena Monday night without, they hope, the cops who had to break up the festivities last Monday.

Firpo Zybysko and Duke Scarbo, the former Black Menace who officiated last week and set off the brawl by disqualifying Harvey Cole, will tangle with Frankie Kovak and Al Massey tomorrow night in the main event.

Also on tap is a special event pitting newcomer Carlos Mendoza against haughty Prince Omar. The tag team fray will have a 90-minute limit with two falls to win and the special match will be over the hour or less route with two falls to win.

A 15 - minute match will open the card.

According to Wrestling Editor Pierce Young, a "paddy - wagon full of police reinforcement" finally ended last week's bout after fans, the wrestlers, referee Scarbo and cops started swinging.

Scarbo, fighting as the Black Menace, was unmasked in his last exhibition here s e v e r a l months ago. After getting in a blow or two last week as referee, Jim got a hankering to put on his wrestling togs again.

Duke's partner, Zyysko, is of Russian descent and arrived here at age 15. He has wrestled in England and France as well as America.

Kovak has been in this country for 2½ years and is of Polish descent. He speaks Polish, German, Hungarian and English. Twenty - five years old and still single, Kovak held the Polish amateur title in 1952.

Massey is an old favorite here. A pro grappler since 1944, Al wrestled Lou Thez for the world heavyweight title twice, losing once and drawing once.

Orioles Beat Bosox To Stay In 2nd Place

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two Boston miscues and four timely Baltimore hits in the first inning were enough to give the Orioles a 4-3 victory Saturday and keep Baltimore in second place in the American League standings.

After Oriole knuckleballer Hoyt Wilhelm weathered a rough start in the first, Baltimore came back to score four times and—as it turned out—sew up the win.

Willie Tasby doubled to right and went to third on Jackie Jensen's fielding error, then scored on Bob Boyd's single to center. Bob Nieman legged out an infield hit, then he and Boyd cut off another base on a throwing error by Don Buddin.

After a walk to Gus Triandos to fill the bases, Gene Woodling forced Triandos at second as Boyd scored. A single by Jim Finigan brought home Nieman, then a sacrifice fly by Billy Gardner scored Woodling.

After that outburst, Billy Hoeft, just traded to Boston from Detroit, tightened the reins and kept the Orioles in hand the rest of the way.

Boston out - hit Baltimort 10-6 but was unable to bunch the safeties.

The Red Sox threatened in both the sixth and seventh, each time on two singles. But good infield stops by Baltimore snubbed both budding rallies.

When Dick Gernert led off the Boston ninth with a single, Baltimore Manager Paul Richards reached back in the bullpen for Billy Loes, who got the side out on two foul pops and a fly.

Ole Fols In Debonair Win At Hollywood

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Ole Fols whipped a field of 10 other 3-year-olds Saturday in the $28,600 Debonair Stakes at Hollywood Park.

A crowd estimated at 42,700 turned out for the second day of the meeting and witnessed a great ride by Johnny Longden on the N.S. McCarthy chestnut colt.

The Helbush Farms' Friar Roach was second, beaten by less than half a length, and Howard B. Keck's Bagdad was third.

The time for the 6-furlong feature was 1:09 3-5.

The winner, a California colt who upset the Kentucky Derby champion, Tomy Lee, in the Breeders' Championship Stake at Santa Anita last winter, gave Longden his third victory of the afternoon and rewarded his owner with a net purse of $16,300.

Ole Fols paid $4.70, $3.60 and $2.80; Friar Roach, ridden by Bill Harmatz, $6.30 and $3.90, and Bagdad, ridden by George Taniguchi $3.10.

The sophomores got off to a good start, with Bagdad momentarily on top. The oddly named Djebah closed in, along with Fred W. Hooper's [illegible] in the dash down the back stretch.

That Chevy pickup may not win any beauty awards (till it's cleaned up). But it's sure walking off with the top prize for dependability. And that's standard Chevrolet procedure: Put a Chevy truck to work and it keeps on working until you quit. Not before.

We aren't claiming that every Chevrolet truck is turning out to be a miracle-worker and averaging 100,000 miles before a valve job. (Even though some are going 150,000!) You're sure to find, however, that you can't buy more truck dependability at any price. And that's borne out by the fact that more truck owners put their faith, and their payloads, in Chevrolets than in any other make.

Did Bandits Lack Pep Friday Night?

By JACK OWENS

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Were the Chinese Bandits short of pep Friday night?

Did the Bandits' 13-0 loss in Louisiana State's intersquad game indicate the national football champions have an abundance of off nse power in reserve?

The Bandits fell to a watered-down combine of the No. 1 White and No. 3 Go teams. All-America Billy Cannon and all-Southeastern Conference players Johnny Robinson and Warren Rabb were not in the lineup.

No college team has scored twice against the glamorous Bandits, who last year carried their own coterie of rooters.

But an LSU striking squad sparked by a sophomore and a junior, labeled the Purples, made two touchdowns at the Bandits, or Golds. expense.

Coach Paul Dietzel was conservative with his answers. But he said the Bandits were trying hard and the national champions had some potential power in reserve—which was far from being developed.

"I'm sure the Bandits didn't move the ball as good as they might have," Dietzel said. "But they were fighting hard. They fumbled eight times, you know."

"There was nothing spectacular about the game," he said. "It was just an ordinary spring game. This was only 60 minutes out of a period of 40 hours of spring practice."

But Dietzel admitted some of his players made a good showing in their first public appearance.

One was Wendell Harris, 185-pound halfback who will be a sophomore during the coming season. Under pressure he mentioned Merle Schexnaildre, 185 - pound fullback, and Melvin Branch, 210-pound tackle who made some shattering stops.

Harris, quarterback on last season's freshman team and a former Baton Rouge high ace, scored for the Purples on a 33-yard broken field run. He took rushing honors with 70 yards net in eight carries for a 6-7 yard averag. And he made a 30-yard run that put the ball on the one, from where veteran Durel Matherne plunged through to score.

Matherne, junior quarterback with game experience, was a Purple driving force.

Earl Gros, 210-pound sophomore back from Houma, La., had 50 yards rushing in 10 attempts and a 5-yard average.

How does Dietzel evaluate these youngsters?

Harris is a good probability as a running back, he said, and Gros is too, but not as versatile as Harris.

Midway in the game, he began to bleed profusely and had to be taken to Union Memorial Hospital. He was treated and released.

Skinner Stars As Pittsburgh Beats Phillies

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Bob Skinner, who ended a long batting slump Friday night, rapped out two home runs and two singles in a perfect day Saturday as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-1.

Skinner had gone hitless in 30 times at bat before he doubled in the seventh inning of Friday night's game between the Pirates and Phillies. Philadelphia won the night game 9-1.

Skinner's thrilling hitting helped Ronnie Kline pick up his third victory against one defeat. Kline kept the Phillies scoreless for seven innings but weakened in the eighth.

Roberto Clemente added to the Pirate hitting power with two triples.

All of Skinner's hits and both Clemente's triples were off of losing pitcher Ruben Gomez, who figured in his first decision.

Four of the eight hits given up by Kline were singles by Granny Hamner who also had a perfect day.

The Pirates moved into the lead in the first inning when Clemente hit the first of his two triples and scored on Smoky Burgess' sacrifice fly.

Skinner opened the second inning with a single—his first of the afternoon, moved to second on Bill Mazeroski's sacrifice and scored on a hard hit single by Bill Virdon.

Gomez kept the game tight until the big seventh when with two out, Clemente connected for his second triple and started a four-run scoring spree.

Gomez was lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth — the inning the Phillies prevented a shutout by getting to Kline for three his and a run.

The Piraes added two more insurance runs in the eighth on three hits.

Skinners hits boosted his batting average from .105 to .164. He hit his singles in the second and fourth and homers in the sixth and seventh.

Shaughnessy Playoffs Back In Southern

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Southern Assn. directors voted Saturday to reinstate the Shaughnessy playoffs.

The action means that the playoffs will be held this year as in the past and not discontinued as previously decided by the directors.

League President Charlie Hurth said after the special meeting that the directors have no desire to continue the Dixie Series, in which the playoff winner meets the winner of the Texas League playoffs.

The league officials also voted to raise the player limit for each club from 18 to 19 for one year only.

The salary limit for each club was increased from $10,000 to $10,525 a month to provide for the additional player.

Hurth did not say how the directors voted on the proposals, but he commented that it was "a harmonious meeting."

He named a committee to work out details of the playoffs. Members are Owen Maritnez, Mobile, chairman; Eddie Glennon, Birmingham; and Bill McCarthy, Nashville.

Gold passes were given to officers of clubs with more than 25 years of service. They went to Jasper Donaldson, Atlanta, and Zinn Beck, Chattanooga.

Grid Eagles Ink Two Linemen

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles announced Saturday they had signed linemen Bill Striegel and Ed Cooke to 1959 National Football League contracts.

Striegel, from College of Pacific, was a top draft choice by the Eagles for the 1958 season but was out for the entire year with an injury suffered in practice with the college all-star squad. Cooke, a defensive end, started last year with the Chicago Bears and played his last seven games with the Eagles.

Dodgers Pin 6-5 Loss On 'Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Wally Moon's run-producing single and flawless releif pitching by Clem Labine gave the Los Angeles Dodgers an 11 inning 6-5 victory over San Francisco Saturday.

The victory moved the Dodgers into third place, 14 percentage points ahead of San Francisco.

Moon's single scored Junior Gilliam, who had singled and been sacrificed to second.

The Giants had made it 5-5 in the bottom of the ninth, costing Don Drysdale his second decision this week. He went 11 innings against Milwaukee Tuesday night. Each time he gave way to a pinch hitter.

Labine thus got his first triumph for pitching hitless ball for two innings. It also was his first win over the Giants since Aug. 9, 1955.

Gordon Jones, the fourth Giant hurler, was the loser.

A second successive sellout Seals Stadium crowd of 22,679 saw the Giants tie in the ninth on Andre Rodgers' single, a sacrifice and Willie Kirkland's sharp single.

In the first inning, Duke Snider's third homer of the season brought in Charlie Neal who had singled. Norm Larker followed with a 410-foot shot over the right center field fence.

The Giants bounced back for one in their half of the first when Kirkland walked, went to second when Willie Mays grounded out and scored on Leon Wagner's double.

The Dodgers picked up two more in the third on singles by Snider and John Roseboro, a hit batter and a force-out.

Drysdale hit Mays in the shoulder in the third, starting a two-run inning. Wagner's second hit sent Willie to third and he scored when Roseboro let a pitch get by him. Wagner came home on a single by Orlando Cepeda.

Two walks and pinch hitter Bot Speake's first hit of the year, a single, got the Giants their fourth run.

Smith Slams Two Homers As Cards Win

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Catcher Hal Smith slammed two homers good for five runs and Ken Boyer smacked a grand slam homer as the last-place St. Louis Cardinals erupted for an 11-1 triumph over the Chicago Cubs Saturday.

Larry Jackson, expected to be the top man on the Red Bird pitching staff this season, coasted to his first victory. He had lost four.

Smith's blasts both were to the left field bleachers, one in the fourth for three runs and another in the eighth for two runs. Smith now has five homers and leads the club. He had only eight in three previous major league seasons.

Boyer's grand slammer — the fourth of his major league career—topped the Cardinals' big seven-run eighth.

Jackson scattered seven hits. Smith's first homer knocked out starter Glen Hobbie, handing him his third defeat. He's won three.

The Cards had 15 hits as they took a 2-1 edge in the five-game series. A split of a doubleheader Sunday would give the Cards their first series victory all season.

Bayer Fined For Reckless Play In Meet

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—The Professional Golfers Assn. Saturday announced that three players competing in the Oklahoma City Open Golf Tournament had been assessed fines for conduct detrimental to the game.

George Bayer, recognized as golf's longest hitter, was fined $200 because he played two holes in reckless fashion in an apparent attempt to run his score higher.

He took a 10 on the par 3 fourteenth hole in Friday's second round on the Twin Hills Country Club course. He missed a short putt for a bogie and then hit the ball back handed six more times. He also took seven strokes on the 18th hole after being just off the green in two.

This gave him an 80 for the round and a 36-hole total of 153. It took a score of 152 or better to qualify for the final 36 holes.

Bayer left the course immediately after his round and said he was going to Little Rock and Hot Springs, Ark., where he would compete next week.

Ohio State U. Against Rose Bowl Contract

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State University trustees Friday voted 5-0 to approve a faculty council decision opposing future Rose Bowl participation by Ohio State football teams.

University President Novice G. Fawcett read the faculty council's March 10 decision and recommended the trustees approve the action.

Approval was given immediately with practically no discussion.

Trustee Carlton Dargusch of Columbus, who previously had said he opposed the faculty council's decision, said simply: "I cannot conscientiously vote for this." He remained silent when the roll was called.

Ohio State has won its last three New Year's Day Rose Bowl games in 1950, 1955 and 1958 in the course of the Big Ten's exclusive contract with the Pacific Coast Conference.

Yanks Purchase Rookie Pitcher From Athletics

KANSAS CITY (AP)—The Kansas City Athletics sold rookie pitcher Mark Freeman back to the New York Yankees Friday for an undisclosed price and the Yankees sent him to Seattle of the Pacific Coast League.

Freeman was obtained from the Yanks earlier this season in a trade for Jack Urban, who is now with Richmond of the International League.

For Kansas City, Freeman appeared in three games, pitched 3 2-3 innings, gave up 6 hits and 6 runs. His departure leaves the A's still one over the cut-down limit.

Layne Inks 12th Pro Grid Pact

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Quarterback Bobby Layne, who fired up the Pittsburgh Steelers with six victories and one tie in the last seven 1958 starts, signed his 1959 contract Saturday—his 12th in the National Football League.

The 32-year-old Texan was traded by the Detroit Lions to the ailing Steelers after the 1958 season had begun and started the Steelers on one of the biggest win streaks in their history. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

AT B AND B

Relay Bout Tops Wrestling Card

Most of the principals of last week's six - man relay riot will be back at B & B Arena Monday night without, they hope, the cops who had to break up the festivities last Monday.

Firpo Zybysko and Duke Scarbo, the former Black Menace who officiated last week and set off the brawl by disqualifying Harvey Cole, will tangle with Frankie Kovak and Al Massey tomorrow night in the main event.

Also on tap is a special event pitting newcomer Carlos Mendoza against haughty Prince Omar. The tag team fray will have a 90-minute limit with two falls to win and the special match will be over the hour or less route with two falls to win.

A 15 - minute match will open the card.

According to Wrestling Editor Pierce Young, a "paddy - wagon full of police reinforcement" finally ended last week's bout after fans, the wrestlers, referee Scarbo and cops started swinging.

Scarbo, fighting as the Black Menace, was unmanked in his last exhibition here several months ago. After getting in a blow or two last week as referee, Jim got a hankering to put on his wrestling togs again.

Duke's partner, Zyysko, is of Russian descent and arrived here at age 15. He has wrestled in England and France as well as America.

Kovak has been in this country for 2½ years and is of Polish descent. He speaks Polish, German, Hungarian and English. Twenty - five years old and still single, Kovak held the Polish amateur title in 1952.

Massey is an old favorite here. A pro grappler since 1944, Al wrestled Lou Thez for the world heavyweight title twice, losing once and drawing once.

Orioles Beat Bosox To Stay In 2nd Place

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two Boston miscues and four timely Baltimore hits in the first inning were enough to give the Orioles a 4-3 victory Saturday and keep Baltimore in second place in the American League standings.

After Oriole knuckleballer Hoyt Wilhelm weathered a rough start in the first, Baltimore came back to score four times and—as it turned out—sew up the win.

Willie Tasby doubled to right and went to third on Jackie Jensen's fielding error, then scored on Bob Boyd's single to center. Bob Nieman legged out an infield hit, then he and Boyd cut off another base on a throwing error by Don Buddin.

After a walk to Gus Triandos to fill the bases, Gene Woodling forced Triandos at second as Boyd scored. A single by Jim Finigan brought home Nieman, then a sacrifice fly by Billy Gardner scored Woodling.

After that outburst, Billy Hoeft, just traded to Boston from Detroit, tightened the reins and kept the Orioles in hand the rest of the way.

Boston out - hit Baltimort 10-6 but was unable to bunch the safeties.

The Red Sox threatened in both the sixth and seventh, each time on two singles. But good infield stops by Baltimore snubbed both budding rallies.

When Dick Gernert led off the Boston ninth with a single, Baltimore Manager Paul Richards reached back in the bullpen for Billy Loes, who got the side out on two foul pops and a fly.

Ole Fols In Debonair Win At Hollywood

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Ole Fols whipped a field of 10 other 3-year-olds Saturday in the $28,600 Debonair Stakes at Hollywood Park.

A crowd estimated at 42,700 turned out for the second day of the meeting and witnessed a great ride by Johnny Longden on the N.S. McCarthy chestnut colt.

The Helbush Farms' Frair Roach was second, beaten by less than half a length, and Howard B. Keck's Bagdad was third.

The time for the 6-furlong feature was 1:09 3-5.

The winner, a California colt who upset the Kentucky Derby champion, Tomy Lee, in the Breeders' Championship Stake at Santa Anita last winter, gave Longden his third victory of the afternoon and rewarded his owner with a net purse of $16,300.

Ole Fols paid $4.70, $3.60 and $2.80; Friar Roach, ridden by Bill Harmatz, $6.30 and $3.90, and Bagdad, ridden by George Tanicuchi $3.10.

The sophomores got off to a good start, with Bagdad momentarily on top. The oddly named Djebah closed in, along with Fred W. Hooper's [illegible] in the dash down the back stretch.

Chevy pickup pulls through "bottomless" pastures to keep stock fed!

At the Hall Bros. Dairy Farm, Montgomery, Ala., they say this 4-wheel drive Chevy will go anywhere to keep stock fed—even through hub-deep muck that makes it a fight all the way. And get after a full year of it—no mechanical trouble of any kind!

That Chevy pickup may not win any beauty awards (till it's cleaned up). But it's sure walking off with the top prize for dependability. And that's standard Chevrolet procedure. Put a Chevy truck to work and it keeps on working until you say quit. Not before.

We aren't claiming that every Chevrolet truck is turning out to be a miracle-worker and averaging 100,000 miles before a valve job. (Even though some are going 150,000!) You're sure to find, however, that you can't buy more truck dependability at any price. And that's borne out by the fact that more truck owners put their faith, and their payloads, in Chevrolets than in any other make.

Take your load and schedule figures to your Chevrolet dealer. He'll specify the best way to handle both and save in the bargain.

No job's too tough for a Chevrolet truck!

Now's the time—see your local authorized Chevrolet dealer for a real truck buy!

Geneva Reflects Cold War Spirit

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Some of the world's top diplomats flew into Geneva Saturday talking peace. But the Big Four foreign ministers meeting which opens Monday looks far more like a battle in the cold war than a peace conference.

Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev is on the offensive and has been ever since last Nov. 27, when he gave the United States, Britain and France six months to get out of West Berlin or see the Soviet Union make a separate German peace treaty.

President Eisenhower and other Western leaders, including his new secretary of state, Christian A. Herter, are on the defensive. They have not produced any plan for wresting the initiative from Khrushchev. The very fact that the Geneva conference is being held gives evidence so far of the success of Khrushchev's carrot-and-stick diplomacy. The Western purpose in coming to Geneva is to try to prevent Khrushchev from going to the brink of war over Berlin.

In this limited and narrow sense the conference is likely to be successful. Khrushchev, informed diplomats agree, in eager to get agreement to a summit conference. The minimum Western price for a summit conference probably will be that Khrushchev do nothing in the meantime to upset the status of West Berlin. His present Geneva representative, Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, is expected to be able to give that minimum assurance.

The conference table will provide a rugged testing place for Herter. His predecessor, John Foster Dulles, wan a life-long diplomat as well as lawyer and a serious student of communism. He was the man who brought "brinksmannhip" into its own as a cold war technique and was a master of this deadly art of staring down the other fellow. In dealing with Soviet negotiators such as Gromyko, Former Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, and Khrushchev himself, Dulles was a tough, hard-boiled antagonist.

Herter is untried in the big time. He has said he will follow Dulles' policies. But no one can say how, in the days just ahead, Dulles would have applied those policies. It is certain that Dulles would have dominated the Western side of the negotiations. It seems equally certain that Herter, a new man of unknown resources, cannot do so.

For the Western powers the next three or four weeks will be a time of great peril. They are fundamentally divided over the German issues Moscow has raised. Gromyko must be expected to try to exploit this difference of approach, to widen the gap and split the North Atlantic alliance. Western diplomats nay he cannot succeed, but they are extremely sensitive to the weakness in their own ranks.

Italy Backing U.S. As Top West Leader

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Italian Ambassador Manlio Brosio told a news conference Saturday that Italy trusts the United States as the strongest leader in the Atlantic allies and has dedicattd its armed forces to keeping world peace.

Brosio, making his first visit to Mississippi, said Italy has nine combat divisions, 5½ reserve divisions, a modern navy and missiles.

Italians are a peaceful people," he said. "But we are convinced that peace can only be defended if the country is able to defend it."

Referring to Russian demands upon the free world, Brosio said the Russians "are doing what sensible men do: they propose what they want, what is in thtir best interests.

"That is what we should do.

"We should not suggest what we suppose the Russians would accept."

Brosio opposed the abandonment of West Berlin on several grounds.

But aside from all other grounds, he said, "If the west allowed Berlin to go, that would be the first step to withdrawal from other points. There would be no reason for Russia to stop at Berlin.

"It would be the beginning of a series of defeats which the west can not and should not stand."

The ambassador, visiting Mississippi at the invitation of Sen. James Eastland (D-Miss), toured Vicksburg and Natchez Saturday and scheduled a visit to the gulf coast Sunday.

Chairman Hopes To End Strauss Hearings Soon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.) says he hopes his Senate Commerce Committee will take concrete action early next week on the long-delayed confirmation of Lewis L. Strauss to be commerce secretary.

Magnuson ordered a speed-up in committee hearings on the appointment. The inquiry has been held off and on since March. Strauss, former chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, has been serving on a recess appointment since November.

Magnuson pressed for faster action after a vote on the nomination was further delayed by a row Friday over charges that special committee counsel Kenneth A. Cox was partisan. The chairman defended Cox against the accusation, leveled by Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.)

Cox conceded to Scott that he discussed in advance the testimony to be given by physicist David L. Hill who opposed the Strauss appointment.

The world merchant marine fleet grew by 7,787,650 tons in 1958, according to Lloyd's Register of Shipping, which said this was the largest annual increase since 1948.

TO WIN '60 NOMINATION

Rockefeller Told Hard Fight Ahead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Milton R. Young (R-N.D.) asserted Saturday that New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller can't win the Republican presidential nomination without a fight.

He said in an interview that Rockefeller, now vacationing in Caracas, Venezuela, was talking like a "draft" candidate only.

The New York Chief Executive puzzled some Republicans who favor Vice President Richard M. Nixon for the nomination by his latest statement on the impending contest. He told newsmen:

"Any decision regarding whether or not I would accept the nomination could not be made until such time as the nomination is offered. If and when the party decides to nominate me, then and there I'll decide on my action."

To many Rockefeller appeared to be saying he would not enter pre - convention presidential primaries or otherwise openly seek the nomination. Some thought it was a statement he might regret months from now.

One Republican in the camp of GOP front-runner Nixon observed that the vice president's supporters look on the 1900 contest as "a horse race from start to finish" and that Rockefeller's latest utterance doesn't change anything.

Nixon backers remember the way the Eisenhower stretch drive in 1952 washed out all the pre-convention work of the late Sen. Robert A. Taft. But they think their man has far more public support at this pre - convention point than Taft had eight years ago.

Young said of the governor's statement: "It sounds like he's a candidate—for a draft nomination. But I don't think he could get the nomination without fighting for it. And I think Nixon han been forging ahead steadily for the past two years."

Nixon backers are trying to improve his favored position slowly, with open campaign efforts not likely to blossom until late this year.

By that time the vice president will have attracted more national and international attention with his trip to Moscow and conferences with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and other Soviet officials. Present plans call for a jet flight to the Soviet capital, where Nixon opens the American National Exhibition on July 25.

Until his current Venezuelan vacation, Rockefeller has stuck to his new job in Albany. He is to be the honored guest on June 11 at the Capitol Hill Club here, a social meeting place for Republican members of Congress and other GOP leaders.

Rep. James C. Auchincloss (R-N.J.), club founder, said Nixon will be invited to attend the stag affair along with other club members. He added that Rockefeller, a life member since 1951, is being honored as have others at previous club dinners.

Auchincloss said there'll be "no politics" in the event. But Rockefeller's visit is expected to turn on the automatic political spotlight as only a Washington visit can.

Churchill Keeps Morning-In-Bed Schedule In N.Y.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sir Winston Churchill stuck to his usual morning - in - bed schedule Saturday at the Manhattan home of Bernard Baruch.

Baruch, who stepped out for a walk, told newsmen that the 84-year-old former prime minister was reading the newspapers, smoking cigars and having a "little something on the side."

BY CALLING ON FBI

Governor Loses Some Popularity

JACKSON, Miss., May 9(UPI)—Gov. J. P. Coleman lost many supporters in Mississippi by calling for the FBI to enter the Poplarville lynch case.

But his action was a shrewd public relations move that caused the rest of the nation to blame only the mob, rather than the whole state, for the lynching.

The FBI has entered many cases over loud, vicious protests from governors and other state officials and there is little doubt it would have moved into poplarville without Coleman's invitation.

But the governor's request served to show the rest of the world that the state does not favor mob violence.

A great number of Mississippians don't want the mob members arrested. A great number don't like the idea of cooperating with the Federal government. Disapproval of Coleman's request has been heard throughout the state but political candidates avoid mentioning the touchy issue in public appearances.

Gubernatorial candidate Ross Barnett and Carroll Gartin have not commented on it but candidate Charles Sullivan, when contacted, continued his policy of commenting on anything that comes along.

"I don't personally know that it was necessary to call FBI agents and open the county up to them," said Sullivan. "Anyhow, such requests should come from local officers rather than the governor."

The actions of Coleman have some effect on Gartin's campaign in view of Coleman's support for him and workers in Gartin's camp have privately expressed concern over the results of Coleman's actions in the lynch case.

The Vicksburg NAACP chapter and another Negro group, the Jackson Progressive Voters League, have publicly commended Coleman for his handling of the matter and Mississippi politicians welcome such commendations about like they would welcome Nikita Kruschev's public blessings.

Rare kind words for Mississippi were expressed by President Eisenhower during a news conference following the lynching and his comments were probably the direct result of Coleman's request and statements.

The President said he was confident that state and Federal authorities would find a way to punish the persons guilty of the lynching.

The incident at Poplarville immediately touched off congressional demands for a stronger Federal anti - lynching law but Eisenhower said he didn't think such a law was needed. He said an existing Mississippi law had been violated and pointed out that state officials had asked and received help from the FBI.

The President and Coleman exchanged telegrams expressing cooperation of state and nation. Coleman said Mississippians "appreciate the assistance" of the Federal government and Eisenhower replied to thank Coleman for his comments.

Sen. Phillip Hart, a Michigan Democrat, introduced an "anti - lynching" bill last week but he was quick to point out the bill was not meant to be critical of Mississippi authorities.

Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.) is a strong Civil Rights advocate and the target of much criticism from Mississippi. But he announced he was "gratified by the report that the FBI and the governor are acting promptly to uphold law and order."

Mayor Calls For End Of N.Y. Strike

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mayor Robert F. Wagner called both sides together Saturday in an effort to end a strike by workers at six New York hospitals.

Officials of the striking Retail Drug Employes Union charged that sanitary conditions at the private, non-profit hospitals were deteriorating rapidly.

"Reports we have are that the places are filthy, bathrooms have not been washed, and there is litter and garbage lying around," said a union spokesman.

The Greater New York Hospital Assn. denied the charge. A spokesman said volunteer were helping to keep conditions normal at the hospitals, which have a total of about 2,700 patients.

The strikers were service workers such as orderlies, kitchen help nurse's aids, elevator operators, and porter. Doctors and nurses were not involved in the strike.

The strike was called Friday in support of a demand for union recognition and higher pay. The union said 3,800 workers — or about 90 per cent of the hospital's workers — were on strike. The Hospital association said only about 15 per cent had left their jobs.

At one hospital, doctors were observed rolling patients into operating rooms — a job normally done by orderlies.

Frozen TV dinners were being served occasionaly because of a shortage of kitchen help. Waste baskets were overflowing because porters were absent. Girls who normally carry the food trays also were on strike.

Volunteers, including Dowagers, relatives of patients and the wives of doctors, pitched into help at suck tasks as cooking, washing dishes and mopping floors. There appeared to be a plentiful supply of doctors. Some were in white uniforms and others in street clothes.

There also appeared to be more nurses on duty, although the new York State Nurses Assn. steering a neutral course in the dispute, said its members would not assume any duties normally performed by the strikers.

The union claimed that Beth David Hospital was limiting admissions to emergency patients. It said the other hospitals—Beth Israel, Mount Sinai, Lenox Hill, Brooklyn Jewish and Bronx—in effect, were doing the same thing.

The union said it was ready to provide emergency services to any of the hospitals. It said a doctor at Brooklyn Jewish Hospital asked for a laboratory technician for Monday, and one was assigned.

Labor Chiefs Give Views On Jobless

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The AF-CIO asserted Saturday there is "real danger" the nation will face steady unemployment of 3½ to 4 million despite a strong business upturn.

Organized labor's views were presented in "Economic Trends and Outlook" published by the AFL-CIO economic policy committee.

This forecast contrasted sharply with views of Eisenhower administration spokesmen. They expect April unemployment figures to show a dramatic drop from the March total of 4,362,000.

AFL - CIO economists said 5.8 per cent of the labor force was idle in March, eleven months after the low-point of the 1958 business slump. This compared with unemployment of 4.1 per cent and 4.5 per cent 11 months after the two other postwar recessions.

The publication said that Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, who vowed to eat his hat if joblessness did not drop to 3 million by October, probably would not have to chew his fedora.

"He failed to point our however," they noted, "that October is the seasonal low point for unemployment and that 3 million jobless in October means over 4 million jobless in January and February."

AFL-CIO leaders said they are concerned because the increased number of persons hunting for work is becoming to be accepted as normal by the administration.

Average unemployment was 2 million, or about 3 per cent of the labor force, in the relatively prosperous years from 1951 to 1953, the publication said.

"Following the 1958 recession, there is a real danger that the number of jobless will settle at 3½ million to 4 million, or 5 to 5½ per cent of the labor force."

Administration predictions that the nation's total output of goods and services will rise to a yearly rate of 480-485 billion dollars do not mean unemployment will dwindle, the AFL-CIO said.

Most of the pickup would result from rising productivity and longer hours of work, it said, adding that because of the one million newcomers expected to join the labor force this year, unemployment probably would not fall below 3½ million.

The AFL-CIO urged the government to increase jobless benefits, relax tight-money policies, increase spending on public works and launch a vast program of loans and grants to distressed areas.

Geneva Reflects Cold War Spirit

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Some of the world's top diplomats flew into Geneva Saturday talking peace. But the Big Four foreign ministers meeting which opens Monday looks far more like a battle in the cold war than a peace conference.

Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev is on the offensive and has been ever since last Nov. 27, when he gave the United States, Britain and France six months to get out of West Berlin or see the Soviet Union make a separate German peace treaty.

President Eisenhower and other Western leaders, including his new secretary of state, Christian A. Herter, are on the defensive. They have not produced any plan for wresting the initiative from Khrushchev. The very fact that the Geneva conference is being held gives evidence so far of the success of Khrushchev's carrot-and-stick diplomacy. The Western purpose in coming to Geneva is to try to prevent Khrushchev from going to the brink of war over Berlin.

In this limited and narrow sense the conference is likely to be successful. Khrushchev, informed diplomats agree, in eager to get agreement to a summit conference. The minimum Western price for a summit conference probably will be that Khrushchev do nothing in the meantime to upset the status of West Berlin. His present Geneva representative, Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, is expected to be able to give that minimum assurance.

The conference table will provide a rugged testing place for Herter. His predecessor, John Foster Dulles, wan a life-long diplomat as well as lawyer and a serious student of communism. He was the man who brought "brinksmannhip" into its own as a cold war technique and was a master of this deadly art of staring down the other fellow. In dealing with Soviet negotiators such as Gromyko, Former Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, and Khrushchev himself, Dulles was a tough, hard-boiled antagonist.

Herter is untried in the big time. He has said he will follow Dulles' policies. But no one can say how, in the days just ahead, Dulles would have applied those policies. It is certain that Dulles would have dominated the Western side of the negotiations. It seems equally certain that Herter, a new man of unknown resources, cannot do so.

For the Western powers the next three or four weeks will be a time of great peril. They are fundamentally divided over the German issues Moscow has raised. Gromyko must be expected to try to exploit this difference of approach, to widen the gap and split the North Atlantic alliance. Western diplomats nay he cannot succeed, but they are extremely sensitive to the weakness in their own ranks.

Italy Backing U.S. As Top West Leader

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Italian Ambassador Manlio Brosio told a news conference Saturday that Italy trusts the United States as the strongest leader in the Atlantic allies and has dedicattd its armed forces to keeping world peace.

Brosio, making his first visit to Mississippi, said Italy has nine combat divisions, 5½ reserve divisions, a modern navy and missiles.

Italians are a peaceful people," he said. "But we are convinced that peace can only be defended if the country is able to defend it."

Referring to Russian demands upon the free world, Brosio said the Russians "are doing what sensible men do: they propose what they want, what is in thtir best interests.

"That is what we should do.

"We should not suggest what we suppose the Russians would accept."

Brosio opposed the abandonment of West Berlin on several grounds.

But aside from all other grounds, he said, "If the west allowed Berlin to go, that would be the first step to withdrawal from other points. There would be no reason for Russia to stop at Berlin.

"It would be the beginning of a series of defeats which the west can not and should not stand."

The ambassador, visiting Mississippi at the invitation of Sen. James Eastland (D-Miss), toured Vicksburg and Natchez Saturday and scheduled a visit to the gulf coast Sunday.

Chairman Hopes To End Strauss Hearings Soon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.) says he hopes his Senate Commerce Committee will take concrete action early next week on the long-delayed confirmation of Lewis L. Strauss to be commerce secretary.

Magnuson ordered a speed-up in committee hearings on the appointment. The inquiry has been held off and on since March. Strauss, former chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, has been serving on a recess appointment since November.

Magnuson pressed for faster action after a vote on the nomination was further delayed by a row Friday over charges that special committee counsel Kenneth A. Cox was partisan. The chairman defended Cox against the accusation, leveled by Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.)

Cox conceded to Scott that he discussed in advance the testimony to be given by physicist David L. Hill who opposed the Strauss appointment.

The world merchant marine fleet grew by 7,787,650 tons in 1958, according to Lloyd's Register of Shipping, which said this was the largest annual increase since 1948.

TO WIN '60 NOMINATION

Rockefeller Told Hard Fight Ahead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Milton R. Young (R-N.D.) asserted Saturday that New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller can't win the Republican presidential nomination without a fight.

He said in an interview that Rockefeller, now vacationing in Caracas, Venezuela, was talking like a "draft" candidate only.

The New York Chief Executive puzzled some Republicans who favor Vice President Richard M. Nixon for the nomination by his latest statement on the impending contest. He told newsmen:

"Any decision regarding whether or not I would accept the nomination could not be made until such time as the nomination is offered. If and when the party decides to nominate me, then and there I'll decide on my action."

To many Rockefeller appeared to be saying he would not enter pre - convention presidential primaries or otherwise openly seek the nomination. Some thought it was a statement he might regret months from now.

One Republican in the camp of GOP front-runner Nixon observed that the vice president's supporters look on the 1900 contest as "a horse race from start to finish" and that Rockefeller's latest utterance doesn't change anything.

Nixon backers remember the way the Eisenhower stretch drive in 1952 washed out all the pre-convention work of the late Sen. Robert A. Taft. But they think their man has far more public support at this pre - convention point than Taft had eight years ago.

Young said of the governor's statement: "It sounds like he's a candidate—for a draft nomination. But I don't think he could get the nomination without fighting for it. And I think Nixon han been forging ahead steadily for the past two years."

Nixon backers are trying to improve his favored position slowly, with open campaign efforts not likely to blossom until late this year.

By that time the vice president will have attracted more national and international attention with his trip to Moscow and conferences with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and other Soviet officials. Present plans call for a jet flight to the Soviet capital, where Nixon opens the American National Exhibition on July 25.

Until his current Venezuelan vacation, Rockefeller has stuck to his new job in Albany. He is to be the honored guest on June 11 at the Capitol Hill Club here, a social meeting place for Republican members of Congress and other GOP leaders.

Rep. James C. Auchincloss (R-N.J.), club founder, said Nixon will be invited to attend the stag affair along with other club members. He added that Rockefeller, a life member since 1951, is being honored as have others at previous club dinners.

Auchincloss said there'll be "no politics" in the event. But Rockefeller's visit is expected to turn on the automatic political spotlight as only a Washington visit can.

Churchill Keeps Morning-In-Bed Schedule In N.Y.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sir Winston Churchill stuck to his usual morning - in - bed schedule Saturday at the Manhattan home of Bernard Baruch.

Baruch, who stepped out for a walk, told newsmen that the 84-year-old former prime minister was reading the newspapers, smoking cigars and having a "little something on the side."

BY CALLING ON FBI

Governor Loses Some Popularity

JACKSON, Miss., May 9(UPI)—Gov. J. P. Coleman lost many supporters in Mississippi by calling for the FBI to enter the Poplarville lynch case.

But his action was a shrewd public relations move that caused the rest of the nation to blame only the mob, rather than the whole state, for the lynching.

The FBI has entered many cases over loud, vicious protests from governors and other state officials and there is little doubt it would have moved into poplarville without Coleman's invitation.

But the governor's request served to show the rest of the world that the state does not favor mob violence.

A great number of Mississippians don't want the mob members arrested. A great number don't like the idea of cooperating with the Federal government. Disapproval of Coleman's request has been heard throughout the state but political candidates avoid mentioning the touchy issue in public appearances.

Gubernatorial candidate Ross Barnett and Carroll Gartin have not commented on it but candidate Charles Sullivan, when contacted, continued his policy of commenting on anything that comes along.

"I don't personally know that it was necessary to call FBI agents and open the county up to them," said Sullivan. "Anyhow, such requests should come from local officers rather than the governor."

The actions of Coleman have some effect on Gartin's campaign in view of Coleman's support for him and workers in Gartin's camp have privately expressed concern over the results of Coleman's actions in the lynch case.

The Vicksburg NAACP chapter and another Negro group, the Jackson Progressive Voters League, have publicly commended Coleman for his handling of the matter and Mississippi politicians welcome such commendations about like they would welcome Nikita Kruschev's public blessings.

Rare kind words for Mississippi were expressed by President Eisenhower during a news conference following the lynching and his comments were probably the direct result of Coleman's request and statements.

The President said he was confident that state and Federal authorities would find a way to punish the persons guilty of the lynching.

The incident at Poplarville immediately touched off congressional demands for a stronger Federal anti - lynching law but Eisenhower said he didn't think such a law was needed. He said an existing Mississippi law had been violated and pointed out that state officials had asked and received help from the FBI.

The President and Coleman exchanged telegrams expressing cooperation of state and nation. Coleman said Mississippians "appreciate the assistance" of the Federal government and Eisenhower replied to thank Coleman for his comments.

Sen. Phillip Hart, a Michigan Democrat, introduced an "anti - lynching" bill last week but he was quick to point out the bill was not meant to be critical of Mississippi authorities.

Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.) is a strong Civil Rights advocate and the target of much criticism from Mississippi. But he announced he was "gratified by the report that the FBI and the governor are acting promptly to uphold law and order."

Mayor Calls For End Of N.Y. Strike

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mayor Robert F. Wagner called both sides together Saturday in an effort to end a strike by workers at six New York hospitals.

Officials of the striking Retail Drug Employes Union charged that sanitary conditions at the private, non-profit hospitals were deteriorating rapidly.

"Reports we have are that the places are filthy, bathrooms have not been washed, and there is litter and garbage lying around," said a union spokesman.

The Greater New York Hospital Assn. denied the charge. A spokesman said volunteer were helping to keep conditions normal at the hospitals, which have a total of about 2,700 patients.

The strikers were service workers such as orderlies, kitchen help nurse's aids, elevator operators, and porter. Doctors and nurses were not involved in the strike.

The strike was called Friday in support of a demand for union recognition and higher pay. The union said 3,800 workers — or about 90 per cent of the hospital's workers — were on strike. The Hospital association said only about 15 per cent had left their jobs.

At one hospital, doctors were observed rolling patients into operating rooms — a job normally done by orderlies.

Frozen TV dinners were being served occasionaly because of a shortage of kitchen help. Waste baskets were overflowing because porters were absent. Girls who normally carry the food trays also were on strike.

Volunteers, including Dowagers, relatives of patients and the wives of doctors, pitched into help at suck tasks as cooking, washing dishes and mopping floors. There appeared to be a plentiful supply of doctors. Some were in white uniforms and others in street clothes.

There also appeared to be more nurses on duty, although the new York State Nurses Assn. steering a neutral course in the dispute, said its members would not assume any duties normally performed by the strikers.

The union claimed that Beth David Hospital was limiting admissions to emergency patients. It said the other hospitals—Beth Israel, Mount Sinai, Lenox Hill, Brooklyn Jewish and Bronx—in effect, were doing the same thing.

The union said it was ready to provide emergency services to any of the hospitals. It said a doctor at Brooklyn Jewish Hospital asked for a laboratory technician for Monday, and one was assigned.

Labor Chiefs Give Views On Jobless

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The AF-CIO asserted Saturday there is "real danger" the nation will face steady unemployment of 3½ to 4 million despite a strong business upturn.

Organized labor's views were presented in "Economic Trends and Outlook" published by the AFL-CIO economic policy committee.

This forecast contrasted sharply with views of Eisenhower administration spokesmen. They expect April unemployment figures to show a dramatic drop from the March total of 4,362,000.

AFL - CIO economists said 5.8 per cent of the labor force was idle in March, eleven months after the low-point of the 1958 business slump. This compared with unemployment of 4.1 per cent and 4.5 per cent 11 months after the two other postwar recessions.

The publication said that Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, who vowed to eat his hat if joblessness did not drop to 3 million by October, probably would not have to chew his fedora.

"He failed to point our however," they noted, "that October is the seasonal low point for unemployment and that 3 million jobless in October means over 4 million jobless in January and February."

AFL-CIO leaders said they are concerned because the increased number of persons hunting for work is becoming to be accepted as normal by the administration.

Average unemployment was 2 million, or about 3 per cent of the labor force, in the relatively prosperous years from 1951 to 1953, the publication said.

"Following the 1958 recession, there is a real danger that the number of jobless will settle at 3½ million to 4 million, or 5 to 5½ per cent of the labor force."

Administration predictions that the nation's total output of goods and services will rise to a yearly rate of 480-485 billion dollars do not mean unemployment will dwindle, the AFL-CIO said.

Most of the pickup would result from rising productivity and longer hours of work, it said, adding that because of the one million newcomers expected to join the labor force this year, unemployment probably would not fall below 3½ million.

The AFL-CIO urged the government to increase jobless benefits, relax tight-money policies, increase spending on public works and launch a vast program of loans and grants to distressed areas.

ON FLORIDA PENINSULA

New Governmental Plan Links Cities

By CHRIS MACGILL

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Twenty-six municipalities lie scattered in the sun at the tip of the Florida Peninsula.

From the air, they look almost like one big city. But until a short while ago they had little in common except sunshine.

Now all of them — from tiny Indian Creek (pop. 50) to Miami (pop. 290,000) — are linked by a new governmental concept nicknamed Metro.

Dade County, a sprawling giant with a population of 850,000, had been a chaos of jurisdictions for years. These overlapped in some areas, provided almost no governmental services in others. Concern over the situation began growing nearly 20 years ago.

Today a form of government previously unknown in the United States is emerging slowly from theory into practice. Its name is Metropolitan Dade County.

Metro has been likened to the federal government, with the cities representing the states. It won't turn Dade County into a single city. It won't take over functions the municipalities are performing adequately.

But just as the federal government looks out for the welfare of the whole nation, so will Metro see to the orderly operation of services needed by the county as a whole. In addition, it will meet the needs of unincorporated areas, some as thickly settled as if they were cities.

It sounds simple. Actually, it's so revolutionary it is described as the nation's boldest experiment in metropolitan government.

Why is it so bold? Because it represent one of the most difficult achievements in American politics — an overthrow of the status quo.

The idea has been around so long no one can say who fathered it. Most civic groups urged it for years. But before it could take effect the Legislature had to approve and Florida voters had to ratify an amendment to the state constitution giving Dade County so-called home rule.

Even after the amendment passed, there was endless litigation and several more battles at the polls. Most municipal officials and employes, fearful of losing authority or their jobs under the new system, opposed it.

County Manager O.W. Campbell, a $35,000-a-year official who with the 11-man Metro Commission, has the job of making the new system work.

An important piece of spadework is under way now. A team of property assessors is surveying the county. Eventually — next year or the year after — all property will be assessed equally. At present, taxes vary more with location than with the actual worth of a building or piece of land. The information also will provide the basis for a county zoning system.

Good water service and adequate sewage disposal are other countywide goals. These facilities are excellent in some areas, erratic in others — "a completely absurd hodgepodge," says Campbell.

Metro is anxious to improve public transportation. The county now has nine bus lines plus a swarm of jitneys — automobiles which follow routes and make stops.

Campbell hopes Metro can buy the major transit companies and then absorb or buy out the smaller ones. He said an integrated operation would allow improved service without increasing fares.

Central purchasing is another money saving possibility.

A uniform traffic code has been adopted and already is partially effective.

Even after the amendment

PRE-WAR ACTION

Stalin Purge Is Condemned

MOSCOW (UPI)—A new Soviet history of World War II blames the 1936-38 Moscow political purges for weakening the Soviet armed forces on the eve of the Nazi German invasion.

The book says the trials contributed to "catastrophe" for the Russians in the first days of the war.

When Hitler struck in June, 1940. "theoretically and practically a considerable part of the (Soviet) command did not conform fully to the demand of a modern major war," the history states.

The book, "A History of the Second World War 1939-1945," says the "situation stemmed mainly from the fact that in pre-war years the band of Heinrich Yagoda, Nikolai Yezhov and Lavrenti Beria (three former security police chiefs) were worming their way into J. V. Stalin's confidence."

It blames the three for destroying a "considerable part of the top officer corps of the armed forces, thus doing enormous damage to our army's battle readiness."

The book thus makes what is believed to be the first admission that the purge of Soviet deputy commander - in - chief Marshal Tukhachevsky, Far East Commander Marshal Bluecker, chief of staff Marshall Yegorov and other military leaders on treason charges was partly responsible for Russia's initial war-time reverses.

The volume, written by a group of Soviet officers under the editorship of Lt. Gen S. P. Platonov, notes that the government adopted a military reorganization plan.

"However, for a number of reasons having mainly to do with J.V. Stalin's mistakes in appraising the pre-war situation and miscalculations in charting the probable date of the Fascist German aggression against the U.S.S.R." the book says, "serious lags occured in the industrial shift to production of new military technology and weapons. . . ."

In the first stage of fighting the Russians were under-trained and outnumbered and Soviet units were less mobile than the enemy's, the history recounts, adding:

"A considerable part of our tanks and most of our planes were inferior to the Germans."

"Even in this difficult situation the Soviet army could have prevented the catastrophe which occurred in the first days of the war or reduced its proportions to a significant degree . . . .if frontier units had been warned in time . . .Since this was not done, the enemy attacked our homeland and took border troops by surprise."

TEEN-AGERS ON THEIR OWN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Most retailers report that teenagers do more buying on their own these days than in the past. Boys particularly buy clothes unaccompanied by parents.

The storekeepers believe this trend is traceable to rising incomes of the younger set, and the great increase in the number of working mothers.

PRE-WAR ACTION

Stalin Purge Is Condemned

MOSCOW (UPI)—A new Soviet history of World War II blames the 1936-38 Moscow political purges ior weakening the Soviet armed forces on the eve of the Nazi German invasion.

The book says the trials contributed to "catastrophe" for the Russians in the first days of the war.

When Hitler struck in June, 1940. "theoretically and practically a considerable part of the (Soviet) command did not conform fully to the demand of a modern major war," the history states.

The book, "A History of the Second World War 1939-1945." says the "situation stemmed mainly from the fact that in pre-war years the band of Heinrich Yagoda, Nikolai Yezhov and Lavrenti Beria (three former security police chiefs) were worming their way into J. V. Stalin's confidence."

It blames the three for destroying a "considerable part of the top officer corps of the armed forces, thus doing enormous damage to our army's battle readiness."

The book thus makes what is believed to be the first admission that the purge of Soviet deputy commander - in - chief Marshal Tukhachevsky, Far East Commander Marshal Bluecker, chief of staff Marshall Yegorov and other military leaders on treason charges was partly responsible for Russia's initial war-time reverses.

The volume, written by a group of Soviet officers under the editorship of Lt. Gen S. P. Platonov, notes that the government adopted a military reorganization plan.

"However, for a number of reasons having mainly to do with J.V. Stalin's mistakes in appraising the pre-war situation and miscalculations in charting the probable date of the Fascist German aggression against the U.S.S.R." the book says, "serious lags occured in the industrial shift to production of new military technology and weapons. . . ."

In the first stage of fighting the Russians were under-trained and outnumbered and Soviet units were less mobile than the enemy's, the history recounts, adding:

"A considerable part of our tanks and most of our planes were inferior to the Germans."

"Even in this difficult situation the Soviet army could have prevented the catastrophe which occurred in the first days of the war or reduced its proportions to a significant degree . . . .if frontier units had been warned in time . . .Since this was not done, the enemy attacked our homeland and took border troops by surprise."

LEUKEMIA - X-RAY LINK?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —Doctors at the University of California found in a survey that 251 children with leukemia had had more exposure to medical x-rays than did boys and girls who did not develop leukemia.

ON FLORIDA PENINSULA

New Governmental Plan Links Cities

By CHRIS MACGILL

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Twenty-six municipalities lie scattered in the sun at the tip of the Florida Peninsula.

From the air, they look almost like one big city. But until a short while ago they had little in common except sunshine.

Now all of them — from tiny Indian Creek (pop. 50) to Miami (pop. 290,000) — are linked by a new governmental concept nicknamed Metro.

Dade County, a sprawling giant with a population of 850,000, had been a chaos of jurisdictions for years. These overlapped in some areas, provided almost no governmental services in others. Concern over the situation began growing nearly 20 years ago.

Today a form of government previously unknown in the United States is emerging slowly from theory into practice. Its name is Metropolitan Dade County.

Metro has been likened to the federal government, with the cities representing the states. It won't turn Dade County into a single city. It won't take over functions the municipalities are performing adequately.

But just as the federal government looks out for the welfare of the whole nation, so will Metro see to the orderly operation of services needed by the county as a whole. In addition, it will meet the needs of unincorporated areas, some as thickly settled as if they were cities.

It sounds simple. Actually, it's so revolutionary it is described as the nation's boldest experiment in metropolitan government.

Why is it so bold? Because it represent one of the most difficult achievements in American politics — an overthrow of the status quo.

The idea has been around so long no one can say who fathered it. Most civic groups urged it for years. But before it could take effect the Legislature had to approve and Florida voters had to ratify an amendment to the state constitution giving Dade County so-called home rule.

Even after the amendment passed, there was endless litigation and several more battles at the polls. Most municipal officials and employes, fearful of losing authority or their jobs under the new system, opposed it.

County Manager O.W. Campbell, a $35,000-a-year official who with the 11-man Metro Commission, has the job of making the new system work.

An important piece of spadework is under way now. A team of property assessors is surveying the county. Eventually — next year or the year after — all property will be assessed equally. At present, taxes vary more with location than with the actual worth of a building or piece of land. The information also will provide the basis for a county zoning system.

Good water service and adequate sewage disposal are other countywide goals. These facilities are excellent in some areas, erratic in others — "a completely absurd hodgepodge," says Campbell.

Metro is anxious to improve public transportation. The county now has nine bus lines plus a swarm of jitneys — automobiles which follow routes and make stops.

Campbell hopes Metro can buy the major transit companies and then absorb or buy out the smaller ones. He said an integrated operation would allow improved service without increasing fares.

Central purchasing is another money saving possibility.

A uniform traffic code has been adopted and already is partially effective.

Even after the amendment

Council Lauds Churches For Novel Pledge

On recent Sunday mornings, worshippers in Minneapolis churches have found in their pews a new kind of pledge card.

Above the signature line are these words:

"I will welcome into my neighborhood any person of good character, regardless of race, color or national origin."

The sponsorship of this pledge by the Greater Minneapolis Council of Churches is no isolated phenomenon. It is part of a growing movement in U.S. churches to break down the barriers of residential segregation that bar Negroes from the suburbs and other desirable areas of virtually all American cities, in the North and West no less than in the Deep South.

The tactics used in this drive vary from one community to another. In Palo Alto, Santa Clar and several other California cities, churches are circulating pledge cards similar to those used in Minneapolis.

WELCOME NEIGHBORS

In Philadelphia, Hartford, Conn., Lincoln, Neb., and Champaign, Ill., churches have helped to obtain hundreds of signatures for full - page newspaper advertisements proclaiming the willingness of the signers to have Negro families for neighbors.

An Ann Arbor, Mich., and many other communities, churches have asked their members to sign "open occupancy convenants"—a reverse twist on the restrictive real estate covenants that have continued to bar Negroes from all-white neighborhoods long after they were held unenforceable in court.

Denver churches organized a bus tour of the city so that members could see for themselves the pattern of housing segregation—and its usual result of confining minority groups to the less-desirable areas of town.

In Princeton, N.J., all members of the pastors' association backed—with their own money as well as their endorsement a newly-organized corporation to develop integrated housing projects.

Christian Church Missions School Closes Today

The last session of the "School of Missions" which has been in progress for the last six weeks, at the First Christian Church, will close this Sunday night.

Attendance has been excellent and much interest has been shown in all age groups. Missions of the Disciples of Christ around the world has been the theme.

The Sunday's program will be in the nature of an evaluation period, each department will share with the entire group what they have learned.

Everyone is urged to come out and make this the best of the series.

DR. IRMA HIGHBAUGH

Family Week Speaker Set By Methodists

National Family Week, May 10-17, will be observed by the First Methodist Church of Monroe with a series of talks by Dr. Irma Highbaugh, retired missionary.

Dr. George W. Pomeroy, pastor of the church, announced the schedule of events for the week as follows:

Dr. Highbaugh will speak at the morning worship period today at 11 a.m. and at the family night supper at 5:30 p.m. Following this, she will meet with college students.

On Monday, Dr. Highbaugh will meet with senior youth. On Tuesday she will meet with parents of pre-school children at 10 a.m. and speak to the women's society at noon. She will address the Wesleyan Service Guild at 6:30 p.m.

On Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Dr. Highbaugh will speak at the parents' meeting on the topic, "Home —Haven or Hubbub."

On Thursday, she will hold a discussion with parents of preschool children at 10 a.m. and give a second presentation of "Home — Haven or Hubbub" at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Irma Highbaugh is a retired Methodist missionary with forty years of service. The first thirty-two years of service were spent in North China doing rural work among the churches of that area. After the Communists took over in China, she was loaned by the board of missions of the Methodist Church to the International Missionary Council, as a field representative in home and family life. She was in this position eight years helping to train the church leaders in this field and spent from six months to one year in each of these countries, Japan, Malaya, Thailand, Indonesia and Ceylon.

Dr. Highbaugh holds her A. B. and an honorary degree from Baker University; an M. A. degree from Boston University in religious education and sociology, and a Ph. D. degree from Cornell University in the special field of child development and family relationships. She is the author of three books: "A Source Book on Home and Family Life," "Family Life in West China," and "We Grow in the Family."

State President

Miss Emily Kay Ensminger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Ensminger of Monroe, was elected president of all Presbyterian student activities in the state at the annual conference held recently at Clinton, La. Mrs. Marcus Mapp, director, and six other students from the Northeast Presbyterian student group attended the meeting.

DR. PRESTON BRADLEY

Local Church To Hear Talk By Dr. Bradley

A nationally known author, lecturer and commentator will speak at the morning worship service next Sunday at the Covenant Presbyterian Church in Monroe. Rev. Wayne Gray, pastor, announced today.

Dr. Preston Bradley of Chicago, whose latest book, "Happiness Through Creative Living," was third on the best-seller list within two weeks after publication was scheduled to speak at the local church Sunday, May 17.

As an orator, Dr. Bradley is recognized throughout the nation and he has probably more friends among Jewish people, the Roman Catholic Church and all branches of Protestantism than any other minister in the Chicago pulpit.

He is widely known as a counselor in all personal and personality and adjustment problems of people everywhere.

His method of speaking is unique in that he never uses notes or a manuscript and does all of his work extemporaneously. He held the office of president of the Chicago Liberal Ministers' Association for five years and was one of the founders of the Izaak Walton League of America.

Twice he has been invited to become a candidate for the mayoralty of Chicago and also was offered the nomination for Congressman at Large for the State of Illinois.

Youth Leader To Speak At W.M. Church

REV. JOHN BAKER

Rev. John Baker, Central Regional Director of Free Methodist Youth, will be the featured speaker on May 11-17 at the West Monroe Free Methodist church.

Rev. Baker was chosen to fill the position of regional director for the youth of the denomination on the basis of his successful program of youth work in the state of Florida. He graduated from the John Wesley Seminary Foundation at Wilmore, Kentucky in 1953. Throughout his college and seminary career he traveled the East and Midwest representing his schools as a member of male quartets and gospel teams. Mr. Baker is a tenor voice and is an accomplished soloist.

Rev. Baker is an exceptionally talented speaker and singer, having been featured at youth rallies, youth revivals, youth camps and as a missionary speaker throughout the denomination. The public is cordially invited to attend the services at the West Monroe Free Methodist church which is located at the corner of Lincoln and McGuire streets.

Council Lauds Churches For Novel Pledge

On recent Sunday mornings, worshippers in Minneapolis churches have found in their pews a new kind of pledge card.

Above the signature line are these words:

"I will welcome into my neighborhood any person of good character, regardless of race, color or national origin."

The sponsorship of this pledge by the Greater Minneapolis Council of Churches is no isolated phenomenon. It is part of a growing movement in U.S. churches to break down the barriers of residential segregation that bar Negroes from the suburbs and other desirable areas of virtually all American cities, in the North and West no less than in the Deep South.

The tactics used in this drive vary from one community to another. In Palo Alto, Santa Clar and several other California cities, churches are circulating pledge cards similar to those used in Minneapolis.

WELCOME NEIGHBORS

In Philadelphia, Hartford, Conn., Lincoln, Neb., and Champaign, Ill., churches have helped to obtain hundreds of signatures for full-page newspaper advertisements proclaiming the willingness of the signers to have Negro families for neighbors.

In Ann Arbor, Mich., and many other communities, churches have asked their members to sign "open occupancy convenants"—a reverse twist on the restrictive real estate covenants that have continued to bar Negroes from all-white neighborhoods long after they were held unenforceable in court.

Denver churches organized a bus tour of the city so that members could see for themselves the pattern of housing segregation—and its usual result of confining minority groups to the less-desirable sections of town.

In Princeton, N.J., all members of the pastors' association backed—with their own money as well as their endorsement a newly-organized corporation to develop integrated housing projects.

The buildings will be of brick veneer construction. Paul Stewart is the architect, George W. Wade is chairman of the building committee and H. W. Freeman is the church treasurer. All members, former members and friends are invited to attend this service.

Christian Church Missions School Closes Today

THE HOME SHIFT

Tulip Tree Has Lots To Offer

By MILDRED SWIFT

The real tulip tree should be in bloom now. Peggy Garnett (1606 North Second, Monroe) has a tree in her side yard. You can see this from the street. I wouldn't say there's anything particularly outstanding about the tree. The leaves almost cover the blossoms. But, oh, those blossoms. They are a delightful chartreuse and are perfectly gorgeous in arrangements and corsages. No California orchid ever had more to offer.

The tree is a fairly fast grower. I believe it belongs to the poplar family. So — it is worth while planting for a shade tree.

GARDEN TIPS

Don't worry if gardenias and American hollys lose their leaves. This is characteristic of both plants. They'll put them back on mighty fast.

When you use sawdust for mulch, add a sprinking of nitrogen before spreading it. As the sawdust decays, it uses nitrogen. If there is not enough nitrogen present, this mulch will rob the soil and the plant suffers.

There are many causes for azalea leaves turning yellow. First— a shortage of several minerals. (Have your soil tested.) Another cause — starvation. Are you feeding these plants at least once a year?

(Never later than June.)

Poor drainage will cause sick azaleas. If the plant is too deep, it suffers. Every year we add mulch. This mulch decays. After six or eight years, the roots are too deep. You know azaleas send their roots up for food and moisture.

The solution — raise the plant. Or, if you don't care to do that this year, pull the mulch back and lightly pull some of the soil away. Don't do his unless you can see that the plant is too deep.

Did you ever notice leaves on your camellias turning a beautiful shade of rose? This is natural. Soon those leaves will drop. But — when the leaves turn yellow with dark green spots, this is an indication of shortage of potash. The correction for this is muriate of potash.

DIE BACK

We find die back in most all plants. Until recent years the cause has not been known. Now the horticulturists find it can be caused by injury or growing conditions. They say when the soil is too light or the plant too deep, the roots just can't get very much food. Therefore, the plant prunes itself by feeding only part of the plant and letting the other parts die.

The treatment for die back is always prune past the dead parts into the green wood. Cover cut area with a seal. Correct the growing condition by loosening the soil and raising the plant. There's another form of die back caused by a disease organism. The treatment is the same.

Have you planted your imperial candle trees? These are in the nurseries. They don't grow too much until the weather gets very warm. This tree will give lots of pleasure during the summer when there's not too much bloom. The blossoms are lovely cut, too.

Fire dragon plants are available, too. This is often called the poor man's croton because the coloring of the two plants is similar. The fire dragon grows about two feet tall and gives lots of summer color in the garden.

Remember Joseph's Coat of all colors? It's a plant used lots by our grandmothers. You'll like this for summer color, too.

After the Confederate Jasmine blooms, that's the time to prune. This vine gets pretty wild if not kept cut back. Just shear the plant, cutting off all long tendrils and stems, close to the main vine. You'll notice around town, the most attractive vines are those kept under control.

If your rose buds dry up before they open, or if the blossoms become dry and discolored, you most likely have thrips. Five per cent DDT or malathion will control this pest. Spray entire plant and burn old blooms and buds.

The group working on the coffee table for the opening of the new library came up with a clever idea. Their coffee pot, trays, etc. were of pewter, copper and brass. It just seemed that linen and lace didn't harmonize with those, so what do you suppose they used for a cloth? Hop-sacking, that one of the husbands was planning to use in a duck blind. The rough texture and the cream color were perfect with the pewter and brass. Trust to northeast Louisiana women to find an answer and a lovely one.

Did you notice the gorgeous blue iris in the brandy snifter? Another idea for using such a container.

NICE SHOW

Congratulations to the Sun and Sand Garden Club on their first flower show. Their theme was "Spring Awakening."

A "cute" April Fools arrangement was made of box wood foliage and tiny new Irish potatoes. Clever.

"April Showers" was carried out with a tall, very slender clear glass pitcher. In this was a tiny arrangement of April flowers. The pitcher was placed on a large oblong mirror and three crystal balls placed beside it. Original and lovely.

BE CAREFUL!

This season's popular white collar on suits and dresses can be very flattering — or extremely unflattering. White reflects light and puts emphasis on the features it outlines. If your neck is thin, or your face appears too hollow checked, this reflection will be flattering because it will make these areas appear fuller.

However, if you have a wide jawlin or double - chin, the stark white collar will emphasize them. You'll find that pastel or dark shades worn near your face will be more becoming.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Your Open House programs for next week are: Monday and Tuesday — Mr. Ken Koch, specialist from LSU Extension, will give you some practical "electricity-in-the home" ideas; Wednesday— Mr. Cockerham, specialist from LSU Extension, will tell you what to do about pests on ornamental and flowering shrubs; Thursday —Mr. Reid Grigsby, marketing specialist with LSU Extension, will show you what's new in foods; Friday — a style show you'll love.

I'll be back from my vacation Wednesday and will love being back with you again. See you next Sunday.

Fresh dates lend themselves to many sandwich uses. Their rich, naturally sweet flavor make them ideal for mixing with chopped nuts such as almonds or salted peanuts, and a little mayonnaise. Spread between thin slices of whole wheat bread this mixture makes dainty sandwiches for salad luncheon, tea trays or to go with summer beverages. A little chopped candied ginger or finely chopped fresh mint adds interesting flavor to date mixtures.

MY CANDLE TREE

"Spring has sprung, the grass has riz, I wonder where my candle tree is." It ain't in the house, oh, where did it get?

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Sprig, Twig Holds Display

By MARY JARDINE

Members of the Sprig and Twig Garden Club of Monroe staged an all blue ribbon show at the Garden Center this week. Top score went to Mrs. R. F. Wilson for her design of calla lilies. A classic compote in black was selected for the design which was formal in pattern.

A line of white calla blooms, diminishing in size formed the center of the design. Another vertical line of blooms graded in size were placed on the right with a similar placement just a little lower on the left. Canna foliage placed in the background and over the rim of the container provided the third dimension. Due to the skillful placement of the blooms the design had an air of great distinction. This beautiful arrangement would be most suitable for a living room or entrance hall table.

LINE DESIGNS

Mrs. J. W. Keller and Mrs. Wade Kennedy combined their talents in creating a dramatic line-mass design in red-violet color harmony. An amethyst compote was the perfect choice for the fine plant materials. A right angle triangle was established with a line of stock, shading from white to deep rose. The line was embellished with sweet peas and annual phlox shading from pale pink to deep red-violet. Massed in the center of the design were deep rose polyantha roses and five pink radiance roses as a center of interest. The color harmony was exquisite, fragrant too. This delectable confection was staged against a soft pink background.

An arrangement in the Victorian manner was designed by Mrs. B. L. Talton and Mrs. W. M. Rasberry. Characteristic of the Victorian period, this was an opulent arrangement using bold, richly colored flowers of many varieties. The symmetrical background was delineated with stock in white, rose, and lavender. Yellow native iris, calendulas and snapdragons introduced yellow into the design. Red-violet watsonias and roses blended into the deeper red of roses. Sweet william with its round forms were matched with the similar forms of polyantha roses in pinks and salmon tones. Pure red was represented by the bottle brush flowers. Blues and lavender tones were blended in with double larkspur, salvia, native iris, and purple vetch. This colorful arrangement was an excellent replica of that period. This would be suitable for the living room or large hall in a home decorated in the Victorian style.

COLORFUL

The month of May is always a colorful one in gardens of this area. Roses are in full bloom everywhere. Now is the time to drive around and visit the rose gardens of friends. There is a rose for every purpose in the garden and many, many varieties that do well here. Many books have been published on roses. Two that are practical and will greatly assist the gardener are Roses for Every Garden by R. C. Allen and Anyone Can Grow Roses by Cynthia Wescott. The latter is in our Garden Center library, a most welcome gift from the Evergreen Garden Club of Monroe.

All around the area too the amaryllis are in bloom. The following gardens are in full glory and these hobbyists welcome visitors: Mrs. George B. Parks, 1207 Cypress, West Monroe. Christy M. Eaker, 1509 Trenton, West Monroe., Mrs. W. M. Logan 2714 Gordon Avenue, Monroe and Mrs. J. O. Rhodes, 902 S. 2nd St. Monroe. We would like to know of all the amaryllis growers in this area, so if this is your hobby please let us hear from you, so that we can exchange ideas and information.

EXTENSION NEWS AND VIEWS

Mother's Day Inspiration

By AUDREY DAWSON

This is the greatest of all days —the day we pay tribute and honor to mothers. I read this poem which is a great inspiration for mothers — and I dedicate it to you — mothers — who read my Sunday column.

In youth my life seemed much involved:
So many problems yet unsolved;
The wrong desire; the weakened will,
And then the steps I must retrace.
But you, the saint of motherhood
Did not condemn, but understood,
And, subtly, with unerring skill,
With me transgressions would erase.

STATE COUNCIL

Yours truly, Mrs. C. D. Henderson, president of the Home Demonstration Council, Mrs. Pearl Bower general director, Mrs. Cleburn White, vice - president and Mrs. W. H. Pogue, secretary, will leave for Baton Rouge tomorrow to attend the state meeting. We will meet with leaders from the other 63 parishes of the state. We will return Wednesday.

I am sure you, Mrs. Homemaker, of West Monroe and Monroe, have heard about the survey that is to be made in our Twin Cities real soon. Miss Betty Woods, assistant professor of home economics from LSU will conduct the survey. This is a part of a large southern regional research project concerning the marketing of beef. The purpose of the survey is to try to learn the whys of meat buying. Why we as consumers select beef rather than pork or pork instead of chicken, etc. Also why one certain cut of beef instead of another. People in meat production are interested in learning the answers to these and similar questions.

It is hoped through these findings that it will lead to more efficient supply of known demands of beef with less waste, resulting in greater economy for consumers and producers.

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, are contacted, I urge you to give a little time to the person calling because I believe the survey will be of great help to us in the future.

ROSES

It's getting time for those much needed vacations and I know a great number of my friends are off for a nice one next month. If you are going on one, why not make it a point to see some of the nation's best rose gardens during spring and summer. No matter where we live there is an all America rose test garden within "Sunday driving" distance from your home. Here is a list of some of the gardens in the Southern States: Georgia-Ida Cason Callaway Gardens in Chipley; in Louisiana— Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge and New Orleans Municipal Garden; Mississippi Livingston Park at Jackson, Miss. State College at State College; Texas, Amarillo Memorial Rose Garden, Jefferson Gardens at San Antonio, Fort Worth Batanic Garden, Rose Park in Tyler.

If you're planning a cross-country trip, you can get a complete list of test gardens from the All America Rose Selections Inc., 45 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 27, N. Y.

HINTS TO HOMEMAKERS

A straight medal pinking shears is a recent addition to one of the companies line of pinking shears.

Wooden clothespins will last longer if before used they are soaked 30 minutes in a washing soda-water solution to cover, put two tablespoons of soda into each 2 cups water required.

A fresh piece of bread kept in a jar of brown sugar will keep the sugar from hardening.

Clean and put fruit and vegetables on old newspapers, roll up and toss into garbage can. No mess to clean out of sink.

If you weigh 10 to 15 percent more than your desirable weight— if you're supposed to weigh in around 130 to 140 and the scales nudge closer to 160 than you're one of the 34 million Americans who are overweight. If you are trying to keep your weight down do it safely and sensibly.

A THOUGHT

The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world.

Poet Advises Taking Lunch On Mars Trip

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Poet Robert Frost says Americans are too fearful of scientific discovery and that man, in his anxiety to reach the moon, should never forget his limitations.

These were but a few of the frank expressions made by the 85-year-old Pulitzer Prize winner during a visit to Dickinson College where he received an arts award Friday night.

"We are human and when we get to Mars or Venus, or wherever it is we are going, we'll still be earthlings and we had better take our lunch with us," Frost said.

He added that science is "our bugaboo" only when its implications become frightening.

"It is silly to regard science as a Frankenstein that will turn upon man, its creator," he said. "There is no danger in science itself. The danger is that we will permit ourselves to be frightened by its possibilities."

Frost spoke for nearly an hour, reading from his works and digressing on the impact of scientific discovery, after receiving the college's award of a medallion and $1,000 from Dr. William W. Edel, Dickinson president.

Earlier, he engaged in some typically Frost repartee with 30 literature students during an informal interview on the Dickinson campus.

"To what do you attribute your longevity?" asked one.

"Drink—and leaving it alone," came the reply.

What about Russian poet Boris Pasternak, whose best-selling novel of life in Russia, "Dr. Zhivago," was accorded the Nobel Prize for literature?

"He is a brave man. Pasternak wants to be a Russian and we're going to get him killed if we keep trying to use him against Russia," said Frost.

A student suggested that Frost should have been given the Nobel Prize a long time ago for his literary works.

"Ambition is a private thing." Frost admonished. "I need nothing I haven't got, except perhaps a seat in the Senate."

In jest, President Edel suggested that Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore) might oblige.

"Yes, but it would take a horse to kick him out of there," the white-haired poet replied with a smile.

Parents Held Responsible For Boy's Absences

BATON ROUGE (AP)—A family court judge convicted the parents of a 14-year-old schoolboy on charges of violating the compulsory school attendance law.

It was the first case of its kind here in years.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Banks, face a possible penalty ranging from a $10 fine to 10 days for each day of school missed.

The court ordered a presentence investigation, Asst. Dist. Atty. Thomas B. Pugh said yesterday.

Pugh said the case arose after the school board's visiting teachers called for a crackdown on parents not sending their children to school.

BEWARE OF GYP ARTISTS

Home Remodeling Can Provide Woes

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Remodeling a home, or merely putting in some improvements, can provide home owners with much satisfaction. But it can also be a source of woe—financial and otherwise.

The Better Business Bureau finds complaints about home improvement and remodelling jobs lead all others.

Most contractors are honest and reliable. But there are quite a few —perhaps they don't deserve the designation "contractors" — who are gyp artists, the bureau warns.

Here are some tips from the Better Business Bureau collected from several of its pamphlets and published and distributed by the Bureau of National Affairs, a private Washington organization.

Watch out for the fast talker, the smoothie who promises you nearly everything for practically nothing. In fact, he has a "receipt" in his pocket ready for your signature even though he's making his first visit to your house.

That "receipt" may well be a contract which obligates you to pay much more money than the "contractor" mentioned in his pep talk. Better read it first. Compare what it says with what the man said.

If you get that far and think everything is on the level, ask him for the names and addresses of people in town for whom he has already done work. Don't be surprised if he explains glibly that he's just moved to town and is trying to establish himself. That's why (he says) he's offering to repave your driveway or reshingle your roof at such a bargain price.

Another point to check is whether the man really has an office, a work force and the usual equipment. Many times the "contractor" carries his office strictly in his hip pocket and actually farms out the work to someone else. Only he doesn't pay the subcontractor, and you are responsible.

Watch out for the "model home" pitch. Based on flattery, it's used to sell storm doors, siding, porch enclosures, paint jobs, new roofs or most anything else.

"We like the lines of your house. That's why it's been selected as a model home for our low-cost siding job," the salesman says.

Or: "We've been checking around. You folks are looked up to on this street. People like you. That's why we want our new-type roof to go on your home. Of course, with the $25 you get for every prospect we bring around, it won't cost you a cent. You may even make money."

It sounds good. You sign up. The man turns the contract over to a regular construction company, which installs the new-type roof and bills you. As for those prospects who are worth $25 a piece to you, forget it. You won't see them or the man who promised them.

To avoid getting stuck when you remodel or repair, you can:

—Consult an architect. He'll tell you what would be best for your house and what it should cost.

—Check with a lawyer, especially if you're going to sign a receipt contract, guarantee or other document. Or, at least read it carefully and make sure it says what you think it says.

—Don't patronize a contractor, painter, mason, plumber unless you know something about him. Check his price against someone else's.

Cotton Shippers Elect Texan As New President

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — S. M. McAshan Jr., vice president of Anderson, Clayton and Co., and a past president of the Texas Cotton Assn., Saturday was elected president of the American Cotton Shippers Assn.

McAshan, who headed the Houston Cotton Exchange during 1955-56, was named president at the closing session of the association's 35th annual convention.

McAshan succeeds Adolph Weil Jr., of Montgomery, Ala.

In his report to the association, Weil criticized the Department of Agriculture for not allowing the reclass of the cotton it sells.

This, he said, violates historic practices because a buyer is "justified in demanding the quality for which he contracts and pays."

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

Iris Fine For Shaded Areas

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

You are missing a great opportunity if you do not have your shaded areas planted with the many beautiful flowering and foliage plants that like this kind of situation. The shade loving wild flowers of the Southern States make the woods a great garden here in spring. Most of these are very easy to grow. In addition to these, there are all sorts of fine plants from other parts of the world that grow and bloom in shade.

ROOF IRIS

The roof iris which the Chinese weave into the thatch on their houses is an old and well known plant in our gardens. The Latin name, Iris tectorum, literally means "roof iris". We grow it in large patches of either the blue or the white form in the shade. Its foliage is green until late fall and starts out early in spring again. A good plant for contrast with the light green iris foliage is the leopard plant. This one has rounded foliage like galax leaves spotted with gold here and there. It is evergreen. The foliage is its chief feature, but it also has a sort of spike of yellow daisies in the fall after frost has killed everything in sight.

Another showy evergreen foliage plant for shade is the little spotted green calla (Arum italicum). The long leaves lie down flat on the ground during the coldest weather and then stand up when the small parchment colored calla lilies bloom in mid-spring.

ALSO IN SHADE

In the past few years, nurseries in this country have begun to offer us more and more fine varieties of the shade loving hostas. Old-fashioned gardens knew these as "August lilies" grown in wooden tubs because people in the south did not know they were hardy out of doors here in winter. Hostas are foliage plants as well as flowering plants. Some have huge blue green leaves, and they grade down through longish leaves to rounded small ones. Some varieties are striped with cream or white. Your columist always has in his mind's eye the huge beds of hostas in Kew Gardens in London. In Sweden, the parks are full of them, too. If these perennials never bloomed, the leaves would be festive enough by themselves, but the flowers range from pure white to lavender and almost blue. The new variety called Honey Bells is especially showy.

In our woods, the ferny leaved cohosh or bugbane is a handsome shade lover with four to six-foot spikes of fuzzy flower in summer. Some catalogues now offer us a late fall-blooming cimicifuga, (the Latin name for cohosh). Most of the plants we have discussed here for shade are rather large.

All of these plants can be worked into a woodland planting with many of our wild flowers like the trilliums, tiarella, the little blue wild Iris cristata and many others. By the way, right after it blooms is an ideal time to set out a patch of Iris Cristata. The wild flower nurseries can supply it right now. Be sure to work in some bone meal where this gem is to grow. Then scatter some more bone meal over the patch once a year.

Tulip Tree Has Lots To Offer

By MILDRED SWIFT

The real tulip tree should be in bloom now. Peggy Garnett (1606 North Second, Monroe) has a tree in her side yard. You can see this from the street. I wouldn't say there's anything particularly outstanding about the tree. The leaves almost cover the blossoms. But, oh, those blossoms. They are a delightful chartreuse and are perfectly gorgeous in arrangements and corsages. No California orchid ever had more to offer.

The tree is a fairly fast grower. I believe it belongs to the poplar family. So — it is worth while planting for a shade tree.

GARDEN TIPS

Don't worry if gardenias and American hollys lose their leaves. This is characteristic of both plants. They'll put them back on mighty fast.

When you use sawdust for mulch, add a sprinking of nitrogen before spreading it. As the sawdust decays, it uses nitrogen. If there is not enough nitrogen present, this mulch will rob the soil and the plant suffers.

There are many causes for azalea leaves turning yellow. First—a shortage of several minerals. (Have your soil tested.) Another cause — starvation. Are you feeding these plants at least once a year?

(Never later than June.)

Poor drainage will cause sick azaleas. If the plant is too deep, it suffers. Every year we add mulch. This mulch decays. After six or eight years, the roots are too deep. You know azaleas send their roots up for food and moisture.

The solution — raise the plant. Or, if you don't care to do that this year, pull the mulch back and lightly pull some of the soil away. Don't do his unless you can see that the plant is too deep.

Did you ever notice leaves on your camellias turning a beautiful shade of rose? This is natural. Soon those leaves will drop. But — when the leaves turn yellow with dark green spots, this is an indication of shortage of potash. The correction for this is muriate of potash.

DIE BACK

We find die back in most all plants. Until recent years the cause has not been known. Now the horticulturists find it can be caused by injury or growing conditions. They say when the soil is too light or the plant too deep, the roots just can't get very much food. Therefore, the plant prunes itself by feeding only part of the plant and letting the other parts die.

The treatment for die back is always prune past the dead parts into the green wood. Cover cut area with a seal. Correct the growing condition by loosening the soil and raising the plant. There's another form of die back caused by a disease organism. The treatment is the same.

Have you planted your imperial candle trees? These are in the nurseries. They don't grow too much until the weather gets very warm. This tree will give lots of pleasure during the summer when there's not too much bloom. The blossoms are lovely cut, too.

Fire dragon plants are available, too. This is often called the poor man's croton because the coloring of the two plants is similar. The fire dragon grows about two feet tall and gives lots of summer color in the garden.

Remember Joseph's Coat of all colors? It's a plant used lots by our grandmothers. You'll like this for summer color, too.

After the Confederate Jasmine blooms, that's the time to prune. This vine gets pretty wild if not kept cut back. Just shear the plant, cutting off all long tendrils and stems, close to the main vine. You'll notice around town, the most attractive vines are those kept under control.

If your rose buds dry up before they open, or if the blossoms become dry and discolored, you most likely have thrips. Five per cent DDT or malathion will control this pest. Spray entire plant and burn old blooms and buds.

The group working on the coffee table for the opening of the new library came up with a clever idea. Their coffee pot, trays, etc. were of pewter, copper and brass. It just seemed that linen and lace didn't harmonize with those, so what do you suppose they used for a cloth? Hop-sacking, that one of the husbands was planning to use in a duck blind. The rough texture and the cream color were perfect with the pewter and brass. Trust to northeast Louisiana women to find an answer and a lovely one.

Did you notice the gorgeous blue iris in the brandy snifter? Another idea for using such a container.

NICE SHOW

Congratulations to the Sun and Sand Garden Club on their first flower show. Their theme was "Spring Awakening."

A "cute" April Fools arrangement was made of box wood foliage and tiny new Irish potatoes. Clever.

"April Showers" was carried out with a tall, very slender clear glass pitcher. In this was a tiny arrangement of April flowers. The pitcher was placed on a large oblong mirror and three crystal balls placed beside it. Original and lovely.

BE CAREFUL!

This season's popular white collar on suits and dresses can be very flattering — or extremely unflattering. White reflects light and puts emphasis on the features it outlines. If your neck is thin, or your face appears too hollow cheeked, this reflection will be flattering because it will make these areas appear fuller.

However, if you have a wide jawlin or double - chin, the stark white collar will emphasize them. You'll find that pastel or dark shades worn near your face will be more becoming.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Your Open House programs for next week are: Monday and Tuesday — Mr. Ken Koch, specialist from LSU Extension, will give you some practical "electricity-in-the home" ideas; Wednesday—Mr. Cockerham, specialist from LSU Extension, will tell you what to do about pests on ornamental and flowering shrubs; Thursday—Mr. Reid Grigsby, marketing specialist with LSU Extension, will show you what's new in foods; Friday — a style show you'll love.

I'll be back from my vacation Wednesday and will love being back with you again. See you next Sunday.

Fresh dates lend themselves to many sandwich uses. Their rich, naturally sweet flavor make them ideal for mixing with chopped nuts such as almonds or salted peanuts, and a little mayonnaise. Spread between thin slices of whole wheat bread this mixture makes dainty sandwiches for salad luncheon, tea trays or to go with summer beverages. A little chopped candied ginger or finely chopped fresh mint adds interesting flavor to date mixtures.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Sprig, Twig Holds Display

By MARY JARDINE

Members of the Sprig and Twig Garden Club of Monroe staged an all blue ribbon show at the Garden Center this week. Top score went to Mrs. R. F. Wilson for her design of calla lilies. A classic compote in black was selected for the design which was formal in pattern.

A line of white calla blooms, diminshing in size formed the center of the design. Another vertical line of blooms graded in size were placed on the right with a similar placement just a little lower on the left. Canna foliage placed in the background and over the rim of the container provided the third dimension. Due to the skillful placement of the blooms the design had an air of great distinction. This beautiful arrangement would be most suitable for a living room or entrance hall table.

LINE DESIGNS

Mrs. J. W. Keller and Mrs. Wade Kennedy combined their talents in creating a dramatic line-mass design in red-violet color harmony. An amethyst compote was the perfect choice for the fine plant materials. A right angle triangle was established with a line of stock, shading from white to deep rose. The line was embellished with sweet peas and annual phlox shading from pale pink to deep red-violet. Massed in the center of the design were deep rose polyantha roses and five pink radiance roses as a center of interest. The color harmony was exquisite, fragrant too. This delectable confection was staged against a soft pink background.

An arrangement in the Victorian manner was designed by Mrs. B. L. Talton and Mrs. W. M. Rasberry. Characteristic of the Victorian period, this was an opulent arrangement using bold, richly colored flowers of many varieties. The symmetrical background was delineated with stock in white, rose, and lavender. Yellow native iris, calendulas and snapdragons introduced yellow into the design. Red-violet watsonias and roses blended into the deeper red of roses. Sweet william with its round forms were matched with the similar forms of polyantha roses in pinks and salmon tones. Pure red was represented by the bottle brush flowers. Blues and lavender tones were blended in with double larkspur, salvia, native iris, and purple vetch. This colorful arrangement was an excellent replica of that period. This would be suitable for the living room or large hall in a home decorated in the Victorian style.

COLORFUL

The month of May is always a colorful one in gardens of this area. Roses are in full bloom everywhere. Now is the time to drive around and visit the rose gardens of friends. There is a rose for every purpose in the garden and many, many varieties that do well here. Many books have been published on roses. Two that are practical and will greatly assist the gardener are Roses for Every Garden by R. C. Allen and Anyone Can Grow Roses by Cynthia Wescott. The latter is in our Garden Center library, a most welcome gift from the Evergreen Garden Club of Monroe.

All around the area too the amaryllis are in bloom. The following gardens are in full glory and these hobbyists welcome visitors: Mrs. George B. Parks, 1207 Cypress, West Monroe. Christy M. Eaker, 1509 Trenton, West Monroe., Mrs. W. M. Logan 2714 Gordon Avenue, Monroe and Mrs. J. O. Rhodes, 902 S. 2nd St. Monroe. We would like to know of all the amaryllis growers in this area, so if this is your hobby please let us hear from you, so that we can exchange ideas and information.

Mother's Day Inspiration

By AUDREY DAWSON

This is the greatest of all days—the day we pay tribute and honor to mothers. I read this poem which is a great inspiration for mothers — and I dedicate it to you — mothers — who read my Sunday column.

In youth my life seemed much involved:
So many problems yet unsolved;
The wrong desire; the weakened will,
And then the steps I must retrace.
But you, the saint of motherhood
Did not condemn, but understood,
And, subtly, with unerring skill,
With me transgressions would erase.

STATE COUNCIL

Yours truly, Mrs. C. D. Henderson, president of the Home Demonstration Council, Mrs. Pearl Bower general director, Mrs. Cleburn White, vice - president and Mrs. W. H. Pogue, secretary, will leave for Baton Rouge tomorrow to attend the state meeting. We will meet with leaders from the other 63 parishes of the state. We will return Wednesday.

I am sure you, Mrs. Homemaker, of West Monroe and Monroe, have heard about the survey that is to be made in our Twin Cities real soon. Miss Betty Woods, assistant professor of home economics from LSU will conduct the survey. This is a part of a large southern regional research project concerning the marketing of beef. The purpose of the survey is to try to learn the whys of meat buying. Why we as consumers select beef rather than pork or pork instead of chicken, etc. Also why one certain cut of beef instead of another. People in meat production are interested in learning the answers to these and similar questions.

It is hoped through these findings that it will lead to more efficient supply of known demands of beef with less waste, resulting in greater economy for consumers and producers.

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, are contacted, I urge you to give a little time to the person calling because I believe the survey will be of great help to us in the future.

ROSES

It's getting time for those much needed vacations and I know a great number of my friends are off for a nice one next month. If you are going on one, why not make it a point to see some of the nation's best rose gardens during spring and summer. No matter where we live there is an all America rose test garden within "Sunday driving" distance from your home. Here is a list of some of the gardens in the Southern States: Georgia-Ida Cason Callaway Gardens in Chipley; in Louisiana— Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge and New Orleans Municipal Garden; Mississippi Livingston Park at Jackson, Miss. State College at State College; Texas, Amarillo Memorial Rose Garden, Jefferson Gardens at San Antonio, Fort Worth Batanic Garden, Rose Park in Tyler.

If you're planning a cross-country trip, you can get a complete list of test gardens from the All America Rose Selections Inc., 45 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 27, N. Y.

A straight medal pinking shears is a recent addition to one of the companies line of pinking shears.

Wooden clothespins will last longer if before used they are soaked 30 minutes in a washing soda-water solution to cover, put two tablespoons of soda into each 2 cups water required.

A fresh piece of bread kept in a jar of brown sugar will keep the sugar from hardening.

Clean and put fruit and vegetables on old newspapers, roll up and toss into garbage can. No mess to clean out of sink.

If you weigh 10 to 15 percent more than your desirable weight—if you're supposed to weigh in around 130 to 140 and the scales nudge closer to 160 than you're one of the 34 million Americans who are overweight. If you are trying to keep your weight down do it safely and sensibly.

Poet Advises Taking Lunch On Mars Trip

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Poet Robert Frost says Americans are too fearful of scientific discovery and that man, in his anxiety to reach the moon, should never forget his limitations.

These were but a few of the frank expressions made by the 85-year-old Pulitzer Prize winner during a visit to Dickinson College where he received an arts award Friday night.

"We are human and when we get to Mars or Venus, or wherever it is we are going, we'll still be earthlings and we had better take our lunch with us," Frost said.

He added that science is "our bugaboo" only when its implications become frightening.

"It is silly to regard science as a Frankenstein that will turn upon man, its creator," he said. "There is no danger in science itself. The danger is that we will permit ourselves to be frightened by its possibilities."

Frost spoke for nearly an hour, reading from his works and digressing on the impact of scientific discovery, after receiving the college's award of a medallion and $1,000 from Dr. William W. Edel, Dickinson president.

Earlier, he engaged in some typically Frost repartee with 30 literature students during an informal interview on the Dickinson campus.

"To what do you attribute your longevity?" asked one.

'Drink—and leaving it alone," came the reply.

What about Russian poet Boris Pasternak, whose best-selling novel of life in Russia, "Dr. Zhivago," was accorded the Nobel Prize for literature?

"He is a brave man. Pasternak wants to be a Russian and we're going to get him killed if we keep trying to use him against Russia," said Frost.

A student suggested that Frost should have been given the Nobel Prize a long time ago for his literary works.

"Ambition is a private thing," Frost admonished. "I need nothing I haven't got, except perhaps a seat in the Senate."

In jest, President Edel suggested that Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore) might oblige.

"Yes, but it would take a horse to kick him out of there," the white-haired poet replied with a smile.

Parents Held Responsible For Boy's Absences

BATON ROUGE (AP)—A family court judge convicted the parents of a 14-year-old schoolboy on charges of violating the compulsory school attendance law.

It was the first case of its kind here in years.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Banks, face a possible penalty ranging from a $10 fine to 10 days for each day of school missed.

The court ordered a presentence investigation, Asst. Dist. Atty. Thomas B. Pugh said yesterday.

Pugh said the case arose after the school board's visiting teachers called for a crackdown on parents not sending their children to school.

BEWARE OF GYP ARTISTS

Home Remodeling Can Provide Woes

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Remodeling a home, or merely putting in some improvements, can provide home owners with much satisfaction. But it can also be a source of woe—financial and otherwise.

The Better Business Bureau finds complaints about home improvement and remodelling jobs lead all others.

Most contractors are honest and reliable. But there are quite a few—perhaps they don't deserve the designation "contractors" — who are gyp artists, the bureau warns.

Here are some tips from the Better Business Bureau collected from several of its pamphlets and published and distributed by the Bureau of National Affairs, a private Washington organization.

Watch out for the fast talker, the smoothie who promises you nearly everything for practically nothing. In fact, he has a "receipt" in his pocket ready for your signature even though he's making his first visit to your house.

That "receipt" may well be a contract which obligates you to pay much more money than the "contractor" mentioned in his pep talk. Better read it first. Compare what it says with what the man said.

If you get that far and think everything is on the level, ask him for the names and addresses of people in town for whom he has already done work. Don't be surprised if he explains glibly that he's just moved to town and is trying to establish himself. That's why (he says) he's offering to repave your driveway or reshingle your roof at such a bargain price.

Another point to check is whether the man really has an office, a work force and the usual equipment. Many times the "contractor" carries his office strictly in his hip pocket and actually farms out the work to someone else. Only he doesn't pay the subcontractor, and you are responsible.

Watch out for the "model home" pitch. Based on flattery, it's used to sell storm doors, siding, porch enclosures, paint jobs, new roofs or most anything else.

"We like the lines of your house. That's why it's been selected as a model home for our low-cost siding job," the salesman says.

Or: "We've been checking around. You folks are looked up to on this street. People like you. That's why we want our new-type roof to go on your home. Of course, with the $25 you get for every prospect we bring around, it won't cost you a cent. You may even make money."

It sounds good. You sign up. The man turns the contract over to a regular construction company, which installs the new-type roof and bills you. As for those prospects who are worth $25 a piece to you, forget it. You won't see them or the man who promised them.

To avoid getting stuck when you remodel or repair, you can:

—Consult an architect. He'll tell you what would be best for your house and what it should cost.

—Check with a lawyer, especially if you're going to sign a receipt contract, guarantee or other document. Or, at least read it carefully and make sure it says what you think it says.

—Don't patronize a contractor, painter, mason, plumber unless you know something about him. Check his price against someone else's.

MICHENER WRITES OF HIS Love Affair With Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP)—James A. Michener has just written a new love story, a monumental novel he calls "a love story between me and a bunch of islands."

For the author of "Tales of the South Pacific" to write about islands is scarcely news but this one is his biggest so far and he has moved his locale up to the mid-Pacific, to the Hawaiian Islands.

His new book is titled simply: "Hawaii."

It runs 400,000 words, or some 800 pages.

"I think it is the best thing I've done," says Michener. "Certainly, it's the most ambitious thing I've done. I've been working on it for about three years. I started the final draft on May 1st of last year and I worked on it every day until last March 1st, except for a trip I made to San Francisco for four days."

"It is a story of how Polynesians, missionaries, Chinese and Japanese came to these islands and learned to live together side by side," he said.

"It has two climactic moments — on Pearl Harbor day, Dec. 7, 1941, and in the elections here in 1954 when the Democrats for the first time in 56 years came into any kind of power.

"I doubt if it can be serialized or made into a movie. The characters are too numerous and they change too fast.

ISLANDS ARE THEME

"The underlying thread in the book is the islands. They remain, and the people change.

"I think it is a major work, a real effort."

Michener, 52, wrote the book — his 12th — in a small office he maintains in the same eight - story apartment building at Waikiki Beach where he lives with his attractive wife, Mari.

"I got up at 7:30 every morning," he related "ate a couple of slices of pineapple, put on a pair of shorts and went to work. I admitted no interruptions. I have no phone in my office. I really went into an isolation chamber. I worked until noon, then knocked off. I never worked in the afternoon and only rarely in the evening. In the afternoon, I went beaching and I took a five mile walk every day to keep my weight (176 pounds) down."

"The purpose of the book is to explain why Hawaii is the wonderful place it is. It deals with how people and ideas got here and how the people learned to live together in harmony. There are four families and the book follows their fortunes.

"It would make a good movie but I don't think it is suited for it because it would take about nine hours to show it."

"I mailed 'Hawaii' to my publishers on March 12 — the day the Hawaii statehood bill was passed by Congress," he said. "I expect it to be published in October."

Statehood also made Michener change his legal address from Bucks County, Pennsylvania to Honolulu.

CHANGED RESIDENCE

"I have been here quite a while," he said, "but under no circumstances would I have changed my legal residence when I did not have the vote (for president). On the day Hawaii got the vote, I changed it."

Michener has been highly active in local politics and there's been talk in Democratic ranks of asking him to run for office. So far, he has resisted this.

"I used to teach political science," Michener explained, "and I am deeply interested in it. The only function I see for myself is to be an interested member of one of the political parties. On the day I moved my legal residence here, I joined the Democratic party.

"By and large, writers are not logical people to run for office. If you write and speak the truth, you hurt enough feelings so that you can't run for office. I have no capacity for it. I will work very hard to help other people."

But, with Hawaii's first state elections coming this summer, there are some who think James Michener may still run for office.

Good Book To Give To Your Doctor

CALL THE DOCTOR. By E. S. Turner. St. Martin's Press, $3.95.

This is an ideal book for a patient to give his doctor, or a doctor to give his patient provided both have a sense of humor.

The author, who also wrote "A History of Courting" and "The Shocking History of Advertising!" here wields a merry scalpel on British medical practitioners from the Middle Ages to the Welfare State.

"Today there are thousands of doctors who are never seen at a patient's bedside," he says, but points out that for several hundred years the farther a doctor was from the bedside the better were the patient's chances of recovery.

In Chaucer's day, for example, one famous doctor treated epileptics by having crumbs of roasted cuckoo blown up his nostrils. The insane were beaten. To invoke the help of heaven, medicine was sometimes drunk from a church bell.

Some choice examples from the doctor's code at that time:

"When feeling the patient's pulse, allow for the fact that he may be disturbed by your arrival and the thought of the fee you are going to charge him.

"Stay sober.

"Avoid the company or friendship of laymen. They make a habit of mocking doctors, and besides, it is no always easy to extract a fee from an intimate."

The book is studded with scores of ancedotes, some gruesome, illustrating the rise of medicine from an ignorant art to at least the discipline of a hopeful science. You think wonder drugs are new? An early English medical prescription began, "Take six live vipers and —."

Turner's style is lively, satiric, eminently readable, and his book covers every facet of medicine from graverobbing to plastic surgery. The details he gives of the ordeals Britain's ailing monarchs underwent at the hands of their physicians are enough to scare a modern hypochondriac healthy.

His summary of the British doctor's position under socialized medicine: "He is in the hands of the politicians."

Beat Is On The Offbeat For A Little

DOCTOR SAX. By Jack Kerouac. Grove. $3.50, cloth; $1.75, paper.

Kerouac here moves back to Lowell, Mass., the Merrimac River, the French-Catholic community, his own family, the old dilapidated home, and his boyhood gang.

This is a novel, says the publisher, and it is largely autobiographical. The same could be said with equal accuracy I suspect, about this writer's other books, though this particular one is a series of fragments bound together principally by locale.

We see the boy at home, we are exposed with him to some of the more objectionable vulgarities of adolescence, we visit the Castle, we are afraid in the dark, we watch "la grosse flood" of the Merrimac, we are generously treated to some of the "Doctor Sax" hocus-pocus.

The opening pages fascinated me — here Kerouac the beat writer was doing the fresh off - beat thing expected of him. But it doesn't last. He turns pretentious, he goes blah-blah-blah instead of doing honest writing. There are some remarkably vivid and evocative passages, some tender scenes with the mother, some high - powered prose, and then some filth and nonsense. Kerouac needs editing, or maybe just spanking, or something, to give our letters the benefit of the real good in him.

1,000 New Books In The Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

A total of 1,000 new books were added to the book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library during the month of April. Of this number 388 were adult books and 612 were juvenile. This is the largest number ever added during the history of the library. Of the new adult books 185 were fiction titles, 191 were non - fiction and 12 were reference books. Of the juvenile books 529 were fiction and 83 were non - fiction. 891 of these books were purchased with library funds and 107 were gifts. I want to remind you again that we are happy to receive gifts to help build up the library collection. We are interested in memorial gifts, gifts of money or gifts of books. Our book collection is now 55,355 books, but we need many more titles to have the sort of library we want and you need. We have the space now and we hope you will help us build up our book collection. On January 1, 1948 our book collection consisted of 22,823 books and on January 1, 1959 it consisted of 52,890 books. You can see that we have doubled our collection in 10 years and have added 2,500 books since the first of this year. If we can double it again in another ten years we should be up to standard as far as our collection is concerned.

NEW BOOKS

Let's take a look at some of the new books added during the past week. In the field of fiction, there are stories for every taste. "Love Is a Wild Assault" by E. H. Kirkland has its setting in Texas during the early days of the state. It is based on a diary left by Harriet Page Potter Ames. It is a good story and gives an interesting picture of the times. A much better than average western is "The Life and Times of Buckshot South" written by Frank Davis Adams. "The Chinese Box" by Katherine Wigmore Eyre has its setting in San Francisco and is extremely well done. Two existing new mystery stories are "The Watcher" by Dolores Hitchens and "The Smasher" by Talmadge Powell. A sond but intensely interesting book is "The Hourglass" by Edwin Gilbert. It has its setting in Greenwich Village and other sections of New York during the period of the thirties. It is extremely well-written and the characters are well done. "April Harvest" by Lillian Budd continues the adventures of a Scandanavian family in the U. S. and makes for interesting reading. "Woman from the Country" by D'Arcy Noland has its setting in Australia and gives a good picture of that land. "Roots of Heaven" by Romain Gary is another fine piece of work by an outstanding modern French novelist. "The Enemy Stars" is a very exciting science fiction story written by Paul Anderson. "Blackberry Wilderness" by Sylvia Berkman is a book of short stories which will appeal to the discerning reader, but not to everyone. "The Reunion" is another of Robert Molloy's fine stories with a setting in Charleston, S. C. and will be eagerly welcomed by his readers. "Doniphan's Ride" by Les Savage, Jr. is an interesting story with a setting of the Mexican war. This is a period which has been neglected by writers of historical fiction and the book will fill a need.

EIGHT NEW

Eight new titles were added to the young adult collection this week. They are "Beckoning Landfall" by Erick Berry; "Treasure of the High Country" by Jonreed Lauritzen; "The Ski Lodge Mystery" by Montgomery M. Atwater; "Strange Case at Wilowood" by Lois Snelling; "Wolf Dog of Ambush Canyon" by Jo Sykes; "Hold Back the Hunter" by Dale White and "Romance at Courtesy Bend" by Marjorie Hall.

There has been a big upsurge in the reading of nonfiction since we moved into the new library. Probably because people can see what we have and also because we are getting more books of this type. Among additions of the last week are: Two books in the field of psychology: "The Natural Science of Stupidity" by Paul Tabori and "How to Raise Your Child's I.Q." by David Engler; In the field of language an outstanding work is "Our Language and Our World" by S. I. Hayakawa; "The world's Living Religions" by Robert E. Hume will be very popular. Two new books will appeal to those who love the sea. One is called "Pictorial History of American Ships" and was written by John Durant and the other is "Sailing and Small Craft Down the Ages" by Edgar L. Bloomster. Four new titles in pure and applied science will find readers. They are: "Darwin's Century" by Loren C. Eiseley; "Rock Garden Plants" by Doretta Klaber; "The New Materials" by Gerald Leach and "Engineering Mechanics" by A. P. Boresi.

The field of fine arts had some lovely additions this week "The Proud Possessors" by Aline B. Saarinen discusses some of the important collectors of the world. "The Gardens in the Royal Park at Windsor" by Lanning Roper is a perfectly beautiful book of pictures of one of the most beautiful gardens in the world. "A Picture History of Furniture" by Frank Davis will be eagerly accepted by those who enjoy the study of furniture. Two books about famous painters are "Canaletto" by M. Wallis and "The World of Van Gogh" by W. J. Gruyler . . . Musicians will enjoy "Conversations with Igor Stravinsky" and "The Van Cliburn Legend." An interesting book of essays which will appeal to those interested in the Civil War is "Still Rebels, Still Yankees" by Donald Davidson. "Wonders of the World" by Leonard Cottrell is a fascinating book of invaluable information. Everyone who read "Miracle at Carville" by Betty Martin will want to read the sequel "No One Must Ever Know."

The Silent Men Behind The Mails

THE SILENT INVESTIGATORS. By John N. Makris. Dutton. $4.95.

For one American who can identify D. H. Stephens, there must be a thousand who can put a finger on J. Edgar Hoover.

And yet Stephens is head of a federal investigative agency far older than the F. B. I. and one, according to John Makris, with a reputation unmatched in many ways.

The Postal Inspection Service has the responsibility of keeping the U. S. mails at high efficiency and seeing that anyone who misuses or robs them is brought to justice. In 1957 it arrested 7,344 persons and, of those it prosecuted, it convicted 98.9 per cent — an envied record.

Telling about some of the deeds of the service and many of the misdeeds of mail users, Makris has packed his book with a great deal of fascinating material about swindlers, love cheats, pornography purveyors, poison pen pals, and other rogues and rascals.

Benjamin Franklin became the first postal inspector back in 1737 under the British, as Makris sees it, and others performed similar duties after him, although the inspection service was not set up officially until 1829.

They have the responsibility of watching over the actions of half a million postal employes and more mail than is posted by all the rest of the world put together. They have the heaviest case load of any federal investigators, Markis asserts, and work about 50 hours a week.

The first outstanding criminal case in their annals was solved by a storybook operative named Thomas P. Shallcross who discovered, when all others failed, that the thief extracting large money shipments from the pouches carried by the Ohio Stage Co., was none other than the highly respected and politically powerful general agent of the stage coach company — Otho Hinton. Having hung it on him, Shallcross tracked him across the country and nearly around the globe in as relentless a manhunt as you ever read about.

Wrong Tracks, But Done Hurt Love Affair

GOODBYE, COLUMBUS. By Philip Roth. Houghton Mifflin. $3.75.

A young fellow named Neil, who has a job in a library, meets a girl named Brenda whose family, the Patimkins, is wealthy. But the difference in social scales does not keep them from starting on an ardent love affair, carried on hazardously in the Patimkin home. A quarrel stirred up by Neil leads to bickering and a re-examination of the relationship.

Following this novelette are five short stories also about Jewish people and problems—the soldier who takes an unfair advantage of his religion, for instance, the husband guilty of one misstep, the overly argumentative boy and dogmatic adults.

The novelette, though like the others it has a distinctly professional texture, with some deft comments, develops by means of three crucial but silly and unbelievable steps all concerned with the dispute. I find them so forced they vitiate all the careful background preparation. This is, in other words, another writer technically skillful but with ideas too unformed or not suitable for a novel — the short stories are much better. But the long work presumably won him his publisher's annual literary fellowship award, and he is one of the new Guggenheim fellows.

DOUGLAS PLAYS POLITICIAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Melvyn Douglas plans to make his next Broadway appearance in the role of a political bigwig in "The Gang's All Here," which is on Kermit Bloomgarden's production agenda.

It will be Douglas' second association with the play's authors, Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee. He stepped into their "Inherit the Wind" when Paul Muni was stricken with an eye ailment, later toured in the drama.

BLUES ON BROADWAY

NEW YORK (AP)—Harold Arlen's long - awaited musical about the music known as blues, goes into rehearsal in July. A 12 - week European tour is to precede its arrival on Broadway.

Stanley Chase is producing the show, "Free and Easy," that was previously known as "Blues Opera."

Maestro At War Against Dullards

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A slightly built Englishman who slings a baton instead of a six-gun is changing the cultural tastes across skyscraper and oilderrick studded Oklahoma.

Guy Fraser Harrison, whose crisp English accent is giving way to a Western drawl, rides herd on the Oklahoma City Symphony orchestra. He'll match his woodwinds and brass against any other collection in the country.

"Revolution in tastes?" says Harrison. "I've just gone along and done as I felt I should do with music here. I've never bowed too far to the whims of the public."

Oklahomans apparently like what Harrison has done in the eight years he has been here. The Oklahoma City Symphony has one of the highest per capita subscription rates in the nation.

GREAT IMPACT

"You can't deny the impact the orchestra has had in the past eight years," says an Oklahoma City music critic. "Eighty concerts a season is bound to make an unmistakable impression on the people."

Harrison doesn't cater only to big city culture. At least 10 of those concerts are in smaller Oklahoma towns, in high school gyms short on acoustics but abounding in audience appreciation.

Once a year Harrison gets choral groups from eight Oklahoma colleges as active participants in a massive musical work.

This year it was Handel's monumental "Te Deum," and it was better than a barn raising for the 500 students involved.

"It's the same each year. A tremendous experience for myself and the students," Harrison explains.

There are other factors at work in the revolution.

At least half the symphony's musicians work on the side as music teachers in Oklahoma colleges. Harrison himself pitches in at high schools and colleges at times.

PROBLEMS APLENTY

But the swing from tomtoms and frontier hoedowns to symphonic complexities isn't without its problems. And Harrison is the first to admit it.

Most of his musicians must be recruited from the East and competition for them is stiff.

"As a result those available are usually very young or older, and the older ones are rather set in their ways and likely to tell you, "This is the way I played under Toscanini'."

But, to Harrison's delight, Oklahoma City's symphony has one of the lowest personnel turnover rates of any symphony in the U. S.

Harris notices a change in audiences since he came West. Today they are "increasingly responsive and critical. Mistakes should never be tolerated and it's far too late to make them in Oklahoma."

RUNNING THE SCALES

With JOHN CALE

With the closeout of the Twin City Symphony season Thursday, there remain only a handful of events to be squeezed onto stages in the area before the spring graduation season takes over.

Davis Bingham, assistant professor of music at Northeast State College, has announced a performance of "The Creation" by Joseph Haydn by the college concert choir.

The program will begin at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday and will be under Bingham's direction. Eloise Calhoun Stanhope of the Northeast fine arts dept. faculty and Beth Brown of Tallulah, piano major at the college, will serve as accompanists.

Louisiana Tech faculty pianist Duchein Cazedessus will also perform this week — on Friday — at Howard Auditorium Little Theatre on the Tech campus. Cazedessus, a native Louisianian from Baton Rouge — has programmed the "Prelude, Chorale and Fugue" of Cesar Franck as the major work on his musical undertaking.

Frank, who was an organist at the Cathedral of St. Clothilde in Paris, composed most of his pieces after he had reached an advanced age. As a result, his music is philosophical with strong religious overtones. In addition, it is extremely hard to play.

Cazedessus, who has been as hospitable with his playing in this area as is befitting his deep south upbringing, has won quite a following during his 10-year association with the Tech faculty. For those persons and others who are professed fans of the piano, the trip to Tech Friday would be a worthwhile one. Program begins at 8 p.m.

THEATRE

The Monroe Little Theatre is rehearsing Country Girl as its last opus of the year. According to Director Ivan Uttal, the cast and stage crew want to get this one "on the boards" as soon as possible because of the approaching "still warmer" weather.

At the season's final concert of the Twin City Symphony the other night, the plea for funds for another year was voiced to the audience.

While fund raising for local musical and theatrical organizations is one of the more difficult tasks associated with entertainment of a higher brow, the direct solicitation among those persons who are interested seems to be the American way of getting the job done.

More and more we hear accounts of a certain percentage of some small nation's budget being earmarked for music and the theatre. A recent story, for example, claimed more than six per cent of Yugoslavia's national budget was to be spent on government supported music and fine arts.

On the surface, this may seem to be a fine way of avoiding a fund - raising headache. But the system of taxing everybody to provide something all the people may not be interested in is not basically fair.

So remember this bit of information when our local music and theater people approach you for money. They are working for no pay themselves on a community project. In so doing, they are able to assure finer entertainment without any sort of losses through bureaucratic handling of the funds as is the case in the more socialistic countries.

MICHENER WRITES OF HIS Love Affair With Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP)—James A. Michener has just written a new love story, a monumental novel he calls "a love story between me and a bunch of islands."

For the author of "Tales of the South Pacific" to write about islands is scarcely news but this one is his biggest so far and he has moved his locale up to the mid-Pacific, to the Hawaiian Islands.

His new book is titled simply: "Hawaii."

It runs 400,000 words, or some 800 pages.

"I think it is the best thing I've done," says Michener. "Certainly, it's the most ambitious thing I've done. I've been working on it for about three years. I started the final draft on May 1st of last year and I worked on it every day until last March 1st, except for a trip I made to San Francisco for four days."

"It is a story of how Polynesians, missionaries, Chinese and Japanese came to these islands and learned to live together side by side," he said.

"It has two climactic moments — on Pearl Harbor day, Dec. 7, 1941, and in the elections here in 1954 when the Democrats for the first time in 56 years came into any kind of power.

"I doubt if it can be serialized or made into a movie. The characters are too numerous and they change too fast.

ISLANDS ARE THEME

"The underlying thread in the book is the islands. They remain, and the people change.

"I think it is a major work, a real effort."

Michener, 52, wrote the book — his 12th — in a small office he maintains in the same eight-story apartment building at Waikiki Beach where he lives with his attractive wife, Mari.

"I got up at 7:30 every morning," he related "ate a couple of slices of pineapple, put on a pair of shorts and went to work. I admitted no interruptions. I have no phone in my office. I really went into an isolation chamber. I worked until noon, then knocked off. I never worked in the afternoon and only rarely in the evening. In the afternoon, I went beaching and I took a five mile walk every day to keep my weight (176 pounds) down."

"The purpose of the book is to explain why Hawaii is the wonderful place it is. It deals with how people and ideas got here and how the people learned to live together in harmony. There are four families and the book follows their fortunes.

"It would make a good movie but I don't think it is suited for it because it would take about nine hours to show it."

"I mailed 'Hawaii' to my publishers on March 12 — the day the Hawaii statehood bill was passed by Congress," he said. "I expect it to be published in October."

Statehood also made Michener change his legal address from Bucks County, Pennsylvania to Honolulu.

CHANGED RESIDENCE

"I have been here quite a while," he said, "but under no circumstances would I have changed my legal residence when I did not have the vote (for president). On the day Hawaii got the vote, I changed it."

Michener has been highly active in local politics and there's been talk in Democratic ranks of asking him to run for office. So far, he has resisted this.

"I used to teach political science," Michener explained, "and I am deeply interested in it. The only function I see for myself is to be an interested member of one of the political parties. On the day I moved my legal residence here, I joined the Democratic party.

"By and large, writers are not logical people to run for office. If you write and speak the truth, you hurt enough feelings so that you can't run for office. I have no capacity for it. I will work very hard to help other people."

But, with Hawaii's first state elections coming this summer, there are some who think James Michener may still run for office.

Good Book To Give To Your Doctor

CALL THE DOCTOR. By E. S. Turner. St. Martin's Press, $3.95.

This is an ideal book for a patient to give his doctor, or a doctor to give his patient provided both have a sense of humor.

The author, who also wrote "A History of Courting" and "The Shocking History of Advertising!" here wields a merry scalpel on British medical practitioners from the Middle Ages to the Welfare State.

"Today there are thousands of doctors who are never seen at a patient's bedside," he says, but points out that for several hundred years the farther a doctor was from the bedside the better were the patient's chances of recovery.

In Chaucer's day, for example, one famous doctor treated epileptics by having crumbs of roasted cuckoo blown up his nostrils. The insane were beaten. To invoke the help of heaven, medicine was sometimes drunk from a church bell.

Some choice examples from the doctor's code at that time:

"When feeling the patient's pulse, allow for the fact that he may be disturbed by your arrival and the thought of the fee you are going to charge him.

"Stay sober.

"Avoid the company or friendship of laymen. They make a habit of mocking doctors, and besides, it is no always easy to extract a fee from an intimate."

The book is studded with scores of ancedotes, some gruesome, illustrating the rise of medicine from an ignorant art to at least the discipline of a hopeful science. You think wonder drugs are new? An early English medical prescription began, "Take six live vipers and —."

Turner's style is lively, satiric, eminently readable, and his book covers every facet of medicine from graverobbing to plastic surgery. The details he gives of the ordeals Britain's ailing monarchs underwent at the hands of their physicians are enough to scare a modern hypochondriac healthy.

His summary of the British doctor's position under socialized medicine: "He is in the hands of the politicians."

Beat Is On The Offbeat For A Little

DOCTOR SAX. By Jack Kerouac. Grove. $3.50, cloth; $1.75, paper.

Kerouac here moves back to Lowell, Mass., the Merrimac River, the French-Catholic community, his own family, the old dilapidated home, and his boyhood gang.

This is a novel, says the publisher, and it is largely autobiographical. The same could be said with equal accuracy I suspect, about this writer's other books, though this particular one is a series of fragments bound together principally by locale.

We see the boy at home, we are exposed with him to some of the more objectionable vulgarities of adolescence, we visit the Castle, we are afraid in the dark, we watch "la grosse flood" of the Merrimac, we are generously treated to some of the "Doctor Sax" hocus-pocus.

The opening pages fascinated me — here Kerouac the beat writer was doing the fresh off-beat thing expected of him. But it doesn't last. He turns pretentious, he goes blah-blah-blah instead of doing honest writing. There are some remarkably vivid and evocative passages, some tender scenes with the mother, some high-powered prose, and then some filth and nonsense. Kerouac needs editing, or maybe just spanking, or something, to give our letters the benefit of the real good in him.

1,000 New Books In The Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

A total of 1,000 new books were added to the book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library during the month of April. Of this number 388 were adult books and 612 were juvenile. This is the largest number ever added during the history of the library. Of the new adult books 185 were fiction titles, 191 were non-fiction and 12 were reference books. Of the juvenile books 529 were fiction and 83 were non-fiction. 891 of these books were purchased with library funds and 107 were gifts. I want to remind you again that we are happy to receive gifts to help build up the library collection. We are interested in memorial gifts, gifts of money or gifts of books. Our book collection is now 55,355 books, but we need many more titles to have the sort of library we want and you need. We have the space now and we hope you will help us build up our book collection. On January 1, 1948 our book collection consisted of 22,823 books and on January 1, 1959 it consisted of 52,890 books. You can see that we have doubled our collection in 10 years and have added 2,500 books since the first of this year. If we can double it again in another ten years we should be up to standard as far as our collection is concerned.

NEW BOOKS

Let's take a look at some of the new books added during the past week. In the field of fiction, there are stories for every taste. "Love Is a Wild Assault" by E. H. Kirkland has its setting in Texas during the early days of the state. It is based on a diary left by Harriet Page Potter Ames. It is a good story and gives an interesting picture of the times. A much better than average western is "The Life and Times of Buckshot South" written by Frank Davis Adams. "The Chinese Box" by Katherine Wigmore Eyre has its setting in San Francisco and is extremely well done. Two existing new mystery stories are "The Watcher" by Dolores Hitchens and "The Smasher" by Talmadge Powell. A sond but intensely interesting book is "The Hourglass" by Edwin Gilbert. It has its setting in Greenwich Village and other sections of New York during the period of the thirties. It is extremely well-written and the characters are well done. "April Harvest" by Lillian Budd continues the adventures of a Scandanavian family in the U. S. and makes for interesting reading. "Woman from the Country" by D'Arcy Noland has its setting in Australia and gives a good picture of that land. "Roots of Heaven" by Romain Gary is another fine piece of work by an outstanding modern French novelist. "The Enemy Stars" is a very exciting science fiction story written by Paul Anderson. "Blackberry Wilderness" by Sylvia Berkman is a book of short stories which will appeal to the discerning reader, but not to everyone. "The Reunion" is another of Robert Molloy's fine stories with a setting in Charleston, S. C. and will be eagerly welcomed by his readers. "Doniphan's Ride" by Les Savage, Jr. is an interesting story with a setting of the Mexican war. This is a period which has been neglected by writers of historical fiction and the book will fill a need.

EIGHT NEW

Eight new titles were added to the young adult collection this week. They are "Beckoning Landfall" by Erick Berry; "Treasure of the High Country" by Jonreed Lauritzen; "The Ski Lodge Mystery" by Montgomery M. Atwater; "Strange Case at Willowood" by Lois Snelling; "Wolf Dog of Ambush Canyon" by Jo Sykes; "Hold Back the Hunter" by Dale White and "Romance at Courtesy Bend" by Marjorie Hall.

There has been a big upsurge in the reading of nonfiction since we moved into the new library. Probably because people can see what we have and also because we are getting more books of this type. Among additions of the last week are: Two books in the field of psychology: "The Natural Science of Stupidity" by Paul Tabori and "How to Raise Your Child's I.Q." by David Engler; In the field of language an outstanding work is "Our Language and Our World" by S. I. Hayakawa; "The world's Living Religions" by Robert E. Hume will be very popular. Two new books will appeal to those who love the sea. One is called "Pictorial History of American Ships" and was written by John Durant and the other is "Sailing and Small Craft Down the Ages" by Edgar L. Bloomster. Four new titles in pure and applied science will find readers. They are: "Darwin's Century" by Loren C. Eiseley; "Rock Garden Plants" by Doretta Klaber; "The New Materials" by Gerald Leach and "Engineering Mechanics" by A. P. Boresi.

The field of fine arts had some lovely additions this week "The Proud Possessors" by Aline B. Saarinen discusses some of the important collectors of the world. "The Gardens in the Royal Park at Windsow" by Lanning Roper is a perfectly beautiful book of pictures of one of the most beautiful gardens in the world. "A Picture History of Furniture" by Frank Davis will be eagerly accepted by those who enjoy the study of furniture. Two books about famous painters are "Canaletto" by M. Wallis and "The World of Van Gogh" by W. J. Gruyler . . . Musicians will enjoy "Conversations with Igor Stravinsky" and "The Van Cliburn Legend." An interesting book of essays which will appeal to those interested in the Civil War is "Still Rebels, Still Yankees" by Donald Davidson. "Wonders of the World" by Leonard Cottrell is a fascinating book of invaluable information. Everyone who read "Miracle at Carville" by Betty Martin will want to read the sequel "No One Must Ever Know."

The Silent Men Behind The Mails

THE SILENT INVESTIGATORS. By John N. Makris. Dutton. $4.95.

For one American who can identify D. H. Stephens, there must be a thousand who can put a finger on J. Edgar Hoover.

And yet Stephens is head of a federal investigative agency far older than the F. B. I. and one, according to John Makris, with a reputation unmatched in many ways.

The Postal Inspection Service has the responsibility of keeping the U. S. mails at high efficiency and seeing that anyone who misuses or robs them is brought to justice. In 1957 it arrested 7,344 persons and, of those it prosecuted, it convicted 98.9 per cent — an envied record.

Telling about some of the deeds of the service and many of the misdeeds of mail users, Makris has packed his book with a great deal of fascinating material about swindlers, love cheats, pornography purveyors, poison pen pals, and other rogues and rascals.

Benjamin Franklin became the first postal inspector back in 1737 under the British, as Makris sees it, and others performed similar duties after him, although the inspection service was not set up officially until 1829.

They have the responsibility of watching over the actions of half a million postal employes and more mail than is posted by all the rest of the world put together. They have the heaviest case load of any federal investigators, Markis asserts, and work about 50 hours a week.

The first outstanding criminal case in their annals was solved by a storybook operative named Thomas P. Shallcross who discovered, when all others failed, that the thief extracting large money shipments from the pouches carried by the Ohio Stage Co., was none other than the highly respected and politically powerful general agent of the stage coach company — Otho Hinton. Having hung it on him, Shallcross tracked him across the country and nearly around the globe in as relentless a manhunt as you ever read about.

DOUGLAS PLAYS POLITICIAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Melvyn Douglas plans to make his next Broadway appearance in the role of a political bigwig in "The Gang's All Here," which is on Kermit Bloomgarden's production agenda.

It will be Douglas' second association with the play's authors, Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee. He stepped into their "Inherit the Wind" when Paul Muni was stricken with an eye ailment, later toured in the drama.

BLUES ON BROADWAY

NEW YORK (AP)—Harold Arlen's long-awaited musical about the music known as blues, goes into rehearsal in July. A 12-week European tour is to precede its arrival on Broadway.

Stanley Chase is producing the show, "Free and Easy," that was previously known as "Blues Opera."

Maestro At War Against Dullards

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A slightly built Englishman who slings a baton instead of a six-gun is changing the cultural tastes across skyscraper and oilderrick studded Oklahoma.

Guy Fraser Harrison, whose crisp English accent is giving way to a Western drawl, rides herd on the Oklahoma City Symphony orchestra. He'll match his woodwinds and brass against any other collection in the country.

"Revolution in tastes?" says Harrison. "I've just gone along and done as I felt I should do with music here. I've never bowed too far to the whims of the public."

Oklahomans apparently like what Harrison has done in the eight years he has been here. The Oklahoma City Symphony has one of the highest per capita subscription rates in the nation.

GREAT IMPACT

"You can't deny the impact the orchestra has had in the past eight years," says an Oklahoma City music critic. "Eighty concerts a season is bound to make an unmistakable impression on the people."

Harrison doesn't cater only to big city culture. At least 10 of those concerts are in smaller Oklahoma towns, in high school gyms short on acoustics but abounding in audience appreciation.

Once a year Harrison gets choral groups from eight Oklahoma colleges as active participants in a massive musical work.

This year it was Handel's monumental "Te Deum," and it was better than a barn raising for the 500 students involved.

"It's the same each year. A tremendous experience for myself and the students," Harrison explains.

There are other factors at work in the revolution.

At least half the symphony's musicians work on the side as music teachers in Oklahoma colleges. Harrison himself pitches in at high schools and colleges at times.

PROBLEMS APLENTY

But the swing from tomtoms and frontier hoedowns to symphonic complexities isn't without its problems. And Harrison is the first to admit it.

Most of his musicians must be recruited from the East and competition for them is stiff.

"As a result those available are usually very young or older, and the older ones are rather set in their ways and likely to tell you, "This is the way I played under Toscanini'."

But, to Harrison's delight, Oklahoma City's symphony has one of the lowest personnel turnover rates of any symphony in the U. S.

Harris notices a change in audiences since he came West. Today they are "increasingly responsive and critical. Mistakes should never be tolerated and it's far too late to make them in Oklahoma."

RUNNING THE SCALES

With JOHN CALE

With the closeout of the Twin City Symphony season Thursday, there remain only a handful of events to be squeezed onto stages in the area before the spring graduation season takes over.

Davis Bingham, assistant professor of music at Northeast State College, has announced a performance of "The Creation" by Joseph Haydn by the college concert choir.

The program will begin at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday and will be under Bingham's direction. Eloise Calhoun Stanhope of the Northeast fine arts dept. faculty and Beth Brown of Tallulah, piano major at the college, will serve as accompanists.

Louisiana Tech faculty pianist Duchein Cazedessus will also perform this week — on Friday — at Howard Auditorium Little Theatre on the Tech campus. Cazedessus — a native Louisianian from Baton Rouge — has programmed the "Prelude, Chorale and Fugue" of Cesar Frank as the major work on his musical undertaking.

Frank, who was an organist at the Cathedral of St. Clothilde in Paris, composed most of his pieces after he had reached an advanced age. As a result, his music is philosophical with strong religious overtones. In addition, it is extremely hard to play. Cazedessus, who has been as hospitable with his playing in this area as is befitting his deep south upbringing, has won quite a following during his 10-year association with the Tech faculty. For those persons and others who are professed fans of the piano, the trip to Tech Friday would be a worthwhile one. Program begins at 8 p.m.

THEATRE

The Monroe Little Theatre is rehearsing Country Girl as its last opus of the year. According to Director Ivan Uttal, the cast and stage crew want to get this one "on the boards" as soon as possible because of the approaching "still warmer" weather.

At the season's final concert of the Twin City Symphony the other night, the plea for funds for another year was voiced to the audience.

While fund raising for local musical and theatrical organizations is one of the more difficult tasks associated with entertainment of a higher brow, the direct solicitation among those persons who are interested seems to be the American way of getting the job done.

More and more we hear accounts of a certain percentage of some small nation's budget being earmarked for music and the theatre. A recent story, for example, claimed more than six per cent of Yugoslavia's national budget was to be spent on government supported music and fine arts.

On the surface, this may seem to be a fine way of avoiding a fund-raising headache. But the system of taxing everybody to provide something all the people may not be interested in is not basically fair.

So remember this bit of information when our local music and theater people approach you for money. They are working for no pay themselves on a community project. In so doing, they are able to assure finer entertainment without any sort of losses through bureaucratic handling of the funds as is the case in the more socialistic countries.

Wrong Tracks, But Done Hurt Love Affair

GOODBYE, COLUMBUS. By Philip Roth. Houghton Mifflin. $3.75.

A young fellow named Neil, who has a job in a library, meets a girl named Brenda whose family, the Patimkins, is wealthy. But the difference in social scales does not keep them from starting on an ardent love affair, carried on hazardously in the Patimkin home. A quarrel stirred up by Neil leads to bickering and a re-examination of the relationship.

Following this novelette are five short stories also about Jewish people and problems—the soldier who takes an unfair advantage of his religion, for instance, the husband guilty of one misstep, the overly argumentative boy and dogmatic adults.

The novelette, though like the others it has a distinctly professional texture, with some deft comments, develops by means of three crucial but silly and unbelievable steps all concerned with the dispute. I find them so forced they vitiate all the careful background preparation. This is, in other words, another writer technically skillful but with ideas too unformed or not suitable for a novel — the short stories are much better. But the long work presumably won him his publisher's annual literary fellowship award, and he is one of the new Guggenheim fellows.

'ALIAS JESSE JAMES'

Hope's New Film Spoofs Westerns

Bob Hope's spoof of what goes for "western" entertainment will take over the Paramount Theatre screen starting today when the star's "Alias Jesse James" sets up camp for a long stay. Red-tressed Rhonda Fleming appears as Hope's leading lady in a role as a dance hall queen with Wendell Corey as the notorious train robber. Bob and his brother Jack co-produced "Alias Jesse James" in color by De Luxe, directed by Norman Z. McLeod.

The comic plays the part of Milford Farnsworth, a gabby but fumbling insurance agent who sells a $100,000 policy to Jesse James. He soon learns what a poor risk James is, insurance wise, what with lead poisoning epidemic in those parts. It becomes the duty of the dude to get that signed-up policy back and cancel the company's obligation.

Hope's return as "Alias Jesse James" marks his first appearance in a "western" since the "Paleface" series and the end of a two - year absence from Hollywood films. His last picture made in Hollywood was 'Beau James." Since then he has made two in Europe besides his TV appearances.

The barbed Bob Hope will get an assist by a number of ingenious visual gags which crowd the movie screen. Trick photography, wild chases, special props and a bang-up climax too good to divulge all add to the hilarious satire according to the advance reports.

William Bowers and Daniel D. Beauchamp prepared the screenplay for this United Artists release.

Sinatra Said To Be Angry At MGM

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Frank Sinatra is sore at MGM because the studio won't send his new film to Hawaii on location.

The picture is "Sacred And Profane," formerly "Never So Few," and it was originally set for shooting in Burma. Then it was Hawaii. Now the jungle warfare will be waged on the MGM backlot.

"I'm against it," the singer remarked. "The location in Hawaii would only be 10 days. But the production department says it will add $400,000 to the budget and they won't go it. I think it's worth paying that to get authentic flavor."

Many will agree. "Bridge On The River Kwai" also could have been filmed on the MGM back lot, but it wouldn't have been the same picture. There's a flavor to authentic locales that the best of Hollywood's craftsmen can't duplicate. . . .

Sinatra is a real fan of Gina Lollobrigida, who co-stars with him in the film. She and her husband came to Las Vegas for 24 hours as Frank's guests, and her large eyes got even larger.

The town is amazed at the success of "The Shaggy Dog," which may be Walt Disney's biggest grosser. The odd part is that television could have had the property. Walt wanted to do a series with his Mickey Mouse club graduates, and one of the sequences had a boy turning into a dog. ABC turned down the idea, and the dog story turned into a feature.

'NEW' JESSE JAMES

Bob Hope and Rhonda Fleming whip up a storm of laughs in a lampoon of the legendary west in "Alias Jesse James" at the Paramount Theatre. The picture will continue to show through Wednesday.

Maltese Stamp Issued Anew

During World War II the little island of Malta was continually bombarded by Nazi aircraft. For the heroism and bravery displayed by its people, the colony received the coveted George Cross from Great Britain.

Stamps honoring receipt of the award were issued in 1957 and 1958. This year another set of three has been released.

To commemorate the 10th anniversary of the Berlin Airlift, Western Germany has issued a new 25 pfennig stamp, depicting silhouettes of planes flying through the "corridor" to and from Berlin.

Also issued by Western Germany was a 10 pfennig stamp honoring the 400th anniversary of the death of Adam Riese, famous mathematician. The stamp bears Riese's portrait.

Turkey pays tribute philatelically to the 100th anniversary of the Turkish theatre by issuing two new stamps. The 20 kurus shows the state theatre in Ankara. The 25 kurus bears a portrait of Sinasi, Turkish poet, who wrote the first play in the Turkish language.

African Freedom Day was honored by Liberia with two new stamps. The 20 cents regular, orange and brown, depicts a map of Africa and marching people. The 25 cents airmail, blue and brown, shows two people reading President Tubman's speech on African Freedom Day.

To honor the Danish Ballet and Music Festival (May 17-31) Denmark is issuing a 35-ore stamp. The reddish mauve stamp will depict a ballerina performing in the ballet "Sylfiden."

Canada has issued a new five cents green and black stamp honoring the "Associated Country Women of the World." The stamp shows a woman kneeling beside a tree over which the globe is poised. It is inscribed "Associated Women of the World" in both French and English.

Two new stamps have been issued by Austria, reports Edwin Mueller. One commemorates the 175th anniversary of the Austrian Tobacco Monopoly which was founded in 1784. It is a 2.40 schilling brown stamp and pictures a cigarette manufacturing machine. The second special stamp honors the centenary of the death of Archduke Johann of Austria, grandson of Empress Maria Theresa.

MISS HARRIS IN COMEDY

NEW YORK (AP)—Julie Harris, a star who has spent this season on an extended pre-Broadway tour with her new play "The Warm Peninsula," is booked for Broadway premiere in the comedy on Oct. 22.

Miss Harris' husband, producer Manning Gurian, has obtained the Helen Hayes theater for the presentation.

Heat a can of drained blue lake green beans with a can of tomato sauce spiced up with chili powder and a little vinegar. Spoon over grilled hamburger patties and serve with baked potatoes for an easy supper.

LITTLE THEATRE

The big event of the week was the annual meeting of the membership of Little Theatre which was held in the playhouse on May 4th. Did you realize that every ticket holder is entitled to attend the annual meeting to make suggestions, offer criticisms (constructive) and to vote on new members of the board?

We're a corporation — just like General Motors — well, not just like — but we are a corporation. Apparently not very many people know because not many people ever come. There were about seventy - five who turned out Monday night, somewhat more than usual. Let's see if we can remember a few who were there: B B Stron, Frances Weir, Henry Haas, Jr., Mac Ward, Ed Ellison, Slade and Jane Brown, Carl Slakter, Frances Huey, Dolly Dawkins, Ruth Shipman, Mary Wilton Fortner, Dick Major, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Bruce, the C. S. Fosters, Russ Kettenring, the L. H. Carters, Ted Landhy, and of course, the members of the board of directors. Furthermore, rehearsal was in progress before the meeting and continued afterward so we were pleased to have the cast and director there too.

Applause followed the announcement that Ivan Uttal will direct our plays again next year.

Going off the board are Frank Eason, Ray Magruder, Frances McHenry, Judy Evans, and Dot Elmendorf — wonderful workers all. How can we possibly do without them! Their interest in and services to Little Theatre have been immeasurable. To them go our heartfelt thanks.

The new members of the Board of Directors elected for three years are Mrs. Bernard Biedenharn, Mrs. Clark Boardman, Scherck Bogen, Mrs. J. Hunter Thatcher, and Robert Evans. We are very proud that these busy and capable people have agreed to serve our Little Theater. There are big days ahead.

Our young and talented Linda Lavender has been in the hospital. What a way for a senior to spend these May days. We hope to see her on stage with her classmates at the West Monroe High School graduation.

This past week Mrs. Marcus Mapp, one of our members, gave a splendid analysis of the book Dr. Zhivago at the Review Club. Besides making a good talk, she was a veritable glass of fashion in a red and white polka dot dress with hat to match. We saw at the same club at least two other Little Theaterites, Mrs. Bonnie Bennett in cool yellow pique and Mrs. J. W. McLemore of Winnsboro in a blue and white print. We have a number of ticket holders in Winnsboro and are so proud that they are willing to drive eighty miles (round trip, that is) to see our plays. They say the performances are well worth the journey.

Good news in the Gill family. Maud S. Gill McClary is moving to Shreveport. We hate for Maud S. to leave Monroe, but Shreveport is so near compared to Egypt, Korea, and other remote places where her husband has been stationed during past years. We know we'll see them here for the first play of next season.

Another faithful member, Mrs. A. M. Guerriero spent last week in Vicksburg with her son, Dr. James Guerriero.

The Neville Alumni banquet Tuesday night was a great gala. More than three hundred alums were kept interested and amused by our clever toastmaster and Little Theater director, Frank Breese.

'ALIAS JESSE JAMES'

Hope's New Film Spoofs Westerns

Bob Hope's spoof of what goes for "western" entertainment will take over the Paramount Theatre screen starting today when the star's "Alias Jesse James" sets up camp for a long stay. Red-tressed Rhonda Fleming appears as Hope's leading lady in a role as a dance hall queen with Wendell Corey as the notorious train robber. Bob and his brother Jack co-produced "Alias Jesse James" in color by De Luxe, directed by Norman Z. McLeod.

The comic plays the part of Milford Farnsworth, a gabby but fumbling insurance agent who sells a $100,000 policy to Jesse James. He soon learns what a poor risk James is, insurance wise, what with lead poisoning epidemic in those parts. It becomes the duty of the dude to get that signed-up policy back and cancel the company's obligation.

Hope's return as "Alias Jesse James" marks his first appearance in a "western" since the "Paleface" series and the end of a two - year absence from Hollywood films. His last picture made in Hollywood was 'Beau James." Since then he has made two in Europe besides his TV appearances.

The barbed Bob Hope will get an assist by a number of ingenious visual gags which crowd the movie screen. Trick photography, wild chases, special props and a bang-up climax too good to divulge all add to the hilarious satire according to the advance reports.

William Bowers and Daniel D. Beauchamp prepared the screenplay for this United Artists release.

Sinatra Said To Be Angry At MGM

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Frank Sinatra is sore at MGM because the studio won't send his new film to Hawaii on location.

The picture is "Sacred And Profane," formerly "Never So Few," and it was originally set for shooting in Burma. Then it was Hawaii. Now the jungle warfare will be waged on the MGM backlot.

"I'm against it," the singer remarked. "The location in Hawaii would only be 10 days. But the production department says it will add $400,000 to the budget and they won't go it. I think it's worth paying that to get authentic flavor."

Many will agree. "Bridge On The River Kwai" also could have been filmed on the MGM back lot, but it wouldn't have been the same picture. There's a flavor to authentic locales that the best of Hollywood's craftsmen can't duplicate. . . .

Sinatra is a real fan of Gina Lollobrigida, who co-stars with him in the film. She and her husband came to Las Vegas for 24 hours as Frank's guests, and her large eyes got even larger.

The town is amazed at the success of "The Shaggy Dog," which may be Walt Disney's biggest grosser. The odd part is that television could have had the property. Walt wanted to do a series with his Mickey Mouse club graduates, and one of the sequences had a boy turning into a dog. ABC turned down the idea, and the dog story turned into a feature.

'NEW' JESSE JAMES

Bob Hope and Rhonda Fleming whip up a storm of laughs in a lampoon of the legendary west in "Alias Jesse James" at the Paramount Theatre. The picture will continue to show through Wednesday.

AMERICAN IS FAVORITE

NEW YORK (AP) —Gerry Jedd, an American actress who has yet to make her Broadway debut, has been named along with Dame Sybil Thorndike as the outstanding actress of the year in a British audience poll.

Miss Jedd is appearing in the English production of "Two for the Seasaw." She has appeared in several off-Broadway shows.

"SHALOM" ON BROADWAY

NEW YORK (AP)—Dean Brelis has completed a play version of his own novel "Shalom" for Broadway production. It concerns the exodus of a group of Jewish refugees from a displaced persons' camp to Israel.

The play is being presented by William Darris and Eleanore Saidenberg, sponsors of "The Disenchanted" this season.

HOME FOR ACTORS

NEW YORK (AP)—A new home for 40 retired performers is to be built by the Actors Fund of America at Englewood, N. J. The facilities will replace a 40-room frame structure used since 1928, which has accomodations for 20.

A staff of about 25 will also be quartered in the new building. Cost of the project is $600,000.

Maltese Stamp Issued Anew

During World War II the little island of Malta was continually bombarded by Nazi aircraft. For the heroism and bravery displayed by its people, the colony received the coveted George Cross from Great Britain.

Stamps honoring receipt of the award were issued in 1957 and 1958. This year another set of three has been released.

To commemorate the 10th anniversary of the Berlin Airlift, Western Germany has issued a new 25 pfennig stamp, depicting silhouettes of planes flying through the "corridor" to and from Berlin.

Also issued by Western Germany was a 10 pfennig stamp honoring the 400th anniversary of the death of Adam Riese, famous mathematician. The stamp bears Riese's portrait.

Turkey pays tribute philatelically to the 100th anniversary of the Turkish theatre by issuing two new stamps. The 20 kurus shows the state theatre in Ankara. The 25 kurus bears a portrait of Sinasi, Turkish poet, who wrote the first play in the Turkish language.

African Freedom Day was honored by Liberia with two new stamps. The 20 cents regular, orange and brown, depicts a map of Africa and marching people. The 25 cents airmail, blue and brown, shows two people reading President Tubman's speech on African Freedom Day.

To honor the Danish Ballet and Music Festival (May 17-31) Denmark is issuing a 35-ore stamp. The reddish mauve stamp will depict a ballerina performing in the ballet "Sylfiden."

Canada has issued a new five cents green and black stamp honoring the "Associated Country Women of the World." The stamp shows a woman kneeling beside a tree over which the globe is poised. It is inscribed "Associated Women of the World" in both French and English.

Two new stamps have been issued by Austria, reports Edwin Mueller. One commemorates the 175th anniversary of the Austrian Tobacco Monopoly which was founded in 1784. It is a 2.40 schilling brown stamp and pictures a cigarette manufacturing machine. The second special stamp honors the centenary of the death of Archduke Johann of Austria, grandson of Empress Maria Theresa.

MISS HARRIS IN COMEDY

NEW YORK (AP)—Julie Harris, a star who has spent this season on an extended pre-Broadway tour with her new play "The Warm Peninsula," is booked for Broadway premiere in the comedy on Oct. 22.

Miss Harris' husband, producer Manning Gurian, has obtained the Helen Hayes theater for the presentation.

Heat a can of drained blue lake green beans with a can of tomato sauce spiced up with chili powder and a little vinegar. Spoon over grilled hamburger patties and serve with baked potatoes for an easy supper.

LITTLE THEATRE

The big event of the week was the annual meeting of the membership of Little Theatre which was held in the playhouse on May 4th. Did you realize that every ticket holder is entitled to attend the annual meeting to make suggestions, offer criticisms (constructive) and to vote on new members of the board?

We're a corporation — just like General Motors — well, not just like — but we are a corporation. Apparently not very many people know because not many people ever come. There were about seventy - five who turned out Monday night, somewhat more than usual. Let's see if we can remember a few who were there: B B Stron, Frances Weir, Henry Haas, Jr., Mac Ward, Ed Ellison, Slade and Jane Brown, Carl Slakter, Frances Huey, Dolly Dawkins, Ruth Shipman, Mary Wilton Fortner, Dick Major, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Bruce, the C. S. Fosters, Russ Kettenring, the L. H. Carters, Ted Landhy, and of course, the members of the board of directors. Furthermore, rehearsal was in progress before the meeting and continued afterward so we were pleased to have the cast and director there too.

Applause followed the announcement that Ivan Uttal will direct our plays again next year.

Going off the board are Frank Eason, Ray Magruder, Frances McHenry, Judy Evans, and Dot Elmendorf — wonderful workers all. How can we possibly do without them! Their interest in and services to Little Theatre have been immeasurable. To them go our heartfelt thanks.

The new members of the Board of Directors elected for three years are Mrs. Bernard Biedenharn, Mrs. Clark Boardman, Scherck Bogen, Mrs. J. Hunter Thatcher, and Robert Evans. We are very proud that these busy and capable people have agreed to serve our Little Theater. There are big days ahead.

Our young and talented Linda Lavender has been in the hospital. What a way for a senior to spend these May days. We hope to see her on stage with her classmates at the West Monroe High School graduation.

This past week Mrs. Marcus Mapp, one of our members, gave a splendid analysis of the book Dr. Zhivago at the Review Club. Besides making a good talk, she was a veritable glass of fashion in a red and white polka dot dress with hat to match. We saw at the same club at least two other Little Theaterites, Mrs. Bonnie Bennett in cool yellow pique and Mrs. J. W. McLemore of Winnsboro in a blue and white print. We have a number of ticket holders in Winnsboro and are so proud that they are willing to drive eighty miles (round trip, that is) to see our plays. They say the performances are well worth the journey.

Good news in the Gill family. Maud S. Gill McClary is moving to Shreveport. We hate for Maud S. to leave Monroe, but Shreveport is so near compared to Egypt, Korea, and other remote places where her husband has been stationed during past years. We know we'll see them here for the first play of next season.

Another faithful member, Mrs. A. M. Guerriero spent last week in Vicksburg with her son, Dr. James Guerriero.

The Neville Alumni banquet Tuesday night was a great gala. More than three hundred alums were kept interested and amused by our clever toastmaster and Little Theater director, Frank Breese.

Floating Ice Island Home For U.S. Research Team

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the remarkable story of America's "ice Islands" and of the courageous men who establish and man them.)

By CHARLES R. MOORE
United Press International

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI)—For the third year, the United States has a military-scientific research station on a floating, traveling ice "island" in the Arctic Ocean north of Point Barrow.

It will be home for 15 scientists and 12 Air Force officers as long as it holds together.

That may be a day, a week or years. If the ice lasts long enough most of the men will be rotated after about six months but the base will continue in operation.

If the ice breaks up, and they are as lucky as last year's residents, they will be hauled to safety by Air Force planes before the last chunk vanishes under their feet.

The station is called Alpha II. When established in mid - April this year, it was 270 miles north of Point Barrow. If it follows the course of Alpha I, which went to pieces last November after 18 months of existence, it may cruise to the North Pole.

No one can predict its exact course. That is one of the reasons for its existence. Scientists and military men want to know more about ocean currents, ocean depths and the nature of the polar ice cap.

One of their greatest interests is the "little picture" of the weather there. The "big picture" is fairly well plotted. Weather stations around the world, aided by high-altitude balloons and airplane reports, can tell with reasonable accuracy what is happening on a global basis.

At Alpha II they are learning more about what goes on within 50 feet of the ground—the weather that immediately affects most men and animals. They call it micro-meteorology.

This involves ordinary measurement, such as temperature and wind velocity, ut it also goes farther into specific causes and effects. Such as what happens to a man's nose when he peels back his parka hood to a temperature of, say, 30 below zero with the wind at 50 miles an hour.

One might say that cause and effect in such a case has been fairly common knowledge. He'd get it frozen. But that isn't enough for the scientist. He goes on to computations about such things as the "chill factor," a single figure that can tell more about how many layers of clothing to put on than mere temperature.

Again one might say, well, shucks, the Eskimos didn't know a chill factor from a red sled and they got along. But the white men who are moving north in ever-increasing numbers do not want to live like primitive Eskimos. They intend to be comfortable there, to make their living —in ways perhaps not yet known —and the scientists' belief is that the knowledge they are gaining on the ice cap may assist those aims.

The military side is not stressed but it is obvious. When the nuclear subs Nautilus and Skate go under the ice cap they do not grope blindly through undersea mountains. Their skippers will know more about these mountains because of soundings taken from Alpha II.

If war ever came, this sea probably would swarm with subs and there probably would be troops from both sides on top of the ice.

Those of the United States, because of research on the ice cap, would not be moving into the unknown.

Neither would the Russians. They have similar islands, and possibly more of them. In fact the floating research station may have been an authentic first for them.

Boy's Play With Matches Causes Fire; 9 Injured

NEW YORK (UPI) — A fire started by an 8 - year - old boy playing with matches roared through two tenements in the heart of Harlem Saturday, injuring nine persons.

Eight of the injured were firemen. They suffered smoke poisoning, burns and cuts in bringing the blaze under control.

Stephen Scott, 41, was asleep in his second floor bedroom when the fire broke out. He jumped from a window to the sidewalk and was taken to a hospital with possible fractures of both legs.

Fire Marshal Martin J. Scott said the fire began in a five-story tenement when the boy set his grandfather's bed afire on the first floor of the building. The flames spread quickly to the roof and jumped to an adjoining building.

Fireman Thomas De Chalus, 31, narrowly escaped death when a cornice of the building fell and struck the ladder on which he was standing with a fire hose. De Chalus lost his grip but somehow slid down the ladder, with legs straddling it, to the fire engine where three firemen caught him. He slid about 40 feet but was not injured seriously.

BETTER GRIP

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — The wetter the denture, the better its grip, says Prof. Robert G. Craig, of the Uniyersity of Michigan, who's been studying the factors that make false teeth stay put.

Ike Plays Golf, Bridge To Relax On Stag Outing

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — President Eisenhower put the emphasis on golf and bridge Saturday midway through a stag weekend of relaxation in the country.

His golf game, at least, seemed to be improving after a creaky start.

"The President shot a nice game," said one of his companions of the fairways, retired Brig. Gen. Arthur S. Nevins.

Nevins didn't say what Eisenhower's score was, but his own was a respectable 85. George E. Allen of Washington completed the golf threesome at the Gettysburg Country Club.

Like Eisenhower, Nevins and Allen are gentlemen farmers at Gettysburg.

The President and Allen, however, are making their headquarters for the weekend 25 miles away, at Camp David, Eisenhower's retreat in the Catoctin Mountains near Thurmont, Md.

To make up a table of bridge in the oak-panelled sunroom of the presidential lodge, retired Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther of Washington and William E. Robinson of New York were invited in. Gruenther heads the American Red Cross; Robinson is chairman of Coca-Cola Corp.

More Americans were wounded in World War II than in all other U. S. wars put together.

In 1685, only 2,000 persons lived in Belfast, which is now the capital of Ulster, or Northern Ireland, and has a population of 450,000.

There are more than 865 independent scientific laboratories in the U. S. working on research and development in consultation with industry.

Fortunately for most of us, we don't have to pay cash for everything we buy. We can take advantage of the liberal, flexible system of personal credit which enables us to buy and enjoy the things we want, when we want them, and to pay for them later. Whether our income is large or small, we can enjoy the privilege of buying almost anything, anywhere, if our credit record is good.

Floating Ice Island Home For U.S. Research Team

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the remarkable story of America's "ice Islands" and of the courageous men who establish and man them.)

By CHARLES R. MOORE
United Press International

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI)— For the third year, the United States has a military-scientific research station on a floating, traveling ice "island" in the Arctic Ocean north of Point Barrow.

It will be home for 15 scientists and 12 Air Force officers as long as it holds together.

That may be a day, a week or years. If the ice lasts long enough most of the men will be rotated after about six months but the base will continue in operation.

If the ice breaks up, and they are as lucky as last year's residents, they will be hauled to safety by Air Force planes before the last chunk vanishes under their feet.

The station is called Alpha II. When established in mid - April this year, it was 270 miles north of Point Barrow. If it follows the course of Alpha I, which went to pieces last November after 18 months of existence, it may cruise to the North Pole.

No one can predict its exact course. That is one of the reasons for its existence. Scientists and military men want to know more about ocean currents, ocean depths and the nature of the polar ice cap.

One of their greatest interests is the "little picture" of the weather there. The "big picture" is fairly well plotted. Weather stations around the world, aided by high-altitude balloons and airplane reports, can tell with reasonable accuracy what is happening on a global basis.

At Alpha II they are learning more about what goes on within 50 feet of the ground—the weather that immediately affects most men and animals. They call it micro-meteorology.

This involves ordinary measurement, such as temperature and wind velocity, ut it also goes farther into specific causes and effects. Such as what happens to a man's nose when he peels back his parka hood to a temperature of, say, 30 below zero with the wind at 50 miles an hour.

One might say that cause and effect in such a case has been fairly common knowledge. He'd get it frozen. But that isn't enough for the scientist. He goes on to computations about such things as the "chill factor," a single figure that can tell more about how many layers of clothing to put on than mere temperature.

Again one might say, well, shucks, the Eskimos didn't know a chill factor from a red sled and they got along. But the white men who are moving north in ever-increasing numbers do not want to live like primitive Eskimos. They intend to be comfortable there, to make their living —in ways perhaps not yet known —and the scientists' belief is that the knowledge they are gaining on the ice cap may assist those aims.

The military side is not stressed but it is obvious. When the nuclear subs Nautilus and Skate go under the ice cap they do not grope blindly through undersea mountains. Their skippers will know more about these mountains because of soundings taken from Alpha II.

If war ever came, this sea probably would swarm with subs and there probably would be troops from both sides on top of the ice.

Those of the United States, because of research on the ice cap, would not be moving into the unknown.

Neither would the Russians. They have similar islands, and possibly more of them. In fact the floating research station may have been an authentic first for them.

Boy's Play With Matches Causes Fire; 9 Injured

NEW YORK (UPI) — A fire started by an 8 - year - old boy playing with matches roared through two tenements in the heart of Harlem Saturday, injuring nine persons.

Eight of the injured were firemen. They suffered smoke poisoning, burns and cuts in bringing the blaze under control.

Stephen Scott, 41, was asleep in his second floor bedroom when the fire broke out. He jumped from a window to the sidewalk and was taken to a hospital with possible fractures of both legs.

Fire Marshal Martin J. Scott said the fire began in a five-story tenement when the boy set his grandfather's bed afire on the first floor of the building. The flames spread quickly to the roof and jumped to an adjoining building.

Fireman Thomas De Chalus, 31, narrowly escaped death when a cornice of the building fell and struck the ladder on which he was standing with a fire hose. De Chalus lost his grip but somehow slid down the ladder, with legs straddling it, to the fire engine where three firemen caught him. He slid about 40 feet but was not injured seriously.

BETTER GRIP

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — The wetter the denture, the better its grip, says Prof. Robert G. Craig, of the Uniyersity of Michigan, who's been studying the factors that make false teeth stay put.

Ike Plays Golf, Bridge To Relax On Stag Outing

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — President Eisenhower put the emphasis on golf and bridge Saturday midway through a stag weekend of relaxation in the country.

His golf game, at least, seemed to be improving after a creaky start.

"The President shot a nice game," said one of his companions of the fairways, retired Brig. Gen. Arthur S. Nevins.

Nevins didn't say what Eisenhower's score was, but his own was a respectable 85. George E. Allen of Washington completed the golf threesome at the Gettysburg Country Club.

Like Eisenhower, Nevins and Allen are gentlemen farmers at Gettysburg.

The President and Allen, however, are making their headquarters for the weekend 25 miles away, at Camp David, Eisenhower's retreat in the Catoctin Mountains near Thurmont, Md.

To make up a table of bridge in the oak-panelled sunroom of the presidential lodge, retired Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther of Washington and William E. Robinson of New York were invited in. Gruenther heads the American Red Cross; Robinson is chairman of Coca-Cola Corp.

More Americans were wounded in World War II than in all other U. S. wars put together.

In 1685, only 2,000 persons lived in Belfast, which is now the capital of Ulster, or Northern Ireland, and has a population of 450,000.

There are more than 865 independent scientific laboratories in the U. S. working on research and development in consultation with industry.

Could you get by if you had to pay CASH?

How many people could enjoy the pleasure and convenience of an automobile, piano or refrigerator if they had to pay cash?

Fortunately for most of us, we don't have to pay cash for everything we buy. We can take advantage of the liberal, flexible system of personal credit which enables us to buy and enjoy the things we want, when we want them, and to pay for them later. Whether our income is large or small, we can enjoy the privilege of buying almost anything, anywhere, if our credit record is good.

And the only way to maintain a good credit record is to buy only what you know you can pay for—and pay for it on the date it is due.

You will find it mighty convenient to say
"Charge it, please."

Deep in each heart God puts the need
Of a love that is tender and strong,
The need of one who will understand
Each sorrow and share each song.
And to us all, He grants one gift
Sweeter than any other,
To answer this need for tenderness
He gives us each A MOTHER.

Annual Gripe Of Men Is Women Drivers

The trouble with women drivers is men, says blonde, breezy Pat Jones, of Wichita, Kan., professional stunt driver who teaches driving in her spare time.

"There's always some man either in the front seat or the back who gets the woman at the wheel rattled," says Pat. "If he's a husband, it's fatal. No woman can be expected to keep her mind on her driving when her husband is sitting beside her saying 'Watch that car ahead.' . . . 'Don't forget to signal.' . . . 'Wow. The Paragon Club was the setting last evening for a lovely Open House between the hours of 7 and 9 o'clock for close friends of Mr. and Mrs. L. Slade Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Joe M. Powell, who are moving in the near future to make their home in Orange, Texas.

Hosts greeting the guests in the lounge were Mr. and Mrs. A. Henry Biedenharn Jr., Mr. and Mrs. H. Kirt Touchstone Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Evans Ethridge, Mr. and Mrs. R. Lee Vanderpool Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. John Sherrouse.

Numerous arrangements of large bronze and yellow chrysanthemums and yellow gladioli artistically arranged in handsome copper and brass urns were used throughout the club and truly created a festive atmosphere with the soft lighting in the club.

Mrs. Brown's gold chiffon gown with its soft crushed girdle and flowing skirt was most becoming. Mrs. Powell wore a cinnamon silk organza beautifully draped at the neck and side front. Both honorees were presented green orchid corsages by the hostesses.

All hostesses were beautifully dressed. Mrs. Vanderpool's dress was a blue silk empire sheath, Mrs. Touchstone wore white silk shantung, Mrs. Biedenharn's dress had a white organdy bodice with very large puffed sleeves and a black linen skirt. White tucked crepe was worn by Mrs. Ethridge while Mrs. Sherrouse chose an orange chiffon.

Delectable party food and drinks were served throughout the evening with soft music in the background.

Beat a little instant minced onion into mashed potatoes to give zest to spring chicken dinners; or roll new potatoes in melted butter with some chopped parsley or mint and instant minced onion. Sprinkle instant minced onion and a little nutmeg on hot baked potatoes before inserting a generous pat of butter.

Annual Gripe Of Men Is Women Drivers

The trouble with women drivers is men, says blonde, breezy Pat Jones, of Wichita, Kan., professional stunt driver who teaches driving in her spare time.

"There's always some man either in the front seat or the back who gets the woman at the wheel rattled," says Pat. "If he's a husband, it's fatal. No woman can be expected to keep her mind on her driving when her husband is sitting beside her saying 'Watch that car ahead.' . . . 'Don't forget to signal.' . . . 'Wow. You just missed that one!" . . . or 'Baby, can't you stay on your own side of the road?' "

As Margaret Fishback said in this week's "Look":
On Mother's Day, I think it would
Be gorgeous if my family could
Grant me this one untrammeled wish—
Cook every meal, wash every dish.

This is, of course, an impossible dream. But we can always get a lift from receiving a clever invitation in the mail, and lately there have been some extra-specials. Consider those sent by the BOB CLAYS and the JOHN CLAYS for their party honoring the SLADE BROWNS and the JOE POWELLS. The front showed an outdoor tea cart with coffee service and said, "Come for Patio Brunch." Inside were the names of the honorees and the hours, ten-thirty until one Sunday afternoon.

The party was held at the John Clay home, where the hostesses and the guests of honor greeted guests in the living room. Jane Brown was wearing a daintily-printed muslin with insertions of white lace. Mavis Powell wore orange shoes with a beige linen dress embroidered in shades of brown and orange. Both had green orchid corsages. . . .The hostesses were both in white: Marilyn's a silk shirtwaist with blue and rose collar; Peggy's a tiered sheath with a blue bow marking the Empire waist.

The weather was perfect for gathering on the patio where appetizers were served. The table was centered with a three-tiered milk glass stand holding yellow tulips, daisies, green grapes. Bedded in bowls of ice were glasses of assorted fruit juices. Melon balls, fresh strawberries, and pineapple chunks were served from large trays.

Later the guests were invited into the dining room. Yellow tulips, white roses, and yellow candles in a tall branched silver candelabra centered the table. Ham, trout mornay, scrambled eggs, grits au gratin, asparagus almondine, hot biscuits and sweet rolls were included in the lavish buffet. After serving their plates guests were seated at small tables set up on the patio and in the garden. Hurricane lamps filled with yellow daisies centered the tables. About sixty friends attended the party.

Another affair honoring the Powells and Browns was the cocktail party hosted by the LEE VANDERPOOLS, the JOHNNY SHERROUSES, JR. the KIRT TOUCHSTONES, the HENRY BIEDENHARNS, JR., and the EVANS ETHRIDGES at the Paragon club last night. These invitations were ringed with words of farewell—"Aloha. . .Sayonara . . .Adios. . .Auf Wiedersehen" . . . around the names of the guests of honor, the time, and the place. . .More details on this party next week.

Invitations were received this week for the Cotillion club spring formal next Saturday night on the Frances roof. The card says "Caribbean Cruise Formal"—certainly an interesting theme. The decoration committee will have to go some to top the Cotillion's enchanting "April in Paris" ball of last year.

Rapidly becoming a pleasurable tradition locally is the past president's sherry party, preceding the May Homecoming luncheon of the Junior Charity League. This year's party was held in the home of MARY LEE MILAM, with ADRIENNE GASTON as cohostess. As they greeted their guests, Mary Lee was wearing white with aqua accessories; and Adrienne, black with a wide white collar.

Yellow roses in a pyramid arrangment were seen on the coffee table in the living room. Pink roses in a silver tureen centered the dining room table. Sherry was poured at one end of the table, and Welch rarebit served from a chafing dish at the other. Twenty past presidents attended.

The group proceeded to the League luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club, and were seated together at a table down the center of the room. . .Pink roses in silver bowls were used on each of the tables placed in the ballroom and on the porch. The ivy which extended to each end of the table was accented with cutouts of musical notes. The concert choir of Northeast State College provided the program of the day. One hundred and sixty life members and guests were present for the luncheon.

The FRED CULPEPPER, JR., home on Loop road was the scene of two parties last weekend. Saturday night son SKIP invited fourteen members of the high school set for a home dance. They danced to the hi-fi and ate pizza pies. . .On Sunday, it was the grown-ups' turn. They entertained with a supper party honoring MARGUERITE and ALBERT BUCKLEY, here from Roanoke, Virginia. Other guests included Albert's parents, the BILL BUCKLEYS, and the R. G. HARTS.

A double anniversary was marked with open house last night at the W. J. VEAZEY home on Forsythe. Houseguests of the Veazeys are Toni's sister and her family, the ROBERT TUCKERS of Baton Rouge, their daughter VIRGINIA and son TOMMY. Last night marked the Tuckers' eighteenth anniversary, and the Veazey's twenty-fifth. White and silver were used in the decorations. Centering the table was a crystal and silver epergne filled with white stock and carnations touched with silver. Virginia ham and barbecued turkey were the main courses of the buffet. About thirty friends called between the hours of eight and ten.

The C. W. WALLACES and the FOSTER WALLACES left on Thursday for a ten day trip West. They will go first to San Francisco for a business meeting, and spend a week there. En route home, they plan to stop in Las Vegas for several days.

Friday afternoon ANN HOLMES and FRANKIE CANNON were hostesses at a bridge party at Ann's home. Magnolias were the decoration on the dining room table. Five tables played, with PAT MADDEN winning high. BARBARA EASTERLING won the slam prize, and YVONNE ANDERSON, low. Chocolate angel pie was the dessert served with coffee to the ladies.

A real, authentic chuck wagon parked near the entrance and checked cloths on the tables set the theme for the supper dance at the Bayou DeSiard country club last Saturday night. Burning torches lit up the bayou bank where club members gathered in the early dusk for a "cook-out." Barbecued steak, baked beans, salad, sourdough biscuits, and chocolate cake were served. Among the out-of-towners present were ARCHIE BRIDGER and the RUSSELL CUMMINGS from Columbia the ABNER WIMBERLEYS and the JOE BARHAMS from Oak Ridge. The Mixmasters played for dancing in the ballroom from eight until twelve o'clock. Over a hundred club members attended.

Music week was marked with several observances around town this week, including music in the afternoons in EMY LOU BIEDENHARN's garden, and the Twin City Symphony Thursday night. Music lovers have yet another treat in store with ESTELLE SANDERS' "Spring Serenade" scheduled for tomorrow night at Neville. This year the serenade will benefit the West Monroe Kiwanis club civic projects.

The ladies' clubs of the Twin Cities are having their final meetings before the summer recess. On Monday the Review club held its annual open meeting in the Louis Locke room of the Ouachita Parish public library. ELISE MAPP, looking quite smart in dress AND hat of white with red polka dots, reviewed "Dr. Zhivago". . .La Vingt met Wednesday for lunch at the Bayou DeSiard country club. . MAMIE SCOTT, wearing a print shirtwaist with a natural straw, reviewed "Green Grows the Ivy". Guests were invited to both of these meetings, and we noted some very special hats. LIB HARGON wore a white cloche trimmed with white fringe . . . A black chiffon rose nestled in the dip of the brim of BOBBIE INABNET'S black picture hat. . . MARGARET WEBB was in all white, very effective. . .MARGARET M'LEMORE's green straw exactly matched the all-over embroidery of her natural linen. . . . LALLAGE FEAZEL wore a pyramid turban of loops of sand colored ribbon. ..MILDRED CONGER's natural straw was threaded with ribbon of the blue of her dress. . .Brilliant varicolored flowers completely covered CINDY WAKEFIELD'S natural straw, a pyramid which came low over her face. . .VELMA WILLEY's hat was a cartwheel of shiny white straw, trimmed with white poppies.

The CHARLES SLADES, JR., spent last weekend in Fort Worth, where they saw their niece, ANN HITE, in the TCU Drama department production of "The Sleeping Prince." This is the play which was made into a movie under the name of "The Prince and the Showgirl," and Ann played the Marilyn Monroe part . . . The Slades brought Aureline's mother, MRS. E. S. VAWTER, home with them. She had been visiting in College Station.

Our visitors from Trinidad, the BILL JACKSONS, were honored at a dinner party Sunday night in the home of the HARRY LEMERTS. The table was centered with pink roses in a silver bowl, flanked by pink candles in silver candlesticks. Rose-wreathed placecards marked places for fourteen guests. First course was a fruit plate of fresh pineapple and strawberries, served on grape leaves. Broiled chicken was accompanied by baked potatoes, asparagus, and parsley bread. Dessert was a sherry bisque served with sand tarts.

MARTIN M'HENRY was five years old on Friday, and celebrated with a party in Forsythe park. A circus theme was carried out in the decorations and the cake, and a pony cart ride was the entertainment. Horns were the favors for the forty-five children who attended.

A skating party honored SADYE HADDAD on her eighth birthday Tuesday. The group played two rounds of Stop-the-Music, with MONICA ALBRITTON and ANDY ADAMS winning the prizes. . . Miniature flashlights were the favors, for the boys and small decks of cards for the girls. Doughnuts and soft drinks were served to the thirty-five children.

For Mother's Day, these words on motherhood from "The White Cliffs":

To me a son was born.
The lonely hard forlorn
Travail was, as the Bible tells, forgot.
How old, how commonplace
To look upon the face
Of your first-born, and glory in your lot.
To look upon his face,
And understand your place
Among the unknown dead in church yards lying
To see the reason why
You lived and why you die—
Even to find a certain grace in dying.
To know the reason why
Buds blow and blossoms die
Why beauty fades, and genius is undone,
And how unjustified
Is any human pride
In all creation—save in this common one.

Motherhood is common, but not so
It seemed to me. Motherless, I did not know—
I was all unprepared to feel this glow,
Holy as a Madonna's, and as crude
As any animal's beatitude—
Crude as my own black cat's, who used to bring
Her newest litter to me every spring,
And say, with green eyes shining in the sun:
"Behold this miracle that I have done."

Fleming Home Setting For Bridal Party

Miss Frankie Sturdivant, bride-elect of Lester Singleton, was honored recently with a party given by Mrs. J. O. Fleming at her home on Highway 80.

The guests were greeted by Mrs. Fleming who wore a beige spring dress. After registering at the bride's book, the guests were seated in the living room where they enjoyed a delightful game.

Miss Sturdivant, wearing a lovely plaid spring cotton, accentuated by a corsage of white carnations touched with miniature wedding bells, opened her many gifts.

The bride's table, overlaid with a Chinese silk cloth, contained a centerpiece of blue and yellow native iris. The guests were served petite de fours and iced punch. Serving at the punch bowl was Mrs. Gerald Hattaway.

Guests who enjoyed the party were Mrs. Marlan Hattaway, Miss Clay DeMarchi, Mrs. V. D. Carver, Miss Gale Carver, Mrs. W. P. Singleton, Sr., Mrs. W. P. Singleton, Jr., Mrs. Beulah Fields, Mrs. F. L. Sturdivant, Mrs. Marcus Robinson, Miss Margaret Robinson, Miss Janice Becton and Mrs. Gerald Hattaway.

June Wedding Planned In St. Francisville

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Rowland of Angola formerly of West Monroe, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Jo Anna, to Terry Valentine Osterberger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Valentine Osterberger of Oakley Plantation, St. Francisville.

Miss Rowland attended St. Paschal's Catholic School in West Monroe and is a graduate of St. Francisville High School. He is a graduate of St. Francisville High School, and is now attending Louisiana State University.

She is the granddaughter of Arista Robin and the late Mrs. Robin of Arnaudville.

Mr. Osterberger is descended from Mr. and Mr. Grundy Blevins of Pauline Plantation, West Feliciana Parish and Mrs. Albert V. Osterberger and the late Mr. Osterberger of Baton Rouge.

The wedding will take place June 13th in Mount Carmel Catholic Church in St. Francisville at the 10:00 a.m. nuptial mass. Reception will follow in the church parlor.

For a quick and colorful fruit sauce for roast lamb, try this: Heat ½ cup water, ¼ cup sugar, ½ cup white wine vinegar and ¼ teaspoon salt to boiling; pour over 1 tablespoon dried mint leaves and let stand 30 minutes. Drain a No. 2-½ can fruit cocktail and strain minted syrup over it. Serve warm or cold.

Stuff pitted ripe olives with a piece of anchovy and two or three capers (or use a bit of pickle, if you prefer), wrap with a piece of bacon, fasten with a wooden pick, and bake in a hot oven until bacon is crisp and browned. Remove picks, and serve hot as a delicious appetizer.

With a handy can opener and a pound of ground beef you can put together a tamale casserole in a very few minutes. Brown the beef, add a can of tomatoes, one of whole kernel corn, a tablespoon or two of instant minced onion, a can of ripe olives(whole or cut into large wedges) and simmer briefly. Season to taste with salt, pepper and chili powder, and thicken with a little corn meal. Turn into a baking dish and top generously with grated American cheese. This should bake 30 to 45 minutes in a moderate oven, which gives you plenty of time to set the table, make a crisp green salad and toast rolls. Easy, economical and mighty good to eat!

Use California Rose wine to baste chicken, turkey, veal or lamb while roasting. Stir some into spaghetti or rice casseroles; add a little to cheese sauce. This versatile wine makes a light, refreshing beverage and goes well with almost any menu. Serve it chilled.

This year's party was held in the home of MARY LEE MILAM, with ADRIENNE GASTON as cohostess. As they greeted their guests, Mary Lee was wearing white with aqua accessories; and Adrienne, black with a wide white collar.

Yellow roses in a pyramid arrangment were seen on the coffee table in the living room. Pink roses in a silver tureen centered the dining room table. Sherry was poured at one end of the table, and Welch rarebit served from a chafing dish at the other. Twenty past presidents attended.

The group proceeded to the League luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club, and were seated together at a table down the center of the room. . .Pink roses in silver bowls were used on each of the tables placed in the ballroom and on the porch. The ivy which extended to each end of the table was accented with cutouts of musical notes. The concert choir of Northeast State College provided the program of the day. One hundred and sixty life members and guests were present for the luncheon.

The FRED CULPEPPER, JR., home on Loop road was the scene of two parties last weekend. Saturday night son SKIP invited fourteen members of the high school set for a home dance. They danced to the hi-fi and ate pizza pies. . .On Sunday, it was the grown-ups' turn. They entertained with a supper party honoring MARGUERITE and ALBERT BUCKLEY, here from Roanoke, Virginia. Other guests included Albert's parents, the BILL BUCKLEYS, and the R. G. HARTS.

A double anniversary was marked with open house last night at the W. J. VEAZEY home on Forsythe. Houseguests of the Veazeys are Toni's sister and her family, the ROBERT TUCKERS of Baton Rouge, their daughter VIRGINIA and son TOMMY. Last night marked the Tuckers' eighteenth anniversary, and the Veazey's twenty-fifth. White and silver were used in the decorations. Centering the table was a crystal and silver epergne filled with white stock and carnations touched with silver. Virginia ham and barbecued turkey were the main courses of the buffet. About thirty friends called between the hours of eight and ten.

The C. W. WALLACES and the FOSTER WALLACES left on Thursday for a ten day trip West. They will go first to San Francisco for a business meeting, and spend a week there. En route home, they plan to stop in Las Vegas for several days.

Friday afternoon ANN HOLMES and FRANKIE CANNON were hostesses at a bridge party at Ann's home. Magnolias were the decoration on the dining room table. Five tables played, with PAT MADDEN winning high. BARBARA EASTERLING won the slam prize, and YVONNE ANDERSON, low. Chocolate angel pie was the dessert served with coffee to the ladies.

A real, authentic chuck wagon parked near the entrance and checked cloths on the tables set the theme for the supper dance at the Bayou DeSiard country club last Saturday night. Burning torches lit up the bayou bank where club members gathered in the early dusk for a "cook-out." Barbecued steak, baked beans, salad, sourdough biscuits, and chocolate cake were served. Among the out-of-towners present were ARCHIE BRIDGER and the RUSSELL CUMMINGS from Columbia the ABNER WIMBERLEYS and the JOE BARHAMS from Oak Ridge. The Mixmasters played for dancing in the ballroom from eight until twelve o'clock. Over a hundred club members attended.

Music week was marked with several observances around town this week, including music in the afternoons in EMY LOU BIEDENHARN's garden, and the Twin City Symphony Thursday night. Music lovers have yet another treat in store with ESTELLE SANDERS' "Spring Serenade" scheduled for tomorrow night at Neville. This year the serenade will benefit the West Monroe Kiwanis club civic projects.

The ladies' clubs of the Twin Cities are having their final meetings before the summer recess. On Monday the Review club held its annual open meeting in the Louis Locke room of the Ouachita Parish public library. ELISE MAPP, looking quite smart in dress AND hat of white with red polka dots, reviewed "Dr. Zhivago".. . .La Vingt met Wednesday for lunch at the Bayou DeSiard country club. MAMIE SCOTT, wearing a print shirtwaist with a natural straw, reviewed "Green Grows the Ivy". Guests were invited to both of these meetings, and we noted some very special hats. LIB HARGON wore a white cloche trimmed with white fringe . . . A black chiffon rose nestled in the dip of the brim of BOBBIE INABNET'S black picture hat. . . MARGARET WEBB was in all white, very effective. . .MARGARET M'LEMORE's green straw exactly matched the all-over embroidery of her natural linen. . . . LALLAGE FEAZEL wore a pyramid turban of loops of sand colored ribbon. ..MILDRED CONGER's natural straw was threaded with ribbon of the blue of her dress. . .Brilliant varicolored flowers completely covered CINDY WAKEFIELD'S natural straw, a pyramid which came low over her face. . .VELMA WILLEY's hat was a cartwheel of shiny white straw, trimmed with white poppies.

The CHARLES SLADES, JR., spent last weekend in Fort Worth, where they saw their niece, ANN HITE, in the TCU Drama department production of "The Sleeping Prince." This is the play which was made into a movie under the name of "The Prince and the Showgirl," and Ann played the Marilyn Monroe part . . . The Slades brought Aureline's mother, MRS. E. S. VAWTER, home with them. She had been visiting in College Station.

Our visitors from Trinidad, the BILL JACKSONS, were honored at a dinner party Sunday night in the home of the HARRY LEMERTS. The table was centered with pink roses in a silver bowl, flanked by pink candles in silver candlesticks. Rose-wreathed placecards marked places for fourteen guests. First course was a fruit plate of fresh pineapple and strawberries, served on grape leaves. Broiled chicken was accompanied by baked potatoes, asparagus, and parsley bread. Dessert was a sherry bisque served with sand tarts.

MARTIN M'HENRY was five years old on Friday, and celebrated with a party in Forsythe park. A circus theme was carried out in the decorations and the cake, and a pony cart ride was the entertainment. Horns were the favors for the forty-five children who attended.

A skating party honored SADYE HADDAD on her eighth birthday Tuesday. The group played two rounds of Stop-the-Music, with MONICA ALBRITTON and ANDY ADAMS winning the prizes. . . Miniature flashlights were the favors, for the boys and small decks of cards for the girls. Doughnuts and soft drinks were served to the thirty-five children.

For Mother's Day, these words on motherhood from "The White Cliffs":

To me a son was born,
The lonely hard forlorn
Travail was, as the Bible tells, forgot.
How old, how commonplace
To look upon the face
Of your first-born, and glory in your lot.
To look upon his face,
And understand your place
Among the unknown dead in church yards lying
To see the reason why
You lived and why you die—
Even to find a certain grace in dying.
To know the reason why
Buds blow and blossoms die
Why beauty fades, and genius is undone,
And how unjustified
Is any human pride
In all creation—save in this common one.

Motherhood is common, but not so
It seemed to me. Motherless, I did not know—
I was all unprepared to feel this glow,
Holy as a Madonna's, and as crude
As any animal's beatitude—
Crude as my own black cat's, who used to bring
Her newest litter to me every spring,
And say, with green eyes shining in the sun:
"Behold this miracle that I have done."

MISS JO ANNA ROWLAND

Fleming Home Setting For Bridal Party

Miss Frankie Sturdivant, bride-elect of Lester Singleton, was honored recently with a party given by Mrs. J. O. Fleming at her home on Highway 80.

The guests were greeted by Mrs. Fleming who wore a beige spring dress. After registering at the bride's book, the guests were seated in the living room where they enjoyed a delightful game.

Miss Sturdivant, wearing a lovely plaid spring cotton, accentuated by a corsage of white carnations touched with miniature wedding bells, opened her many gifts.

The bride's table, overlaid with a Chinese silk cloth, contained a centerpiece of blue and yellow native iris. The guests were served petite de fours and iced punch. Serving at the punch bowl was Mrs. Gerald Hattaway.

Guests who enjoyed the party were Mrs. Marlan Hattaway, Miss Clay DeMarchi, Mrs. V. D. Carver, Miss Gale Carver, Mrs. W. P. Singleton, Sr., Mrs. W. P. Singleton, Jr., Mrs. Beulah Fields, Mrs. F. L. Sturdivant, Mrs. Marcus Robinson, Miss Margaret Robinson, Miss Janice Becton and Mrs. Gerald Hattaway.

June Wedding Planned In St. Francisville

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Rowland of Angola formerly of West Monroe, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Jo Anna, to Terry Valentine Osterberger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Valentine Osterberger of Oakley Plantation, St. Francisville.

Miss Rowland attended St. Paschal's Catholic School in West Monroe and is a graduate of St. Francisville High School. He is a graduate of St. Francisville High School, and is now attending Louisiana State University.

She is the granddaughter of Arista Robin and the late Mrs. Robin of Arnaudville.

Mr. Osterberger is descended from Mr. and Mr. Grundy Blevins of Pauline Plantation, West Feliciana Parish and Mrs. Albert V. Osterberger and the late Mr. Osterberger of Baton Rouge.

The wedding will take place June 13th in Mount Carmel Catholic Church in St. Francisville at the 10:00 a.m. nuptial mass. Reception will follow in the church parlor.

For a quick and colorful fruit sauce for roast lamb, try this: Heat ½ cup water, ¼ cup sugar, ½ cup white wine vinegar and ¼ teaspoon salt to boiling; pour over 1 tablespoon dried mint leaves and let stand 30 minutes. Drain a No. 2-½ can fruit cocktail and strain minted syrup over it. Serve warm or cold.

Stuff pitted ripe olives with a piece of anchovy and two or three capers (or use a bit of pickle, if you prefer), wrap with a piece of bacon, fasten with a wooden pick, and bake in a hot oven until bacon is crisp and browned. Remove picks, and serve hot as a delicious appetizer.

With a handy can opener and a pound of ground beef you can put together a tamale casserole in a very few minutes. Brown the beef, add a can of tomatoes, one of whole kernel corn, a tablespoon or two of instant minced onion, a can of ripe olives (whole or cut into large wedges) and simmer briefly. Season to taste with salt, pepper and chili powder, and thicken with a little corn meal. Turn into a baking dish and top generously with grated American cheese. This should bake 30 to 45 minutes in a moderate oven, which gives you plenty of time to set the table, make a crisp green salad and toast rolls. Easy, economical and mighty good to eat!

Use California Rose wine to baste chicken, turkey, veal or lamb while roasting. Stir some into spaghetti or rice casseroles; add a little to cheese sauce. This versatile wine makes a light, refreshing beverage and goes well with almost any menu. Serve it chilled.

One Chemistry Lesson Pays Off In Looks

There's one lesson in freshman chemistry that pays off in good looks. That's the one which clears a teen-ager's troubled skin, gives her a three - step treatment for correcting the pH balance (potential of hydrogen, if you're not a chemistry major) which permits creams and lotions to get through a chemical barrier.

What happens is that when you put your skin's acidity and alkalinity into proper balance (you can learn more about this in the chemistry lab!), a corrective lotion can get through to do its work.

The treatment that will help Freshman Susy to put her best face forward in classrooms, at Saturday night gym dances and at Prexy's Sunday afternoon teas consists of three simple skin-care steps:

One is the use of a cleanser. But with it you cleanse with a gentle foam to rid skin of oiliness and blackheads with no need of brutal scrubbing.

The second is the use of a secret - key lotion that unlocks the chemical barrier, restores the skin's proper balance, and makes it ready for the important third member of the trio.

The third, used consecutively, is a clear-up lotion, nicely tinted to match your skin color. It does its clear-up job so effectively that many dermatologists swear by it; tell their teen - age patients to wear it under their make-up where it heals while the blemish is being safely concealed. Containing sulphur, calomine, zinc oxide, among other things, you don't need to be a chemistry major to recognize the blessed qualities of this skin lotion as a healing agent.

MRS. JAMES ROBERT CHAPMAN

For a delicious fruit salda, slice a banana, pare and section an orange, a d d a can of drained chilled fruit cocktil, and dress with mayonnaise blended with mayonnaise blended with whipped cream. Serve with rich baking powder biscuits, and glasses of cold milk for a delicious lunch.

When you want to see a city easily, think about using buses and trolley cars. any cities — London, for example — have double - decker buses with upper decks for sightseeing.

Miss Ormond, J. R. Chapman Exchange Vows

Of interest in Ruston, on May 8, Miss Jessie Ormond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Henry Ormond of Ruston, and James Robert Chapman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Chapman of West Monroe, were married in the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. J. E. Ormond, in Ruston.

Miss Betty Henderson served as maid - of - honor and the groom's father served as his best man.

The bride was dressed in a blue lace covered suit and she carried a white prayer book with a single white orchid attached.

The mothers of the couple were dressed in blue and each wore a corsage of pink roses.

A short honeymoon will be spent on the Gulf Coast before they depart for Okinawa.

Among the out of town guests was Miss Truly Ann Chapman, sister of the groom.

The bride is a graduate of Ruston High School and is a student at La. Tech where she is a member of Sigma Kappa sorority.

The groom is a graduate of West Monroe High School and is a member of Pi Kappa fraternity. He is stationed in Okinawa in the army for the next two years.

Meat Gains Flavor Over Outdoor Fire

New worlds of delicious foods are opening every day for cooks who prepare their menus on an outdoor grill. Although they have nothing against the traditional steak fry, they have found delicious flavor is available at bargain rates when they properly prepare dozens of other dishes.

One of the best of these is pot roast. Get an economy cut such as a blade bone. It should be browned nicely, then placed on a large square of foil and covered with barbecue sauce and chopped onions. Seal the foil package and cook on the grill top. It's excellent with foil - grilled green beans and roasting ears of sweet corn.

Another economy dish is mock filet of beef, which is an eye-of-round steak mounted on the rotisseries spit and then daubed with barbecue sauce while it cooks. Because this is a "less tender" cut of beef, it should be sprinkled with meat tenderizer and let stand about half an hour before cooking.

An outdoor fish bake also is popular. One of the flavoring tricks here is to place paper-thin lemon slices on the bottom of a shallow baking dish and put salmon, halibut, or haddock filets on top. The fish is done when it flakes easily with tines of a fork.

Nearly any type of dish can be prepared over a charcoal fire in much the same manner as on the kitchen stove.

New Fabrics Need Special Laundry Care

New fabrics and new detergents sometimes have the housewife baffled, despite all the laundering directions on labels and packages.

Here are some general tips on modern laundering methods:

1. The first step in good laundering is good sorting. Wash white garments and linens separately, pastels in another machine load, dark clothes in a third.

2. Rub heavily soiled areas with extra detergent before putting in the machine.

3. When using a chlorine bleach in bead form, always add the bleach with a good heavy-duty detergent at the beginning of the wash cycle, before putting in the garments to be washed.

4. New wash-and-wear garments, that go through washer and dryer and come out needing no ironing, need particular attention to dryer temperatures. Many 1959 washer - dryers are equipped with dials which may be adjusted for different fabrics.

5. To prevent yellowing of white nylon lingerie, use safe bleach along with the detergent from the first laundering.

6. Chlorine bleaches are not recommended for dark clothes or for fabrics with resin - finishes.

7. When a garment is labeled "drip - dry," it means it should be removed from the washing machine before the spinning or drying cycle starts, and hung on a hanger dripping wet, to drip-dry.

Boat Party Given Honoring Husbands

The Women's Auxiliary to the Fifth District Dental Association, recently had a party honoring their husbands. The event is an annual affair, with the current party being a buffet supper and cocktail party aboard a boat.

The boat left the dock in the late afternoon so the guests could see and enjoy the scenic beauty up the Ouachita River.

A delicious meal was served, following the social hour.

Those enjoying the boat ride were Dr. and Mrs. Robert D. Wood, Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Mayo, Dr. and Mrs. S. A. Collins, Dr. and Mrs. N. G. Gaston, Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Smith, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Davis, Dr. and Mrs. Seymour Solomon, Dr. and Mrs. Neil D. Buie, Dr. and Mrs. Hunter D. Mullis, Dr. and Mrs. Fred Crenshaw, Dr. and Mrs. D. Rabun Smith, Dr. and Mrs. John R. Cole, Dr. and Mrs. Walter M. Krone, Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Price, Dr. and Mrs. Fred C. Ammon, Dr. and Mrs. Max Funderburk, Dr. C. P. Jarrell, Dr. and Mrs. Felton Green, from Ruston, and Dr. and Mrs. D. M. Quinn, Jr., from Bastrop.

There's no combination more popular than peaches and cream. For a delicious and easy dessert, sprinkle drained canned cling peach halves lightly with sugar and cinnamon and heat under the broiler until they're warm and fragrant. Serve at once with thick cream. Or, for a company meal, make a jelly roll from your favorite recipe. Trim off crusts and roll immediately after removing from oven. When the cake is cool, fill with sweetened whipped cream and drained coarsely chopped canned cling peach slices. Glaze the top of the roll with strained apricot jam thinned with a tablespoon or two of peach syrup and, if desired, a little rum extract. Chill thoroughly and slice. Makes a handsome and truly delicious dessert!

Add minced chives and parsley to butter and use for fish fillets you are skillet cooking or baking.

Junior Charity League Homecoming Luncheon

Highlight of the Junior Charity League's homecoming luncheon at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club was the performance by the Northeast State College Choir. Mrs. Charles E. Brown, general chairman for the luncheon, introduced Dr. David B. Bingham who directed the choir as they sang a group of Brahms' folksongs, selections from the "King and I," and a humorous version of Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater.

As a background for the affair Mrs. Don Giffen and her decorating committee had filled the room with springtime by their use of pink roses mixed with spring cut flowers arranged in silver revere bowls. On either side of the rose arrangements and running the length of the tables were garlands of ivy entwined with pink music notes and small bunches of pink roses.

Mrs. Miles H. Sager, Jr., president of the league, welcomed a large number of inactive and life members. Many of the past presidents of the organization were introduced by Mrs. Sager. They were Mrs. Jamar Adcock, Mrs. M. S. Dixon, Jr., Mrs. J. L. Adams, Mrs. W. C. Cookston, Mrs. John Duchkar, Mrs. N. G. Gaston, Mrs. D. T. Milam, Mrs. Paul Neal, Mrs. Jack Taylor, Miss Hazel Mitchell, Mrs. Milling Bernstein, Mrs. Henry Hinkle, Mrs. Morgan Simonton, Mrs. T. Hunter Thatcher, Mrs. Ray Rhymes, Mrs. Corbin Turpin, and Mrs. R. L. Davis, Sr.

Enjoying the occasion with the past and present members of the league were many welcomed guests including Mrs. V. D. Walter, Mrs. John Hunt III, Mrs. W. A. Walker, Mrs. Fred Millsaps, Mrs. D. C. Phillips, Mrs. Leroy Anspauch, Mrs. M. S. Dixon, Sr., Mrs. James A. Noe, Mrs. Thomas Holmes, Mrs. J. S. # Mimi Hines Breaks All Marriage Rules

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

Mimi Hines is one of the world's most happily married women, and nobody can understand why.

As half of the suddenly famous comedy team of Phil Ford and Mimi Hines, Mimi has broken all the rules for a happy marriage. She doesn't darn her husband's socks, or cook big juicy steaks for his dinner. She doesn't stay demurely in the background when he tells a funny story.

Since her marriage seven years ago, Phil and Mimi have never had a home, or even an apartment. Most of the time they live on trains and planes, with an occasional hotel suite.

"Once we did buy a 37-foot trailer, all painted silver and big as a locomotive," say Mimi. "I decided I would be domestic and put up frilly curtains and learn to cook."

"Mimi's idea of learning to cook was to stick to one thing until she mastered it," says Phil, "so we had roast duck with orange sauce every night for a week. Then the trailer burned up when a brake caught fire going down a mountain road and we gave it all up."

Mimi and Phil have been on stage almost since birth. Mimi made her debut at the age of 2 and Phil was not much older.

They met in Anchorage, Alaska, where each was doing a separate night club act. Mimi's club went broke and Phil's partner quit, so they formed a team. They've been playing hotels and clubs ever since, but just hit the bigtime after a guest appearance on the Jack Paar television show which had the audience rolling in the aisles. There followed an engagement at New York's Copacabana and the Waldorf Astoria.

This summer they're booked to appear in Paris and at the Moscow Exhibit. What do they plan to dish out for the Soviets?

"Oh, just our usual act," says Phil. "Mimi's brand of humor is sort of universal. When she falls on her face, you can laugh even in Japanese."

Mimi insists she really has motherly and domestic yearnings, if she just had a chance to prove it. In the last few years she has raised 30 poodle pups, offsprings of their two French poodles, Monte and Lili.

"We have given the pups to friends all over America. There's even one in China," says Mimi.

"So whenever we travel we have to go and visit them all like grandchildren."

Boat Party Given Honoring Husbands

The Women's Auxiliary to the Fifth District Dental Association, recently had a party honoring their husbands. The event is an annual affair, with the current party being a buffet supper and cocktail party aboard a boat.

The boat left the dock in the late afternoon so the guests could see and enjoy the scenic beauty up the Ouachita River.

A delicious meal was served, following the social hour.

Those enjoying the boat ride were Dr. and Mrs. Robert D. Wood, Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Mayo, Dr. and Mrs. S. A. Collins, Dr. and Mrs. N. G. Gaston, Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Smith, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Davis, Dr. and Mrs. Seymour Solomon, Dr. and Mrs. Neil D. Buie, Dr. and Mrs. Hunter D. Mullis, Dr. and Mrs. Fred Crenshaw, Dr. and Mrs. D. Rabun Smith, Dr. and Mrs. John R. Cole, Dr. and Mrs. Walter M. Krone, Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Price, Dr. and Mrs. Fred C. Ammon, Dr. and Mrs. Max Funderburk, Dr. C. P. Jarrell, Dr. and Mrs. Felton Green, from Ruston, and Dr. and Mrs. D. M. Quinn, Jr., from Bastrop.

There's no combination more popular than peaches and cream. For a delicious and easy dessert, sprinkle drained canned cling peach halves lightly with sugar and cinnamon and heat under the broiler until they're warm and fragrant. Serve at once with thick cream. Or, for a company meal, make a jelly roll from your favorite recipe. Trim off crusts and roll immediately after removing from oven. When the cake is cool, fill with sweetened whipped cream and drained coarsely chopped canned cling peach slices. Glaze the top of the roll with strained apricot jam thinned with a tablespoon or two of peach syrup and, if desired, a little rum extract. Chill thoroughly and slice. Makes a handsome and truly delicious dessert!

Add minced chives and parsley to butter and use for fish fillets you are skillet cooking or baking.

YOUR PROBLEMS

It Depends Fellows Point Of View

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: We are two boys 9 and 10 years old. Our names are Jimmy and Ronnie. We are brothers. Our father says you are about his age which is quite old. He is 41. He said you would probably know the answer to this problem because you were a young girl in the olden days when he was a young boy.

Was there ever a song by the name of "Does the Spearmint lose it's flavor on the bedpost over night?" Dad says there was. We can't believe that people were ever so crazy as to let a song like that get popular. Please answer in the paper. Thank you. — Jimmy And Ronnie

Dear Jimmy and Ronnie: Yup — your Dad is right. I, too am a 41-year-old relic. And he's correct about the spearmint song, too.

But why do you think it's so crazy? After "Oooh Eee O0oh Ahhh Ahhh Walla Walla Bing Bang — Ting Tang," I think the spearmint number is downright intelligent. And compared with "Alvin" and the other chipmunk stuff, "Spearmint" is a musical classic.

---

Dear Ann: I'm 25 years old and have been married 4 months. I work for a fine firm as a bookkeeper and accountant during the day. At night I attend school. I want to be a C.P.A.

My wife is a secretary and she makes twice as much money as I do. She's wonderful and never makes comparisons. We pool our checks and nothing is said.

My boss gives me lavish compliments, says I'm the brightest guy he's seen in ages and he assures me I'll go far." In the meantime, after deductions, my take home pay is $44 a week. I've hinted I can use more money but he tells me I'm getting a million dollars worth of experience. My wife says not to push him or I may be out of work entirely. Your opinion, please.— Frank

Talk to some fellows in your night school class who are probably doing similar work during the day, and learn what they are making. Then peg your request at a reasonable figure. It's important to keep working toward that C.P.A., but don't be a chump in the meantime. The boss's compliments are ginger peachy, but they won't fit into your wallet.

Dear Ann: Our daughter is almost 16. She's been going steady for a year with a boy who has lots of home problems. I want her to break up with him because she's a nervous wreck as a result of his troubles. My husband has sided with her and I'm fighting this battle alone. Please help me.

This boy's father is an alcoholic. He calls up to tell her his father just passed out and looks like he may be dead, or his mother got mad at him and took his car away for a month, or nobody is at home and will she come over and fix him something to eat.

When I tell her this boy is no good for her she says if I don't stop nagging she'll leave home. I don't know where to turn next. Can you help me? — Mrs. L.S.

Your daughter is serving as a refuge for this unfortunate boy. This is no role for a 15-year-old girl. Your husband's "siding with her" doesn't help matters either.

Don't try to break up the relationship. Try, instead to let her know you understand how tough life is for him. Be friendly and pleasant. Win her confidence. Then gradually encourage her to consider going out with others so that she'll have something on which to base a comparison. You'll catch more flies with honey than with vinegar, Mother.

New Spray-On Starch Comes On Market

The homemaker whose family likes parts, but not all, of their washable garments starched for crisp smoothness now can do away with mixing and dunking if she gets a new spray-on starch in a push-button container.

Newest of more than hundred different types of aerosol products that have captured the ease-seeking fancy of consumers in recent years, the aerosol starch is now being test-marketed in New England states and should be generally available within the next few months. It can be used on either damp or dry clothes, according to its manufacturer, and works best with a steam iron.

While admittedly not as economical as the usual dip-in liquid starch method when you want all-over starching, the spray product offers convenience and speed in special applications. Its manufacturer claims it's ideal, for example, in treating men's shirts where hubby likes only the collar, cuffs, and a bit of the front of the shirt starched. And in little girls' dresses, for instance, the spray application permits a neat, starched collar on the outisde with none of the bothersome chafin or discomfort that may occur with over-all starching that makes the inside of the collar just as stiff.

The amount and evenness of starch deposit can be controlled easily with the spray container. Dispensing pressure is provided by a propellent — the same type of safe chemical that is used as a cold - making agent in many home refrigerators and air conditioners. On wet or damp garments, the spray starch is absorbed by capillary action to give an all-through starching just like that obtained in the older dip treatmnet. Sprayed on dry garments, it combines the usual sprinkling and starching operations and produces a surface starching that, when ironed with a steam iron, imparts a light glaze similar to that of new, unwashed fabric.

An eight - ounce container of the aerosol starch, its manufacturer says, is sufficient to handle several washes of an average family of four, when the spot starching technique is used.

Stuffed hard cooked eggs, sliced cold meats and cheese, potato salad and marinated blue lake green beans make a satisfying cold supper for a warm spring evening. Iced tea and a hot baked dessert would finish off the meal nicely. To prepare the beans, drain a can of tender blue lakes, drizzle with a tart French dressing and chill thoroughly. At serving time, arrange on crisp shredded lettuce, and garnish with wedges of tomato or a sprinkling of thin, red-rimmed radish slices.

Questions And Answers

By BETTY PEPIS

Q. — My house is an old one. The living room is 18 feet square, has 12 foot ceilings and connects with a hall (by French doors) which measures 18 by 12 feet. Walls of both rooms are light gray with woodwork and ceilings in white. The rug is old rose, a Victorian loveseat is toast and one chair is aqua and black.

I am collecting aquamarine glass. I have a marble-topped mahogany coffee table, two end tables and secretary in mahogany. Lamp bases are china or milk glass. What colors should I use on a Duncan Phyfe sofa and two Victorian chairs? Also how shall I treat two windows 72 by 30 inches, 3 feet apart? Elsewhere in the room I have criss cross curtains on three windows that are together but on the two separated windows these look long and skinny.

A. — Cover the chairs with peacock blue (darker than the aqua glass). Try a gray and rose print on the sofa. Take the same print and have long window shades custom made for the two awkwardly placed windows.

Q. — I am concerned about the carpeting for my living room. It is an L-shaped living-dining area. In the dining area and entrance foyer I have white vinyl tile with golden brown flecks, beige walls and beige draperies throughout. There is a toast couch and persimmon chair and I am getting walnut tables. I had thought of dark brown carpeting but wonder if the walnut will show up well against this background. Would a tweed pattern be out of place with the flecked tile next to it?

A. — I think any kind of patterned carpeting would not be desirable with the flecked vinyl although a texture all in one color would not be objectionable. Had you thought of a rust carpeting somewhat darker than the persimmon chair? This could be most effective with your neutral furnishings.

4-Year-Old 'About To Drive Me Out Of My Mind

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

When a child of four years is driving his mother crazy, the mismanagement must have been present for a very long time and correction hardly can be a matter of reading a book or an answer in a newspaper.

Mrs. B.K. ho calls herself, "desperate," writes, "Dear Mrs. Eldred: I have been going to write you for a long time but shied away from it. I have a 4-year-old who is about to drive me out of my mind. There is nothing he does that is right. He says bad words. He will not sleep in his own bed but he and his father sleep in a double bed.

"When he goes to bed he insists on his father putting on his pajamas, too. When he is corrected he goes into a tantrum and he acts the same way after he is reprimanded. Many times I am prompted to pull him up by his hair, and I believe this child will drive me insane."

ANSWER

None of this has come about today or yesterday. In trying to get him to sleep you have deliberately allowed the father to go to bed with him. Don't blame the child if he enjoys this special companionship.

All 4-year-olds, or those of comparable ages, discover the delights of saying words they hear others say. If these happen to be "bad" words, their delight is even greater when saying them causes a great to-do.

Just keep your own tongue under control and when he uses profanity, tell him this is NOT the way to talk and that if he wants to use such words to go upstairs, or in another room to say them to himself.

Children outgrow this stage temporarily it enhances their idea of themselves as big boys.

TALK GENTLY

Talk to him gently. Treat him lovingly. Enlist his aid in doing what you tell him to, because it right, because you love him and expect him to do what is right.

As parents, put an end to such nonsense as father putting on pajamas and having to sleep with him. His place is in his bed, yours in yours. If you find that gentler treatment and an improved disposition on your part doesn't help the whole situation, then find a Child Guidance Clinic or a Family Social Service Agency which can study the family and children and put you on the right track.

When two individuals get on each other's nerves this way — both are probably to blame and some neutral outsider needs to guide them into new paths of conduct.

YOUR PROBLEMS

It Depends Fellows Point Of View

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: We are two boys 9 and 10 years old. Our names are Jimmy and Ronnie. We are brothers. Our father says you are about his age which is quite old. He is 41. He said you would probably know the answer to this problem because you were a young girl in the olden days when he was a young boy.

Was there ever a song by the name of "Does the Spearmint lose it's flavor on the bedpost over night?" Dad says there was. We can't believe that people were ever so crazy as to let a song like that get popular. Please answer in the paper. Thank you. — Jimmy And Ronnie

Dear Jimmy and Ronnie: Yup — your Dad is right. I, too am a 41-year-old relic. And he's correct about the spearmint song, too.

But why do you think it's so crazy? After "Oooh Eee O00h Ahhh Ahhh Walla Walla Bing Bang — Ting Tang," I think the spearmint number is downright intelligent. And compared with "Alvin" and the other chipmunk stuff, "Spearmint" is a musical classic.

---

Dear Ann: I'm 25 years old and have been married 4 months. I work for a fine firm as a bookkeeper and accountant during the day. At night I attend school. I want to be a C.P.A.

My wife is a secretary and she makes twice as much money as I do. She's wonderful and never makes comparisons. We pool our checks and nothing is said.

My boss gives me lavish compliments, says I'm the brightest guy he's seen in ages and he assures me I'll go far." In the meantime, after deductions, my take home pay is $44 a week. I've hinted I can use more money but he tells me I'm getting a million dollars worth of experience. My wife says not to push him or I may be out of work entirely. Your opinion, please.— Frank

Talk to some fellows in your night school class who are probably doing similar work during the day, and learn what they are making. Then peg your request at a reasonable figure. It's important to keep working toward that C.P.A., but don't be a chump in the meantime. The boss's compliments are ginger peachy, but they won't fit into your wallet.

Dear Ann: Our daughter is almost 16. She's been going steady for a year with a boy who has lots of home problems. I want her to break up with him because she's a nervous wreck as a result of his troubles. My husband has sided with her and I'm fighting this battle alone. Please help me.

This boy's father is an alcoholic. He calls up to tell her his father just passed out and looks like he may be dead, or his mother got mad at him and took his car away for a month, or nobody is at home and will she come over and fix him something to eat.

When I tell her this boy is no good for her she says if I don't stop nagging she'll leave home. I don't know where to turn next. Can you help me? — Mrs. L.S.

Your daughter is serving as a refuge for this unfortunate boy. This is no role for a 15-year-old girl. Your husband's "siding with her" doesn't help matters either.

Don't try to break up the relationship. Try, instead to let her know you understand how tough life is for him. Be friendly and pleasant. Win her confidence. Then gradually encourage her to consider going out with others so that she'll have something on which to base a comparison. You'll catch more flies with honey than with vinegar, Mother.

New Spray-On Starch Comes On Market

The homemaker whose family likes parts, but not all, of their washable garments starched for crisp smoothness now can do away with mixing and dunking if she gets a new spray-on starch in a push-button container.

Newest of more than hundred different types of aerosol products that have captured the ease-seeking fancy of consumers in recent years, the aerosol starch is now being test-marketed in New England states and should be generally available within the next few months. It can be used on either damp or dry clothes, according to its manufacturer, and works best with a steam iron.

While admittedly not as economical as the usual dip-in liquid starch method when you want all-over starching, the spray product offers convenience and speed in special applications. Its manufacturer claims it's ideal, for example, in treating men's shirts where hubby likes only the collar, cuffs, and a bit of the front of the shirt starched. And in little girls' dresses, for instance, the spray application permits a neat, starched collar on the outisde with none of the bothersome chafin or discomfort that may occur with over-all starching that makes the inside of the collar just as stiff.

The amount and evenness of starch deposit can be controlled easily with the spray container. Dispensing pressure is provided by a propellent — the same type of safe chemical that is used as a cold - making agent in many home refrigerators and air conditioners. On wet or damp garments, the spray starch is absorbed by capillary action to give an all-through starching just like that obtained in the older dip treatmnet. Sprayed on dry garments, it combines the usual sprinkling and starching operations and produces a surface starching that, when ironed with a steam iron, imparts a light glaze similar to that of new, unwashed fabric.

An eight - ounce container of the aerosol starch, its manufacturer says, is sufficient to handle several washes of an average family of four, when the spot starching technique is used.

Stuffed hard cooked eggs, sliced cold meats and cheese, potato salad and marinated blue lake green beans make a satisfying cold supper for a warm spring evening. Iced tea and a hot baked dessert would finish off the meal nicely. To prepare the beans, drain a can of tender blue lakes, drizzle with a tart French dressing and chill thoroughly. At serving time, arrange on crisp shredded lettuce, and garnish with wedges of tomato or a sprinkling of thin, red-rimmed radish slices.

Questions And Answers

By BETTY PEPIS

Q. — My house is an old one. The living room is 18 feet square, has 12 foot ceilings and connects with a hall (by French doors) which measures 18 by 12 feet. Walls of both rooms are light gray with woodwork and ceilings in white. The rug is old rose, a Victorian loveseat is toast and one chair is aqua and black. I am collecting aquamarine glass. I have a marble-topped mahogany coffee table, two end tables and secretary in mahogany. Lamp bases are china or milk glass. What colors should I use on a Duncan Phyfe sofa and two Victorian chairs? Also how shall I treat two windows 72 by 30 inches, 3 feet apart? Elsewhere in the room I have criss cross curtains on three windows that are together but on the two separated windows these look long and skinny.

A. — Cover the chairs with peacock blue (darker than the aqua glass). Try a gray and rose print on the sofa. Take the same print and have long window shades custom made for the two awkwardly placed windows.

Q. — I am concerned about the carpeting for my living room. It is an L-shaped living-dining area. In the dining area and entrance foyer I have white vinyl tile with golden brown flecks, beige walls and beige draperies throughout. There is a toast couch and persimmon chair and I am getting walnut tables. I had thought of dark brown carpeting but wonder if the walnut will show up well against this background. Would a tweed pattern be out of place with the flecked tile next to it?

A. — I think any kind of patterned carpeting would not be desirable with the flecked vinyl although a texture all in one color would not be objectionable. Had you thought of a rust carpeting somewhat darker than the persimmon chair? This could be most effective with your neutral furnishings.

4-Year-Old 'About To Drive Me Out Of My Mind

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

When a child of four years is driving his mother crazy, the mismanagement must have been present for a very long time and correction hardly can be a matter of reading a book or an answer in a newspaper.

Mrs. B.K. ho calls herself, "desperate," writes, "Dear Mrs. Eldred: I have been going to write you for a long time but shied away from it. I have a 4-year-old who is about to drive me out of my mind. There is nothing he does that is right. He says bad words. He will not sleep in his own bed but he and his father sleep in a double bed.

"When he goes to bed he insists on his father putting on his pajamas, too. When he is corrected he goes into a tantrum and he acts the same way after he is reprimanded. Many times I am prompted to pull him up by his hair, and I believe this child will drive me insane."

ANSWER

None of this has come about today or yesterday. In trying to get him to sleep you have deliberately allowed the father to go to bed with him. Don't blame the child if he enjoys this special companionship.

All 4-year-olds, or those of comparable ages, discover the delights of saying words they hear others say. If these happen to be "bad" words, their delight is even greater when saying them causes a great to-do.

Just keep your own tongue under control and when he uses profanity, tell him this is NOT the way to talk and that if he wants to use such words to go upstairs, or in another room to say them to himself.

Children outgrow this stage temporarily it enhances their idea of themselves as big boys.

TALK GENTLY

Talk to him gently. Treat him lovingly. Enlist his aid in doing what you tell him to, because it right, because you love him and expect him to do what is right.

As parents, put an end to such nonsense as father putting on pajamas and having to sleep with him. His place is in his bed, yours in yours. If you find that gentler treatment and an improved disposition on your part doesn't help the whole situation, then find a Child Guidance Clinic or a Family Social Service Agency which can study the family and children and put you on the right track.

When two individuals get on each other's nerves this way — both are probably to blame and some neutral outsider needs to guide them into new paths of conduct.

Moths Will Attack Fibers Of Synthetic

Insects, long reputed to have a taste for woolens in their clothes closet picnics, have now been revealed as having less discriminating tastes. The National Institute of Drycleaning has concluded tests to determine to what extent insects will damage clothing made from the man-made fibers. It was found to be considerable — if the clothing was marked with foodstains.

But, they found, synthetic fabrics which have been drycleaned present little attraction to insect appetites.

Insects used in the tests were black carpet beetles. Much of the so-called "moth damage" found on wool fabrics is caused not by clothes moth larvae but by carpet beetles whose tastes are the same. The carpet beetle larvae are hardier and easier to handle in lab tests.

Fabrics used were 100 per cent Acrilan, a rayon and acetate blend, and a Dacron-cotton blend. These were spotted with chicken stew, tomato soup, and brewer's yeast. Larvae were placed on the food-stained swatches and on the clean swatches, then left in storage closet conditions for 28 days.

The beetles ate holes all the way through the foodstained acetate blends. They noticeably damaged the surface of the Dacron-cotton blend swatches where the food had been. In all cases the unstained swatches were unchewed, though equally exposed.

Moral: Never store soiled garments.

Fabrics of wool blended with other fibers should be regarded as if they were all wool, because the insects will find the wool and have dinner. Moth and carpet beetle larvae have been known to chew through other fabrics in order to get at wool. Your dry-cleaner can add a moth-proofing protection.

Other insects with appetites for clothing are silverfish and crickets which have a taste for cellulose. They'll eat cotton, especially if starch or glue or similarly delectable materials are present.

It's no secret that raisins do wonders for hot breads. For a breakfast treat, stir light or dark raisins and a few chopped nuts into your favorite recipe for bran muffins. Delicious! Or make Caramel Raisin Pinwheels, using biscuit dough prepared from a mix. Roll out the dough, sprinkle generously with butter, brown sugar, raisins and a little cinnamon. Roll up like a jelly roll, slice and bake. You'll have no trouble getting the family to breakfast on time when you serve these, for their spicy fragrance during baking draws people to the kitchen. For a quick breakfast treat, use raisin bread to make French toast. Add a little rum extract and grated orange rind to the egg mixture for extra flavor.

Tips To Better Telephone Use For Everyone

AP Newsfeatures

Many people do not get the most out of their phone company investment.

If there is a new baby in the house, ask your phone man about the built-in devices with which you can control the volume of the telephone ring. On the desk set it is a rotating wheel on the bottom of the instrument. On the wall phone, a popular kitchen item, you may find the lever at the base of the phone. It may be moved from side to side to make the ring louder or softer. The wall phone has a raised lip at either side of the top of the phone so you can place the receiver on it while calling someone to the phone.

There are telephones with built-in night lights. When the receiver is lifted, the light brightens so you can dial in the dark. There are loud ringing bells that may be placed outside of the house to tell you the phone is ringing inside. There are outside plug-in jacks too, so that a portable phone may be used on patio or porch when the family is outdoors.

Larger homes may require intercommunication service so that calls may be made from room to room.

Sweden has doubled the dollar exchange it allows tourists leaving for the United States and Canada; but the Sudan has cut its allowance in half.

Keep your bills. It will save you time and pain at customs when you get back.

If you are traveling as a family, look into all the concessions which airlines, steamship lines, tour operators and hotels offer to families.

New Interests In Arts Says Prima Donna

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

Here in the good old U.S.A. we are having our own modern-day renaissance of art, music and literature.

Museum curators, musicians, professors and art and music enthusiasts have been saying so. But the latest voice to be heard on the subect is that of all-American prima donna Phyliss Curtin, who has been singing American opera all over the country for the last five years.

Phyllis is slender, brunette, smart and photogenic. She also is the wife of photographer Eugene Clark. They have an 18-year-old son, Peter. Phyllis does more traveling than a traveling salesman, covering practically every state in the Union most of the year giving concerts and singing in operas. Says she:

"I love to sing American operas —it's so wonderful to have the audience know what you're saying. Recently when I sang an American opera at the Will Rogers Auditorium in Fort Worth, Texas, the waitresses and elevator boys at the hotel all went, and told me—'it's great—we can understand it.'"

All over the country, says Phyllis, she sees evidence of a great new interest in music, drama and art—in little theaters, municipal operas, workshops in music and art, crafts clubs, painting and sculpture classes which are springing up in big and little towns alike.

Phyllis was born in Clarksburg, W.Va., and studied violin as a child. Her dad sang in the church choir, but otherwise there was no great musical talent in the family. She attended Wellesley College, where she majored in political science, starting voice lessons in her junior year. She found it was fun to sing—more fun than political science, so she decided to go at it in earnest. She started giving concerts at Town Hall in New York, and made her operatic debut at the City Center in New York in 1954, singing an opera "The Trial," written by an Austrian composer.

This spring she sang the new American opera "Wuthering Heights" by Carlisle Floyd, at the City Center. Says she:

"I'm having a wonderful time, enjoying every minute of it, even though sometimes I do feel like my home was a train or plane. There's one thing I'd like to say to girls with operatic ambitions—you can get the opportunities you want right here in your own country—singers don't have to train in Europe any more."

Air travelers making a number of stops should remove the stickers from their baggage at each stop. It is not unknown for travelers to have their baggage routed back to one of the places they have already visited.

Save money by traveling in the "thrift" season — the off - season — October to May in Europe, April to December in Florida and the Caribbean.

It may be moved from side to side to make the ring louder or softer. The wall phone has a raised lip at either side of the top of the phone so you can place the receiver on it while calling someone to the phone.

There are telephones with built-in night lights. When the receiver is lifted, the light brightens so you can dial in the dark. There are loud ringing bells that may be placed outside of the house to tell you the phone is ringing inside. There are outside plug-in jacks too, so that a portable phone may be used on patio or porch when the family is outdoors.

Larger homes may require intercommunication service so that calls may be made from room to room.

New Interests In Arts Says Prima Donna

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

Here in the good old U.S.A. we are having our own modern-day renaissance of art, music and literature.

Museum curators, musicians, professors and art and music enthusiasts have been saying so. But the latest voice to be heard on the subect is that of all-American prima donna Phyliss Curtin, who has been singing American opera all over the country for the last five years.

Phyllis is slender, brunette, smart and photogenic. She also is the wife of photographer Eugene Clark. They have an 18-year-old son, Peter. Phyllis does more traveling than a traveling salesman, covering practically every state in the Union most of the year giving concerts and singing in operas. Says she:

"I love to sing American operas—it's so wonderful to have the audience know what you're saying. Recently when I sang an American opera at the Will Rogers Auditorium in Fort Worth, Texas, the waitresses and elevator boys at the hotel all went, and told me—'it's great—we can understand it.'"

All over the country, says Phyllis, she sees evidence of a great new interest in music, drama and art—in little theaters, municipal operas, workshops in music and art, crafts clubs, painting and sculpture classes which are springing up in big and little towns alike.

Phyllis was born in Clarksburg, W.Va., and studied violin as a child. Her dad sang in the church choir, but otherwise there was no great musical talent in the family. She attended Wellesley College, where she majored in political science, starting voice lessons in her junior year. She found it was fun to sing—more fun than political science, so she decided to go at it in earnest. She started giving concerts at Town Hall in New York, and made her operatic debut at the City Center in New York in 1954, singing an opera "The Trial," written by an Austrian composer.

This spring she sang the new American opera "Wuthering Heights" by Carlisle Floyd, at the City Center. Says she:

"I'm having a wonderful time, enjoying every minute of it, even though sometimes I do feel like my home was a train or plane. There's one thing I'd like to say to girls with operatic ambitions—you can get the opportunities you want right here in your own country—singers don't have to train in Europe any more."

Air travelers making a number of stops should remove the stickers from their baggage at each stop. It is not unknown for travelers to have their baggage routed back to one of the places they have already visited.

Save money by traveling in the "thrift" season — the off - season — October to May in Europe, April to December in Florida and the Caribbean.

DEAR ABBY

Change Of Scenery Offers A Fresh Start

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I was born when my parents were over 50 and it was my duty to care for them until they died. When I was 32 I went to work for a professional man (married and misunderstood —I know now, they all are.) He managed to sell me on the idea of going out with him. We always went some distance from our city. This went on for 22 years. I never could have any boyfriends because he claimed he couldn't tell ahead of time when he could get away, so I sat and waited. I should have known better but, Abby, you've never been an "old maid" and had life and romance pass you by. I am over 50 now and don't need any of the usual sermons, but do you think a decent man my age would want me? By the way, the man who ruined my life is successfully directing the lives of others, knowing full well he spoiled mine.

OLD MAID

DEAR OLD MAID: No one can "spoil" your life without your consent. Don't look back. A change of scenery and new surroundings could offer a fresh start. Every day "decent" men marry women who have had something to live down.

DEAR ABBY: In the case of a married couple where the husband is very affectionate and passionate and the wife is cool and wants to be left alone, what do you think is bound to happen after six or seven years?

TEMPTED

DEAR TEMPTED: One woman's left-overs can be another woman's banquet.

DEAR ABBY: I know you get lots of letters from teenagers asking about their love life, but this is really serious. I am 14 and so is Tom. When he talks to me on the phone he tells his mother he is talking to one of the boys. When he is over to my house he tells his mother he is out with the gang. Is he ashamed of me or what? (P.S. Another thing, Abby, are nuts bad for your complexion? Someone said they were worse than chocolate).

NANCY

DEAR NANCY: Your boyfriend is still at the shy age and doesn't want to advertise the fact that he's got a girl. If you like him, help him keep it quiet. (P.S. About the nuts—Teen-agers with especially oily skins should avoid them.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband's sister writes him letters at work when she knows his address at home. He asks me to answer some of her letters because she is all the time asking for recipes and addresses. The last time he brought me a letter, I noticed pages 4 and 5 were missing. I asked him what happened to these missing pages and he laughed it off. What would you do in my place? NOT LAUGHING

DEAR NOT: Let your husband giggle up the addresses and recipes and answer his sister's letters himself.

"How far should we go? Get ABBY'S booklet. "What Every Teenager Wants To Know." Send 25 cents and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope to ABBY in care of this newspaper.

For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this paper. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Woodlawn HDC Meeting In Larche Home

Mrs. Harvey Larche's home was the scene of the Woodlawn HDC meeting when more than 20 members were present for the May meeting Friday afternoon, with Mrs. Albert Kilpatrick serving as co - hostess.

The vice - president, Mrs. John Bush, introduced two new members, Mrs. Donald Bonnette and Mrs. Maxwell Brown, who were welcomed into the unit.

During the business session, which was conducted by the president, Mrs. Truman Wright, plans were made to observe National Home Demonstration Club Week with a church service at Pleasant Hill Congregational Church, Friday evening, May 8, 7:00 p.m., followed by a wiener roast. Rev. Leon Sims will be the speaker for the occasion. Plans were also made to enter garments in the Dress Revue at the Agriculture Building Saturday morning, at which time the Woodlawn club member who has had the longest number of years in Home Demonstration club work will be revealed.

"Are you, Mrs. Homemaker, satisfied with the way you are using your time?" This query from Mrs. Audrey Dawson, Ouachita Parish Home Demonstration Agent, revealed the nature of her demonstration as one dealing in saving and using time wisely. Mrs. Dawson said that we have three things to spend: Time, energy, and Money, and stated that the only resource that God gave each of us equally is time. The agent then demonstrated helpful ideas in saving time as well as energy in the areas of Food Preparation and Clearing Away which consumes 33 per cent of the average homemaker's time and also in Cleaning and Care of the House which takes 18 per cent of her time.

Refreshments were served to the guests, Mrs. Dawson and Mrs. Alice Hollingsworth, and to Mesdames: Bush, Wallace Snowden, A. C. Hollingsworth, Sr., Doyle Raborn, Ruby Morehead, J. E. Rutledge, Ernie Frith, H. M. Wallace, O. E. Smith, G. E. Rutledge, Erby Tisdale, Leon Sims, Gilbert Snowden, Wright, Gerald Morehead, Donald Bonnette, Maxwell Brown, and Keith Cobb.

June meeting will be with Mrs. John Bush, Friday, June 5, 2:00 p.m.

Plan Ahead For Your Summer Camp

Throughout the country about now mothers are frantically packing shorts, T-shirts, bathing suits and blankets in preparation for the children's summer exodus to camp.

Almost always something is forgotten in the last - minute flurry, so the mother who would avoid stress and strain would do well to sit down quietly well before the departure date, with the camp literature in hand, and make two lists — one entitled "Things to Take" and the other "Things to Do."

The camp list of required equipment probably will be adequate for the first — even more than adequate, in the opinion of some parents who wonder why Junior needs 24 pairs of shorts and the most expensive raincoat on the market.

It's the second list that often gives trouble later in the summer if it is forgotten beforehand. This should include such reminders as — Take children to doctor for checkup; make date with dentist; sew name tapes; fix up first aid kit and medicine kit; get everything laundered a week before; remind Mary not to forget her manicure kit; try to impress Junior with the importance of writing letters.

A physical checkup by the doctor and a dental check by the dentist are the most important items on this list. The children may need booster shots, or vitamins or special diets. The dentist may find cavities that can be fixed at once, and avoid toothaches later, when the children are miles away at camp.

Both doctor and dentist also should be encouraged to give the children a few pointers on health and hygiene — explain the importance of eating their fruit and fresh vegetables every day; tell them how to avoid stomach upsets; sunburn and insect bites and what to do if they get these ailments; impress on them the importance of regular tooth brushing, the use of mouth wash and dental floss: remind them to take their vitamins.

Such precautions in advance will prevent many emergencies later.

Colorful Table Make Meals An Occasion

The outdoors provides a perfect backdrop for all meals during the summer months, and you will find that even the simplest of meals can become an occasion when the table is set colorfully and with imagination.

Table - top coordination has become an easy matter, since there is a wealth of new items now available. Tablecloths and mats come in a wide range of colors and designs. China and earthenware have achieved richness and glamour. American - made glassware has added all sorts of new shapes and stylings and brand new colors of orange, steel blue, amber, etc., may be found in stemware, drinkware sets, as well as accessory items.

There are no really basic rules that must be followed to set an attractive table. However, if you are a bit unsure of your tablesetting ability, perhaps these three points might help you.

1) Good balance is important. Everything should be arranged in an orderly manner. Colors used should be harmonious. Glassware, table covering, napkins, dinnerware and decorative accessories, all of which are color elements, should be selected with a careful eye to relationship of color or as well as proportion.

2) Consider suitability. Each item used on the table should be suited to one another as well as to the occasion and menu.

3) You will want your tables to have an interesting and unusual look. Centerpieces are all - important in this category. With a little thought and imagination, they can become the focal point of your tablesetting. It is no longer necessary to put a centerpiece in the center of the table. It may be used practically anyplace on the table as long as it does not interfere with the serving and eating.

A good way to insure an attractive centerpiece for any occasion is to start a collection of various shaped bowls and vases in glass. There are many everyday pieces that can do double or even triple duty, too, milk glass goblets, for instance, may be used as part of the tablesetting, but also can be used as a centerpiece on a breakfast table, filled with philodendrum or multi-colored pansies. Shapely apothecary jars or brandy inhalers can be used for long - stemmed flowers.

A crystal serving dish adapts easily to a floating flower arrangement or may be piled with fruits and serve as a centerpiece as well as a dessert tray.

Turkey, in a vigorous campaign to attract more tourists, is building 39 hotels for occupancy this year.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Millions of American mothers will become "engaged" this May, marking one of the most romantic and widespread Mother's Day gift trends of the season, reports the Jewelry Industry Council.

This new trend, giving mother an engagement ring, is reported by jewelers from coast to coast. It stems from the fact that nearly 22 per cent of American mothers never received engagement rings.

Pointed Story

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI)— Needles for your sewing machine come in different sizes to use with different weights of thread and fabric.

Michigan State University clothing specialists point out that a fine needle works best with the fine, delicate fabrics. For heavy materials, use a sturdier machine needle.

SPACE SAVER

Nail the tops of glass jars to the underside of shelves in your work shop. Place in the jars such small items as nuts, bolts and screws, then screw the jars to the tops. You will save space in this manner and have these small items always where you can see them. Too, your work shop will be neater.

Family Living Determines Life Of Child

"Our home and family living determines the future lives of our children — their happiness and well - being." These words were given to the Crosley P.-T. A. at their April meeting by Mrs. Mary Ella Blackiston, home and family living teacher of the West Monroe High School. "Home cannot be just a place for sleeping, eating and changing clothes. We should get back to family togetherness. Mothers alone cannot rear a family properly — fathers must come to know their responsibility to their children."

Reslolutions were discussed at length by the unit and decisions were made pertaining to them. Mr. Sers recommended that the unit plan to present a resolution next year in connection with the hazards of the air - rifle in the hands of children.

Appointed to the auditing committee were Mrs. T. C. Cockerham, Mrs. W. E. Hux and Mr. T. C. Cockerham. Their report will be given at the last meeting. Mrs. Culpepper's first grade, Mrs. Lindow's fourth grade and Mrs. Crowell's fifth grade tied for room count. Prizes were given to each.

Cool Water Often Helps

Clear cool water often provides excellent first aid for spots on clothing. Applied as soon as possible after staining, water will frequently prevent the spot from "setting." But don't try to remove stains from delicate fabrics such as silks or rayons. Or don't try to remove unknown stains. Let your drycleaner do it, says the National Institute of Drycleaning. After all, he's an expert and can do wonders where you may only botch the job.

If you travel with electric appliances such as a razor or an iron, ascertain the size of the current you will encounter and whether you will need adapter plugs or small transformers.

The La Petite Maison Garden Club Meets

Members were asked to enter flowers in the Monroe Garden Club show and ribbons were won by Mrs. Dell Breard and Mrs. Ed Heard. The short business meeting was followed by refreshments.

New members were introduced and the following were welcomed, Mrs. Louis Ray, Mrs. Bell McCain Jr., Mrs. Ed Heard, Mrs. Charles Wilds, Mrs. Ben Johnston, Mrs. Robert Easterling, Mrs. Jack E. Murphy. Other members attending were Mrs. Louis Breard Jr., Mrs. Doyle Hamilton, Mrs. V. O. Smith, Mrs. Malcolm Smith, Mrs. Herbert Breard Jr., Mrs. Lester High and Mrs. Bill Eason.

Another thing, Abby, are nuts bad for your complexion? Someone said they were worse than chocolate).

NANCY

DEAR NANCY: Your boyfriend is still at the shy age and doesn't want to advertise the fact that he's got a girl. If you like him, help him keep it quiet. (P.S. About the nuts—Teen-agers with especially oily skins should avoid them.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband's sister writes him letters at work when she knows his address at home. He asks me to answer some of her letters because she is all the time asking for recipes and addresses. The last time he brought me a letter, I noticed pages 4 and 5 were missing. I asked him what happened to these missing pages and he laughed it off. What would you do in my place? NOT LAUGHING

DEAR NOT: Let your husband giggle up the addresses and recipes and answer his sister's letters himself.

Woodlawn HDC Meeting In Larche Home

Mrs. Harvey Larche's home was the scene of the Woodlawn HDC meeting when more than 20 members were present for the May meeting Friday afternoon, with Mrs. Albert Kilpatrick serving as co - hostess.

The vice - president, Mrs. John Bush, introduced two new members, Mrs. Donald Bonnette and Mrs. Maxwell Brown, who were welcomed into the unit.

During the business session, which was conducted by the president, Mrs. Truman Wright, plans were made to observe National Home Demonstration Club Week with a church service at Pleasant Hill Congregational Church, Friday evening, May 8, 7:00 p.m., followed by a wiener roast. Rev. Leon Sims will be the speaker for the occasion. Plans were also made to enter garments in the Dress Revue at the Agriculture Building Saturday morning, at which time the Woodlawn club member who has had the longest number of years in Home Demonstration club work will be revealed.

"Are you, Mrs. Homemaker, satisfied with the way you are using your time?" This query from Mrs. Audrey Dawson, Ouachita Parish Home Demonstration Agent, revealed the nature of her demonstration as one dealing in saving and using time wisely. Mrs. Dawson said that we have three things to spend: Time, energy, and Money, and stated that the only resource that God gave each of us equal is time. The agent then demonstrated helpful ideas in saving time as well as energy in the areas of Food Preparation and Clearing Away which consumes 33 per cent of the average homemaker's time and also in Cleaning and Care of the House which takes 18 per cent of her time.

Refreshments were served to the guests, Mrs. Dawson and Mrs. Alice Hollingsworth, and to Mesdames: Bush, Wallace Snowden, A. C. Hollingsworth, Sr., Doyle Raborn, Ruby Morehead, J. E. Rutledge, Ernie Frith, H. M. Wallace, O. E. Smith, G. E. Rutledge, Erby Tisdale, Leon Sims, Gilbert Snowden, Wright, Gerald Morehead, Donald Bonnette, Maxwell Brown, and Keith Cobb.

June meeting will be with Mrs. John Bush, Friday, June 5, 2:00 p.m.

Colorful Table Make Meals An Occasion

The outdoors provides a perfect backdrop for all meals during the summer months, and you will find that even the simplest of meals can become an occasion when the table is set colorfully and with imagination.

Table - top coordination has become an easy matter, since there is a wealth of new items now available. Tablecloths and mats come in a wide range of colors and designs. China and earthenware have achieved richness and glamour. American - made glassware has added all sorts of new shapes and stylings and brand new colors of orange, steel blue, amber, etc., may be found in stemware, drinkware sets, as well as accessory items.

There are no really basic rules that must be followed to set an attractive table. However, if you are a bit unsure of your tablesetting ability, perhaps these three points might help you.

1) Good balance is important. Everything should be arranged in an orderly manner. Colors used should be harmonious. Glassware, table covering, napkins, dinnerware and decorative accessories, all of which are color elements, should be selected with a careful eye to relationship of color as well as proportion.

2) Consider suitability. Each item used on the table should be suited to one another as well as to the occasion and menu.

3) You will want your tables to have an interesting and unusual look. Centerpieces are all - important in this category. With a little thought and imagination, they can become the focal point of your tablesetting. It is no longer necessary to put a centerpiece in the center of the table. It may be used practically anyplace on the table as long as it does not interfere with the serving and eating

A good way to insure an attractive centerpiece for any occasion is to start a collection of various shaped bowls and vases in glass. There are many everyday pieces that can do double or even triple duty, too, milk glass goblets, for instance, may be used as part of the tablesetting, but also can be used as a centerpiece on a breakfast table, filled with philodendrum or multi-colored pansies. Shapely apothecary jars or brandy inhalers can be used for long - stemmed flowers. A crystal serving dish adapts easily to a floating flower arrangement or may be piled with fruits and serve as a centerpiece as well as a dessert tray.

Turkey, in a vigorous campaign to attract more tourists, is building 39 hotels for occupancy this year.

Plan Ahead For Your Summer Camp

Throughout the country about now mothers are frantically packing shorts, T-shirts, bathing suits and blankets in preparation for the children's summer exodus to camp.

Almost always something is forgotten in the last - minute flurry, so the mother who would avoid stress and strain would do well to sit down quietly well before the departure date, with the camp literature in hand, and make two lists — one entitled "Things to Take" and the other "Things to Do."

The camp list of required equipment probably will be adequate for the first — even more than adequate, in the opinion of some parents who wonder why Junior needs 24 pairs of shorts and the most expensive raincoat on the market.

It's the second list that often gives trouble later in the summer if it is forgotten beforehand. This should include such reminders as — Take children to doctor for checkup; make date with dentist; sew name tapes; fix up first aid kit and medicine kit; get everything laundered a week before; remind Mary not to forget her manicure kit; try to impress Junior with the importance of writing letters.

A physical checkup by the doctor and a dental check by the dentist are the most important items on this list. The children may need booster shots, or vitamins or special diets. The dentist may find cavities that can be fixed at once, and avoid toothaches later, when the children are miles away at camp.

Both doctor and dentist also should be encouraged to give the children a few pointers on health and hygiene — explain the importance of eating their fruit and fresh vegetables every day; tell them how to avoid stomach upsets; sunburn and insect bites and what to do if they get these ailments; impress on them the importance of regular tooth brushing, the use of mouth wash and dental floss; remind them to take their vitamins.

Such precautions in advance will prevent many emergencies later.

New Hair Colors Go From Pink To Green

Color has really gone to the head with a splash, especially now with older women grasping at rainbow hair colors for a pick-me-up. They have adopted fanciful colors for special occasions without worrying about the neighbors, mothers-in-law or husbands.

The trend began with hair streaks, went on to colored hair wigs, wig hats and now a whole head of temporary color. You can choose a merry apricot, a riot of red, a mad gold, green or mauve or a shade called "tickled pink." Few women take these rainbow hues seriously, but those who do use them enjoy the fun and conversation they create.

At a recent hair show, cream color rinses were explained as a means of "matching hair to costume or contrasting it without plunging permanent color." There was a pink shade suggested for former blondes, now white-haired. These fair skinned beauties are supposed to be especially complemented by the pearly shimmer of pink on white hair. Mauve, apricot and blue could help ring in the costume changes for this type, also, the experts say.

A woman at a society party set the pace for the mauve look, wearing a softly draped mauve chiffon sheath, shoes and stockings, with her mauve rinsed hair. Another matron was dressed in a shirtwaist dress belted in gold. She wore green shoes, carried a green chiffon handkerchief, and had colored her salt - and - pepper hair a silvery-smoky green.

This color is applied in a few minutes, shampooed out if you don't like it.

Some suggestions made by color experts include advice for former brownettes whose hair now has a mixed gray tone. A medium skin tone, they point out, will make all hair colors compatible to this type. White hair will pick up the pure color, darker hair will show less of it.

If hair has gone white all around the face, while the rest of the hair is gray, a shaded effect may be achieved with these rinses.

New Hair Colors Go From Pink To Green

Color has really gone to the head with a splash, especially now with older women grasping at rainbow hair colors for a pick-me-up. They have adopted fanciful colors for special occasions without worrying about the neighbors, mothers-in-law or husbands.

The trend began with hair streaks, went on to colored hair wigs, wig hats and now a whole head of temporary color. You can choose a merry apricot, a riot of red, a mad gold, green or mauve or a shade called "tickled pink." Few women take these rainbow hues seriously, but those who do use them enjoy the fun and conversation they create.

At a recent hair show, cream color rinses were explained as a means of "matching hair to costume or contrasting it without plunging permanent color." There was a pink shade suggested for former blondes, now white-haired. These fair skinned beauties are supposed to be especially complemented by the pearly shimmer of pink on white hair. Mauve, apricot and blue could help ring in the costume changes for this type, also, the experts say.

A woman at a society party set the pace for the mauve look, wearing a softly draped mauve chiffon sheath, shoes and stockings, with her mauve rinsed hair. Another matron was dressed in a shirtwaist dress belted in gold. She wore green shoes, carried a green chiffon handkerchief, and had colored her salt - and - pepper hair a silvery-smoky green.

This color is applied in a few minutes, shampooed out if you don't like it.

Some suggestions made by color experts include advice for former brownettes whose hair now has a mixed gray tone. A medium skin tone, they point out, will make all hair colors compatible to this type. White hair will pick up the pure color, darker hair will show less of it.

If hair has gone white all around the face, while the rest of the hair is gray, a shaded effect may be achieved with these rinses.

Reds Threaten Berlin Again On Blockade's 10 Birthday

BERLIN (AP)—Down came the barriers one minute after midnight. It was May 12, 1949. The Soviet blockade of West Berlin was broken.

On this 10th anniversary—when the Soviets once again menace Berlin—Western statesmen are recalling the lessons of the 318-day blockade and the Allied airlift that smashed it.

For inspiration and methods to defend West Berlin today, they look back on the struggle of men and women who defeated a similar Red challenge against incomparably greater odds.

The Soviets began their historic effort to starve 2,200,000 West Berliners into submission with a casual announcement in the early hours of June 24, 1948: "Due to a technical difficulty on the rail line, the Soviet military transport command has been compelled to halt passenger and freight traffic between Berlin and Helmstedt."

Soviet barriers sealed the 110-mile rail-highway corridor linking West Berlin to West Germany.

The land blockade was on. Why? West Berlin was a giant pawn, as it may be today, in a Soviet master plan to halt the build-up of Western Germany.

Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky, the Soviet military governor of Germany, bluntly stated the price for lifting the blockade: the United States, Britain and France must give up their program for currency reform in West Germany and the creation of a freely elected independent government.

Alternatively, as a consolation prize, the Soviets wanted to absorb this freedom citadel, 110 miles behind the Iron Curtain.

The blockade caught the Western Allies completely unprepared. Many Allied officials — including some top U.S. government figures —thought it best to write off Berlin and get out quickly from the militarily indefensible city.

In the Western sectors, there were 3,000 U.S. troops, 2,000 British and 1,500 French stacked against 18,000 Soviet troops in the Eastern sector and another 300,000 parked all around in East Germany.

The Western powers had dismantled their great World War II fighting machine. The Soviets had retained theirs.

The Red army was convinced West Berlin could not be provisioned by air and the Allies would be compelled to abandon the city within weeks.

There was less than a month's supply of food and fuel in West Berlin. The Soviets shortly were to cut off the bulk of the city's electricity supply.

The Soviets sought to panic the West Berliners with Communist mob action, kidnaping of pro-West Germans, propaganda threats.

As the Western governments hesitated, the U.S. governor of Germany, Gen. Lucius Clay acted.

Once convinced that the West Berliners would stick it, Clay got on the telephone to Gen. Curtis LeMay at U.S. Air Force headquarters, Wiesbaden, West Germany.

"Curt," snapped Clay, "Can you transport coal by air?"

Scraping together some old B17 bombers and beat up two-engined C47 "Gooney Birds," LeMay pulled spare pilots off desk jobs and got going.

On June 26—just 48 hours after the blockade began—a handful of "Gooney Birds" roared off West German airfields toward Berlin.

In those first desperate hours, few dared hope that the airlift could bring in the 3,000 tons of supplies needed daily by the West Berliners and 500 tons required for the Allied community.

On June 28, there was a meeting in the White House to decide if the United States would stand fast in Berlin.

President Truman heard the divived views of his advisors and then ruled: "We are in Berlin by terms of an agreement and the Russians have no right to get us out by either direct or indirect pressures."

To back up his decision, Truman played America's only trump. He ordered two groups of the atomic B29 superfortresses to Britain.

Allied hopes centered on the airlift. The day after the White House meeting the Air Force hauled 385 tons by plane. It figured that within four weeks this could be raised to 1,500 tons each 24 hours. It envisioned the airlift as an operation that would last no more than 45 days.

As the blockade continued, the airlift shifted into high gear. The "Gooney Birds" with their 2½ ton capacities were replaced with C45 Skymasters carrying 10-ton loads, and big British Tudor and York transports.

The world's most modern radar apparatus was set up on the American airfield Tempelhof and the British strip Gatow to guide transports.

A third airfield at Tegel in the French sector was carved out of swampland.

The French city commandant, Gen. Jean Ganeval, blew up the transmission tower of the Soviet-run Radio Berlin when he found it was endangering the approach to Tegel.

The airlift—dubbed "Operation Vittles" by the Americans and "Operation Planefare" by the British — went forward day and night.

The Americans carried in 77 per cent of the net tonnage and the British 23 per cent.

Sometimes the transports were harassed by buzzing Soviet fighters or Red army anti-aircraft and gunnery practice. But the Soviets backed off when the Allies warned they would send fighter escorts if necessary.

On April 16, 1949, the miracle of air and ground organization that went into the airlift achieved its ultimate. On that day, an airlift transport carrying an average 10-ton load landed in West Berlin every 63 seconds. About 12,000 tons of supplies were delivered in 1,383 flights.

The Soviets knew they were licked.

The airlift not only met the survival needs of the West Berliners, it spurred the recovery of their city. A close bond was forged between the population and the Allies that Red propaganda could not weaken.

Instead of hampering the recovery of West Germany, the stand at Berlin encouraged the rehabilitation of the new republic.

At the same time, the recovery of satellite East Germany was crippled by the counterblockade instituted by the Allies against the whole Soviet zone. Soviet prestige dropped.

At the United Nations, Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik suddenly became conciliatory. Through secret negotiations Malik and U. S. Ambassador Philip Jessup ended the blockade.

Next Tuesday, the Allied leaders who broke the Berlin blockade will gather in West Berlin to commemorate the 10th anniversary of their triumph.

The West Berliners will honor the memory of the 40 British airmen, 31 Americans and 5 Germans who died in airlift operations. A foundation will be dedicated for the education of their children at West Berlin schools.

When men like Clay and his U. S. Berlin commandant, Gen. Frank L. Howley, return to their old battleground, they will dwell on how much better West Berlin is prepared today to face another Soviet blockade.

The reconstructed city is prosperous, its people well-fed and adequately housed. Morale is high. Communist agitators have been rooted out. There is a stockpile of a year's supply of food, fuel and other necessities.

For another possible airlift, the United States and its Allies have new big air transports capable of carrying up to 50 tons.

But some things about Berlin have not changed.

When the Soviets first mounted their nerve war against Berlin in 1948 and the Western governments wavered, Clay declared: "If Berlin falls, Western Germany will be next. If we mean to hold Europe against communism, we must not budge."

This is one echo out of the past that the Western foreign ministers may remember when they sit down Monday in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to talk about the future of Berlin.

Toolbox Can Be Useful In Work Of Nuns

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—A toolbox isn't standard equipment for a nun, but Mother Mary Agnes of the Scared Heart Manor for the Aged finds hers juat the thing for her work—particularly when the manor's oil burner is acting up.

Mother Agnes, a member of the Carmelite order and superior of the home for the elderly, has a lot of bills to pay on the new building the home now occupies.

And it costs a good deal of money to porvide the "kind, loving care" prescribed by the order for the aged residents.

So when the oil burner went out of kilter and repair men couldn't seem to find the trouble, Mother Agnes took a hand.

The trouble was three-fold. Great billows of black smoke poured from the chimney, parts of the manor were not getting any heat, and one of the glass-enclosed thermostats on the big burner didn't work.

Mother Mary Agnes attacked the thermostat first. She rolled up the sleeves of her habit and poked around until she found a loose connection leading to it. Her tool kit didn't have anything to fix that, so she dug down into her pocket and came up with an adhesive bandage. Mother Agnes wrapped it firmly around the loose connection. Sure enough, it worked.

That victory behind her, Mother Agnes investigated the burner further. She found the smoke was black because a pre-heat switch hadn't been thrown to warm the oil. And the reason some parts of the building weren't getting enough heat was that workmen's jackets, hanging on switchboxes, had pulled the switches and cut off the flow of heat to certain areas.

After that, Mother Agnes began watching the serviceman who checked the burner each month. She also sent to the factory for a book of instructions. After the serviceman's final visit last spring, she took over the work of caring for the burner. The manor's 165 residents were comfortably warm all through the past winter, and Mother Agnes saved the $125 yearly maintenance fee.

McCall To Seek Office Of State Insurance Chief

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Harley McCall, independent Lake Charles insurance agent, Saturday announced his candidacy for state insurance commissioner.

McCall said Rufus Hayes, the state's present insurance commissioner, is a lawyer, has no insurance experienced and "caters to the out-of-state insurance companies who do most of the liability business in the state."

McCall also criticized the inequities in liability insurance rates from one district of the state to another. In some parts of the state, he said, rates run as high as $150 while a person pays around $50 for the same coverage in another section of the state.

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Maxwell Distenfeld was taking a little nap before dinner when his 11-year-old daugnter Krissie, who had been watching television, tiptoed into the bedroom and pattied him gently on the cheek.

When Dad asked Krissie what she wanted, she replied: "I just wanted to know whether you have a medium or a heavy beard."

Tempers Flare In Galveston Mayor's Office

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — Portly Mayor George Roy Clough, livid with rage, had a reporter who asked embarrassing questions thrown in jail Friday.

Joe Kirkpatrick, 32, Galveston bureau chief for the Houston Chronicle, was charged with disturbing the peace. He spent an hour in jail before he was released in $250 bail for trial in city court Monday.

Clough, 69, seeks reelection to a third term Tuesday. He is opposed by four candidates.

The mayor accused Kirkpatrick of implying he was "in cahoots" with somebody. He called the reporter a liar, and Kirkpatrick then called the mayor a liar.

The dispute started when Kirkpatrick, who had been investigating reports of individuals making private purchases through the municipal Stewart Beach Board for their own use, went to the mayor's office with Joe Halstead, news director for radio station KILE in Galveston.

Kirkpatrick said he had been examining vouchers to see if the money for private purchases had been repaid, and was questioning Clough about them.

He said he then asked the mayor about the legality of two Galveston Wharf Board appointees who are linked with the Moody interests—a newspaper, printing, hotel, insurance and cotton compress syndicate.

"I asked him kiddingly if he was now in cahoots with the Moody interests," Kirkpatrick said. "That's when he blew his top."

"I'm not in cahoots with anybody," he quoted Clough. "I'm mayor and I run this town. You're a damn liar if you say I'm not."

If you say I am a damn liar, then you are a damn liar," Kirkpatrick answered.

The mayor called police, and a policeman ushered Kirkpatrick to jail.

When the Galveston News asked Clough for his version of the incident, the mayor snapped: "You better watch what you print about me. There are libel laws, you know."

FBI Continues Search For Mob In Lynching Case

POPLARVILLE, Miss. (UPI)—The FBI and other law enforcement agencies appartntly plan to keep the lynching of Negro M.C. Parker under active investigation indefinitely, it appeared Saturday.

Officials here said they would not be surprised if the FBI keeps a large force of agents here working on the case "all summer" if necessary.

There were rumors of increased activity by the investigators and talk that a break in the case might be near, but nothing from official sources to indicate more than continuing painstaking police work.

The 23-year-old Negro, accused of raping a pregnant white woman, was dragged screaming from a cell in the Pearl River County Jail two weeks ago Saturday. Nine or 10 masked white men, wearing white gloves, broke into the unguarded jail shortly after midnight, obtained the keys and took Parker from his cell.

The Negro was beaten savagely and dragged heels first down three flights of stairs to a waiting car.

His body was found last Monday in the Pearl River, along the Louisiana border, 20 miles west of here.

WEST CONSIDERS DEFENSE

Reds Threaten Berlin Again On Blockade's 10 Birthday

BERLIN (AP)—Down came the barriers one minute after midnight. It was May 12, 1949. The Soviet blockade of West Berlin was broken.

On this 10th anniversary—when the Soviets once again menace Berlin—Western statesmen are recalling the lessons of the 318-day blockade and the Allied airlift that smashed it.

For inspiration and methods to defend West Berlin today, they look back on the struggle of men and women who defeated a similar Red challenge against incomparably greater odds.

The Soviets began their historic effort to starve 2,200,000 West Berliners into submission with a casual announcement in the early hours of June 24, 1948: "Due to a technical difficulty on the rail line, the Soviet military transport command has been compelled to halt passenger and freight traffic between Berlin and Helmstedt."

Soviet barriers sealed the 110-mile rail-highway corridor linking West Berlin to West Germany.

The land blockade was on. Why? West Berlin was a giant pawn, as it may be today, in a Soviet master plan to halt the build-up of Western Germany.

Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky, the Soviet military governor of Germany, bluntly stated the price for lifting the blockade: the United States, Britain and France must give up their program for currency reform in West Germany and the creation of a freely elected independent government.

Alternatively, as a consolation prize, the Soviets wanted to absorb this freedom citadel, 110 miles behind the Iron Curtain.

The blockade caught the Western Allies completely unprepared. Many Allied officials — including some top U.S. government figures —thought it best to write off Berlin and get out quickly from the militarily indefensible city.

In the Western sectors, there were 3,000 U.S. troops, 2,000 British and 1,500 French stacked against 18,000 Soviet troops in the Eastern sector and another 300,000 parked all around in East Germany.

The Western powers had dismantled their great World War II fighting machine. The Soviets had retained theirs.

The Red army was convinced West Berlin could not be provisioned by air and the Allies would be compelled to abandon the city within weeks.

There was less than a month's supply of food and fuel in West Berlin. The Soviets shortly were to cut off the bulk of the city's electricity supply.

The Soviets sought to panic the West Berliners with Communist mob action, kidnaping of pro-West Germans, propaganda threats.

As the Western governments hesitated, the U.S. governor of Germany, Gen. Lucius Clay acted.

Once convinced that the West Berliners would stick it, Clay got on the telephone to Gen. Curtis LeMay at U.S. Air Force headquarters, Wiesbaden, West Germany.

"Curt," snapped Clay, "Can you transport coal by air?"

Scraping together some old B17 bombers and beat up two-engined C47 "Gooney Birds," LeMay pulled spare pilots off desk jobs and got going.

On June 26—just 48 hours after the blockade began—a handful of "Gooney Birds" roared off West German airfields toward Berlin.

In those first desperate hours, few dared hope that the airlift could bring in the 3,000 tons of supplies needed daily by the West Berliners and 500 tons required for the Allied community.

On June 28, there was a meeting in the White House to decide if the United States would stand fast in Berlin.

President Truman heard the divived views of his advisors and then ruled: "We are in Berlin by terms of an agreement and the Russians have no right to get us out by either direct or indirect pressures."

To back up his decision, Truman played America's only trump. He ordered two groups of the atomic B29 superfortresses to Britain.

Allied hopes centered on the airlift. The day after the White House meeting the Air Force hauled 385 tons by plane. It figured that within four weeks this could be raised to 1,500 tons each 24 hours. It envisioned the airlift as an operation that would last no more than 45 days.

As the blockade continued, the airlift shifted into high gear. The "Gooney Birds" with their 2½ ton capacities were replaced with C45 Skymasters carrying 10-ton loads, and big British Tudor and York transports.

The world's most modern radar apparatus was set up on the American airfield Tempelhof and the British strip Gatow to guide transports.

A third airfield at Tegel in the French sector was carved out of swampland.

The French city commandant, Gen. Jean Ganeval, blew up the transmission tower of the Soviet-run Radio Berlin when he found it was endangering the approach to Tegel.

The airlift—dubbed "Operation Vittles" by the Americans and "Operation Planefare" by the British — went forward day and night.

The Americans carried in 77 per cent of the net tonnage and the British 23 per cent.

Sometimes the transports were harassed by buzzing Soviet fighters or Red army anti-aircraft and gunnery practice. But the Soviets backed off when the Allies warned they would send fighter escorts if necessary.

On April 16, 1949, the miracle of air and ground organization that went into the airlift achieved its ultimate. On that day, an airlift transport carrying an average 10-ton load landed in West Berlin every 63 seconds. About 12,000 tons of supplies were delivered in 1,383 flights.

The Soviets knew they were licked.

The airlift not only met the survival needs of the West Berliners, it spurred the recovery of their city. A close bond was forged between the population and the Allies that Red propaganda could not weaken.

Instead of hampering the recovery of West Germany, the stand at Berlin encouraged the rehabilitation of the new republic.

At the same time, the recovery of satellite East Germany was crippled by the counterblockade instituted by the Allies against the whole Soviet zone. Soviet prestige dropped.

At the United Nations, Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik suddenly became conciliatory. Through secret negotiations Malik and U. S. Ambassador Philip Jessup ended the blockade.

Next Tuesday, the Allied leaders who broke the Berlin blockade will gather in West Berlin to commemorate the 10th anniversary of their triumph.

The West Berliners will honor the memory of the 40 British airmen, 31 Americans and 5 Germans who died in airlift operations. A foundation will be dedicated for the education of their children at West Berlin schools.

When men like Clay and his U. S. Berlin commandant, Gen. Frank L. Howley, return to their old battleground, they will dwell on how much better West Berlin is prepared today to face another Soviet blockade.

The reconstructed city is prosperous, its people well-fed and adequately housed. Morale is high. Communist agitators have been rooted out. There is a stockpile of a year's supply of food, fuel and other necessities.

For another possible airlift, the United States and its Allies have new big air transports capable of carrying up to 50 tons.

But some things about Berlin have not changed.

When the Soviets first mounted their nerve war against Berlin in 1948 and the Western governments wavered, Clay declared: "If Berlin falls, Western Germany will be next. If we mean to hold Europe against communism, we must not budge."

This is one echo out of the past that the Western foreign ministers may remember when they sit down Monday in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to talk about the future of Berlin.

Toolbox Can Be Useful In Work Of Nuns

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—A toolbox isn't standard equipment for a nun, but Mother Mary Agnes of the Scared Heart Manor for the Aged finds hers juat the thing for her work—particularly when the manor's oil burner is acting up.

Mother Agnes, a member of the Carmelite order and superior of the home for the elderly, has a lot of bills to pay on the new building the home now occupies.

And it costs a good deal of money to porvide the "kind, loving care" prescribed by the order for the aged residents.

So when the oil burner went out of kilter and repair men couldn't seem to find the trouble, Mother Agnes took a hand.

The trouble was three-fold. Great billows of black smoke poured from the chimney, parts of the manor were not getting any heat, and one of the glass-enclosed thermostats on the big burner didn't work.

Mother Mary Agnes attacked the thermostat first. She rolled up the sleeves of her habit and poked around until she found a loose connection leading to it. Her tool kit didn't have anything to fix that, so she dug down into her pocket and came up with an adhesive bandage. Mother Agnes wrapped it firmly around the loose connection. Sure enough, it worked.

That victory behind her, Mother Agnes investigated the burner further. She found the smoke was black because a pre-heat switch hadn't been thrown to warm the oil. And the reason some parts of the building weren't getting enough heat was that workmen's jackets, hanging on switchboxes, had pulled the switches and cut off the flow of heat to certain areas.

After that, Mother Agnes began watching the serviceman who checked the burner each month. She also sent to the factory for a book of instructions. After the serviceman's final visit last spring, she took over the work of caring for the burner. The manor's 165 residents were comfortably warm all through the past winter, and Mother Agnes saved the $125 yearly maintenance fee.

McCall To Seek Office Of State Insurance Chief

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Harley McCall, independent Lake Charles insurance agent, Saturday announced his candidacy for state insurance commissioner.

McCall said Rufus Hayes, the state's present insurance commissioner, is a lawyer, has no insurance experienced and "caters to the out-of-state insurance companies who do most of the liability business in the state."

McCall also criticized the inequities in liability insurance rates from one district of the state to another. In some parts of the state, he said, rates run as high as $150 while a person pays around $50 for the same coverage in another section of the state.

LOOK SHARP

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Maxwell Distenfeld was taking a little nap before dinner when his 11-year-old daugnter Krissie, who had been watching television, tiptoed into the bedroom and pattied him gently on the cheek.

When Dad asked Krissie what she wanted, she replied: "I just wanted to know whether you have a medium or a heavy beard."

Tempers Flare In Galveston Mayor's Office

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — Portly Mayor George Roy Clough, livid with rage, had a reporter who asked embarrassing questions thrown in jail Friday.

Joe Kirkpatrick, 32, Galveston bureau chief for the Houston Chronicle, was charged with disturbing the peace. He spent an hour in jail before he was released in $250 bail for trial in city court Monday.

Clough, 69, seeks reelection to a third term Tuesday. He is opposed by four candidates.

The mayor accused Kirkpatrick of implying he was "in cahoots" with somebody. He called the reporter a liar, and Kirkpatrick then called the mayor a liar.

The dispute started when Kirkpatrick, who had been investigating reports of individuals making private purchases through the municipal Stewart Beach Board for their own use, went to the mayor's office with Joe Halstead, news director for radio station KILE in Galveston.

Kirkpatrick said he had been examining vouchers to see if the money for private purchases had been repaid, and was questioning Clough about them.

He said he then asked the mayor about the legality of two Galveston Wharf Board appointees who are linked with the Moody interests—a newspaper, printing, hotel, insurance and cotton compress syndicate.

"I asked him kiddingly if he was now in cahoots with the Moody interests," Kirkpatrick said. "That's when he blew his top."

"I'm not in cahoots with anybody," he quoted Clough. "I'm mayor and I run this town. You're a damn liar if you say I'm not."

If you say I am a damn liar, then you are a damn liar," Kirkpatrick answered.

The mayor called police, and a policeman ushered Kirkpatrick to jail.

When the Galveston News asked Clough for his version of the incident, the mayor snapped: "You better watch what you print about me. There are libel laws, you know."

FBI Continues Search For Mob In Lynching Case

POPLARVILLE, Miss. (UPI)— The FBI and other law enforcement agencies appartntly plan to keep the lynching of Negro M.C. Parker under active investigation indefinitely, it appeared Saturday.

Officials here said they would not be surprised if the FBI keeps a large force of agents here working on the case "all summer" if necessary.

There were rumors of increased activity by the investigators and talk that a break in the case might be near, but nothing from official sources to indicate more than continuing painstaking police work.

U.S. Oil Imports Show Big Decline

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Oilmen continue to debate wisdom of federal controls but oil imports have dropped sharply since mandatory cutbacks became effective two months ago.

The program still is in its shakedown stage. Canada and Mexico were added to the exempt list last week. Other changes and modifications have been indicated.

Total imports have dropped over 1,000,000 barrels a day since President Eisenhower issued his mandatory controls order on March 10.

Total imports the week ending March 6 averaged a record 2,629,000 barrels a day. The average for the four-week period ending on the same date was a record 2,195,500.

Last week's average was only 1,441,200 barrels a day.

Two major company executives this week predicted the mandatory program, like its voluntary predecessor, will fail. H. S. M. Burns, president of Shell Oil Co., and Robert G. Dunlop, president of Sun Oil Co., said an increased tariff would be the most effective means of controlling imports.

A third executive, K. S. Adams, board chairman for Phillips Petroleum Co., said the mandatory program is sound in seeking to maintain a vigorous domestic industry but has some serious inequities.

Burns predicted the compulsory program will fall on its own weight. He suggested an increased tariff of about $1 a barrel on imports in excess of 10 per cent of an importer's refinery runs.

Dunlop recommended no specific rate but repeated a 1956 opinion that the traditional tariff route would be the most practical, the easiest to administer and the fairest way to approach the problem.

Adams said the mandatory plan apparently has planted the seeds of what may prove another important benefit—steps toward conservation of crude oil by producing countries throughout the free world.

He said, however, that two inequities need correcting. He said current quotas favor the large historic importers and are unfair to companies which are just beginning to develop large foreign reserves.

He also objected to quotas being determined by a sliding scale.

"The smallest refiners are allowed 12 per cent of their 1958 average throughput, the largest only 4 per cent of their throughput in excess of 300,000 barrels per day," he said. "This is an evident discrimination against the big companies."

Grain Futures Prices Continue General Decline

CHICAGO (AP)—Several times this week grain futures dealers thought they were doing business at bargain prices on the Board of Trade but the market generally extended its decline.

Bullishness was scarce and of little or no long-range significance. Commercial demand was almost absent with export sales dropping to a dribble.

The heavy rainfall several days ago was the strongest brake on the market and overbalanced a reliable private bullish estimate the wheat yield this year on the basis of conditions May 1.

The moisture which drowned out any likelihood of a widespread drouth over mhch of the great plains for some time caused general selling of the small grains.

Wheat and rye lead the declines in new crop contracts but May wheat for the fourth successive week was the biggest loser on the board. Since it hit a new high for the season of $2.12⅞ only five weeks ago, the contract began a steady steep slide which at one time went to a new season low of $1.88½ on Friday.

Wheat closed the week 2-3⅝ cents a bushel lower than a week ago, May $1.89½-¾; corn ⅛-¾ lower, May $1.24⅝-¾; oats ¾ higher to ¾ lower, May 66⅞; rye ¼-2¼ lower, May $1.39¾; soybeans ⅛-1⅜ higher, May $2.30¼-⅜.

UNDER U.S. FARM LAW

Farmer's Prices Can't Rise Much

WASHINGTON (AP) — Much is being said pro and con these days about government support of farm prices. Costs of the supports have placed the whole farm program under a cloud of criticism.

But little is known or said about government price ceilings under which agriculture exists, often to its disadvantage.

Under farm law as it now reads, many farm products can't go up very much even if economic factors otherwise would dictate an advance.

The power of the government to put a spotter on advancing prices exists in its control over surpluses. The government is permitted to sell its surpluses on the domestic market at 105 per cent of the price support rate, plus handling charges.

Thus a commodity that is supported at 75 per cent of parity has little or no chance of climbing much above 83 per cent of parity. This is the case even though the declared goal of the farm programs is to lift farm prices to the parity price level.

Parity is a standard for measuring farm prices declared by law to be fair to farmers in relation to prices charged them.

Consider wheat for example. The support rate averages 75 per cent of parity or $1.81 a bushel. The government is free to sell all the wheat it wants at around $2 a bushel. Thus, this grain has no chance of climbing to the parity level of $2.35 a bushel as long as the government has stocks to sell.

In other words, the government becomes a competitor of the farmer when prices start rising much above the support level.

This power to set ceilings, although indirect, exists also in the case of butter, cheese, dried milk, cotton, cottonseed oil, peanuts, corn, oats, barley, grain sorghums dry beans, flaxseed, tobacco, soybeans, gum rosin, gum turpentine, tung oil and honey.

Under this system, the lower that supports are set, the lower the ceilings may be placed.

Much criticism of this situation is being voiced among farmstate lawmakers.

The supports are designed to protect the producer against disastrous declines in prices. The power of the government to sell to keep prices from going too high is designed to protect consumers against excessive prices and shortages.

But some lawmakers contend that the price at which the government may sell its surpluses is too low from the standpoint of establishing and maintaining a stable and prosperous agriculture.

Some would place the government's selling price at full parity, the same price as that set for the goal of farm programs.

The government has an even more effective weapon in holding down farm prices when it comes to the export market. It may sell its surpluses at any price, even less than the support price. In the case of some products, it is doing that very thing. These low prices offered in export markets cannot help but affect prices farmers get in the domestic market.

Profits Gain For Olin In First Quarter

EAST ALTON, Ill., (Special)—Sales of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation in the United States and Canada increased 25 per cent and net profits rose 43 per cent in first quarter of 1959, compared with the same period in 1958.

At the annual shareholders' meeting here, Thomas S. Nichols, chairman, and Stanley de J Osborne, president, reported that net sales and operating revenues is the first quarter of this year were $159,909,000, compared with $127,625,000 in the first three months of 1958.

The Chemicals, Packaging and Winchester-Western Divisions showed substantial improvement in both sales and earnings during the three - month period of this year. The brass fabricating operations of the Metals Division also improved sharply because of increased activity in the automotive and appliance industries. The Squibb Division maintained satisfactory levels, and operations in the Energy Division improved.

TOTAL

Net profits totaled $6,395,000, or $.48 per share, in this year's quarter, compared with net profits of $4,473,000, or $.33 per share, after non - recurring charges, in the first quarter of 1958. The gain in net profits resulted in spite of continuing losses of the corporation's new aluminum rolling mill at Omal, Ohio.

Shareholders were told of the progress made in the corporation's aluminum operations during the first quarter. All of the jointly - owned primary aluminum facilities of Ormet Corporation are now in full operation. The fifth and last potline of the reduction plant began production in January. The third and final electric generating unit went into production in March.

Completion of other new facilities, including the new paper machine at Pisgah Forest, N. C., the chemical plants in Joliet, Ill., the government - owned high energy fuels plant at Model City, N. Y., and the corrugated container plants of the Packaging Division, is proceeding on schedule.

Cotton Futures Hold To Narrow Range For Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures held to a narrow range this week and closed with more deliveries in slightly higher ground. Active contracts on the New York cotton exchange finished at prices ranging from 85 cents a bale higher than a week ago to 10 cents lower.

Distant October was the only contract to show a net loss. At their best levels, the March, May and July contracts of 1960 scored new life-of-contract highs.

Trading was characterized by a lack of incentives to buy or sell.

The spot month was steady on prompt stoppage of notices. Demand for nearby July was spurred by its relatively low price. Some traders purchased new crop futures against sales to mills at fixed prices for the coming season.

A small amount of selling was attributed to extremely favorable weather reports from parts of the cotton belt. Other offerings were confined mostly to light hedge selling and profit taking.

Exports of U.S. cotton for the week ended May 5 were estimated by the New York Cotton Exchange at 46,000 bales against 45,000 the previous week and 117,000 in the like 1958 week. This brought the total for the season to an estimated 2,168,000 bales, compared with 4,371,000 at the same time last year.

11 Wells Finaled During Week In Shreveport Area

Eleven oil and gas wells were completed in the Shreveport district during the past week and eight wells were plugged and abandoned, C. H. McDuff, district division manager of the Louisiana Conservation Department, said yesterday.

Gulf Oil Corp. completed its No. 1 English et al Unit A in the Lisbon Field of Caddo Parish, s15-21-5, for a flow of 181.23 barrels of 29.5 barrels of oil from 5,212 feet.

Harvey Broyles-Walter S. Grant completed their No. 1 S. E. Johnson Unit in Caddo Parish, s20-14-15, for an open flow of 16,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily and 10.6 barrels of oil daily per million cubic feet of gas. Production is from 5,500.

TRADE INDICATORS POINTING UP

Consumer Spending Wave Puts New Zip In Business

NEW YORK (AP)—Fast-paced consumer spending on new homes, new cars and almost anything else you could name put new zip this week in the nation's comeback from recession.

Just about all the major indicators pointed up.

Folks who like to worry could find the usual quote of uncertainties and doubts. The current crop included strike talk in the steel industry, scattered pockets of unemployment, the continuing lag in U.S. exports, and the decision of the big U.S. automakers to start building small "compact" cars this fall.

There was talk, too, of a general summer letdown after strike-hedge buying of steel and other commodities has run its course.

But if Mr. and Mrs. American Consumer were worried, they gave no sign.

Ward's Automotive Reports said new car sales soared to 503,890 last month, making April the first month since June 1957 to beat the half-million mark. Auto manufacturers responded by rolling out 136,650 carsthis week, a new 1959 high and a whopping increase of 87 per cent over the same week last year.

Chain and department stores reported sales increases. April sales of Sears, Roebuck & Co. set a new record and topped the same month last year by nearly 12 per cent; Montgomery Ward's April business was up a hefty 14 per cent. The Federal Reserve Board said department store sales in the 12 Federal Reserve districts in the week ended May 2 bettered the year-ago total by 8 per cent.

The spring surge in home building prompted economists to raise their sights for 1959 — they now look for a total of 1,300,000 new homes to be started. The only worry here is that banks and other lending institutions may run short of mortgage money.

Outlays for all kinds of construction jumped last month to a record of nearly 4¼ billion dollars. The total for 1959 is projected at 54¼ billion, compared to 49 billion in 1958, despite the fact that school construction is falling off as home owners balk at tax increases.

Another sign of upturn: Salesmen who peddle everything from soap to encyclopedias door-to-door say business is up 6 per cent over last year.

Optimism was the keynote this week as top leaders of government and industry met at Hot Springs, Va., for the spring conference of the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council.

Some—notably the federal government's chief economists—were more optimistic than others. The economists predicted at least 12 months more of rising prosperity with the nation's output of goods and services touching an annual rate of 490 billion dollars a year in the final 1959 quarter.

Other conferees, including heads of some of the biggest U.S. corporations, were more restrained. While agreeing that recovery will continue, they warned that there are a couple of big "if's" in the economic picture.

For one thing, they said, there's no way of knowing what will happtn to the auto market when General Motors, Ford and Chrysler come out with their new "compact" cars.

Another big "if" for just about everybody this week wos the steel strike question. Union and management negotiators, meeting in New York, accused each other of promoting inflation and plotting an industry-wide shutdown. Chief target of the union's ire was a management proposal that the companies come to each other's assistance if just one or two of them are closed by a strike. President Eisenhower warned both sides to avoid another inflationary wage-price surge. Otherwise, he hinted, the government may step in. For all the bitter charges and counter charges, the first week of negotiations ended on a hopeful note. The preliminary talks were "very constructive," the negotiators said, and both sides are ready to get down to give-and-take bargaining Monday.

The stock market this week behaved like a roller coaster. Space age and other so-called glamor stocks reached for the moon; some returned to earth in a whirlwind plunge that left brokers and investors gasping. Wall Street experts said the boom in space stocks had little substance behind it. Said one broker: "It was based mainly on psychology, hope for the future, and hot air."

Stock sales in the latest week totaled 18,993,800 shares compared to 17,775,705 shares in the previous week and 14,103,810 in the same week last year. Bond sales had a par value of $31,884,600 in the latest week against $29,587,500 in the week before and $24,163,500 in the corresponding 1958 week.

Briefly over the business scene: Tuition at U.S. colleges this fall will be up an average of 9 per cent over last year. It now costs twice as much to send junior to college as it did in 1940, and the cost is expected to double again in the next 10 years. . .Companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange paid out 2¼ billion dollars in cash dividends over the first 1958 quarter. . .Popular priced men's shoes are expected to cost a dollar a pair more this fall than in the fall of 1958. . .Sales of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. topped the five billion-dollar mark in fiscal 1958-59. . .Walter F. Munford, a former open hearth worker, was named president of United States Steel Corp., the nation's largest steel producer.

FASTER THAN ANTICIPATED

Business Rising At Swift Pace

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Business, rising far faster than the most optimistic prophets had anticipated, now is making stock prices respectable.

It's a kind of repayment in gratitude to the market's confidence in business a little more than a year ago.

The market, it will be recalled, predicted the business recovery. It said in its way that the recovery would be swift. The experts said it would be slow.

The market's exhuberance brought prices up to levels where on the basis of earnings of the companies they were fantastically high in many instances.

And some said the prices lacked respectability.

Now business is recovering as rapidly as the stock market had foreseen. Earnings are rising sharply. Records will be set overall. Dividends will be boosted. By the year end dividends are expected to be running at a record rate.

As corporate earnings rise the prices of stocks even at their current high levels are more in line with the facts of market life. And as dividends rise yields will rise to more nearly normal levels.

Now the problem is how long can this go on?

The stock market doesn't rise to high levels simply because business is good. Its function is to forecast the feature. It will rise if the collective mind that is behind the market thinks business will continue to rise in the future. It will decline if there is prospect of business levelling off or declining.

Market experts right now think business gains will continue for some time. Some say through 1960. Some say longer. Therefore, they assert, the market has more bullish force left.

Edmund W. Tabell, research partner of the brokerage house of Walston & Co., rated in Wall Street as an outstanding market expert has this to say:

"I believe that the present advancing phase in the stock market that started in October-December 1957 at around the 420 level in the Dow-Jones industrial average will continue into 1960-1961 and will reach a level around 800 — give or take 5 per cent in either direction."

Stocks Down Slightly For Second Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Space age stocks reached a kind of climax this week as the stock market endured a sharp shakeout and took a loss for the second straight week.

The week ended with a rally and a partial recovery but not enough to rescue the list from a decline.

Volume climbed to 18,993,800 shares from 17,775,705 the week before and was the largest since the 21,993,800 in the week ended March 21.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks fell $1.70 to $225.50, its steepest decline since the week ended March 28 when it dropped $2.10.

The week's decline, Wall Street analysts said, was well within the upward trend line of the current bull market. They regarded it chiefly as a technical correction of a type which must be expected from time to time.

The so-called "glamor" stocks displayed unusual pyrotechnics early in the week while the rest of the market did little or nothing. The electronics, rocket fuels, missiles, radio, televisions and photographic issues dominated trading for the first three days.

Their advance waxed to a grand climax Wednesday which saw their broadest rise within memory.

Thursday witnessed a temporary follow-through to the rise. Then waves of selling hit the market.

U.S. Oil Imports Show Big Decline

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Oilmen continue to debate wisdom of federal controls but oil imports have dropped sharply since mandatory cutbacks became effective two months ago.

The program still is in its shakedown stage. Canada and Mexico were added to the exempt list last week. Other changes and modifications have been indicated.

Total imports have dropped over 1,000,000 barrels a day since President Eisenhower issued his mandatory controls order on March 10.

Total imports the week ending March 6 averaged a record 2,629,000 barrels a day. The average for the four-week period ending on the same date was a record 2,195,500.

Last week's average was only 1,441,200 barrels a day.

Two major company executives this week predicted the mandatory program, like its voluntary predecessor, will fail. H. S. M. Burns, president of Shell Oil Co., and Robert G. Dunlop, president of Sun Oil Co., said an increased tariff would be the most effective means of controlling imports.

A third executive, K. S. Adams, board chairman for Phillips Petroleum Co., said the mandatory program is sound in seeking to maintain a vigorous domestic industry but has some serious inequities.

Burns predicted the compulsory program will fall on its own weight. He suggested an increased tariff of about $1 a barrel on imports in excess of 10 per cent of an importer's refinery runs.

Dunlop recommended no specific rate but repeated a 1956 opinion that the traditional tariff route would be the most practical, the easiest to administer and the fairest way to approach the problem.

Adams said the mandatory plan apparently has planted the seeds of what may prove another important benefit—steps toward conservation of crude oil by producing countries throughout the free world.

He said, however, that two inequities need correcting. He said current quotas favor the large historic importers and are unfair to companies which are just beginning to develop large foreign reserves.

He also objected to quotas being determined by a sliding scale.

"The smallest refiners are allowed 12 per cent of their 1958 average throughput, the largest only 4 per cent of their throughput in excess of 300,000 barrels per day," he said. "This is an evident discrimination against the big companies."

Grain Futures Prices Continue General Decline

CHICAGO (AP)—Several times this week grain futures dealers thought they were doing business at bargain prices on the Board of Trade but the market generally extended its decline.

Bullishness was scarce and of little or no long-range significance. Commercial demand was almost absent with export sales dropping to a dribble.

The heavy rainfall several days ago was the strongest brake on the market and overbalanced a reliable private bullish estimate the wheat yield this year on the basis of conditions May 1.

The moisture which drowned out any likelihood of a widespread drouth over mhch of the great plains for some time caused general selling of the small grains.

Wheat and rye lead the declines in new crop contracts but May wheat for the fourth successive week was the biggest loser on the board. Since it hit a new high for the season of $2.12⅜ only five weeks ago, the contract began a steady steep slide which at one time went to a new season low of $1.88½ on Friday.

Wheat closed the week 2-3⅜ cents a bushel lower than a week ago, May $1.89½-¾; corn ⅛-¾ lower, May $1.24⅝-¾; oats ¾ higher to ¾ lower, May 66⅞; rye ¼-2¼ lower, May $1.39¾; soybeans ⅛-1⅜ higher, May $2.30¼-⅜.

UNDER U.S. FARM LAW

Farmer's Prices Can't Rise Much

WASHINGTON (AP) — Much is being said pro and con these days about government support of farm prices. Costs of the supports have placed the whole farm program under a cloud of criticism.

But little is known or said about government price ceilings under which agriculture exists, often to its disadvantage.

Under farm law as it now reads, many farm products can't go up very much even if economic factors otherwise would dictate an advance.

The power of the government to put a spotter on advancing prices exists in its control over surpluses. The government is permitted to sell its surpluses on the domestic market at 105 per cent of the price support rate, plus handling charges.

Thus a commodity that is supported at 75 per cent of parity has little or no chance of climbing much above 83 per cent of parity. This is the case even though the declared goal of the farm programs is to lift farm prices to the parity price level.

Parity is a standard for measuring farm prices declared by law to be fair to farmers in relation to prices charged them.

Consider wheat for example. The support rate averages 75 per cent of parity or $1.81 a bushel. The government is free to sell all the wheat it wants at around $2 a bushel. Thus, this grain has no chance of climbing to the parity level of $2.35 a bushel as long as the government has stocks to sell.

In other words, the government becomes a competitor of the farmer when prices start rising much above the support level.

This power to set ceilings, although indirect, exists also in the case of butter, cheese, dried milk, cotton, cottonseed oil, peanuts, corn, oats, barley, grain sorghums dry beans, flaxseed, tobacco, soybeans, gum rosin, gum turpentine, tung oil and honey.

Under this system, the lower that supports are set, the lower the ceilings may be placed.

Much criticism of this situation is being voiced among farmstate lawmakers.

The supports are designed to protect the producer against disastrous declines in prices. The power of the government to sell to keep prices from going too high is designed to protect consumers against excessive prices and shortages.

But some lawmakers contend that the price at which the government may sell its surpluses is too low from the standpoint of establishing and maintaining a stable and prosperous agriculture.

Some would place the government's selling price at full parity, the same price as that set for the goal of farm programs.

The government has an even more effective weapon in holding down farm prices when it comes to the export market. It may sell its surpluses at any price, even less than the support price. In the case of some products, it is doing that very thing. These low prices offered in export markets cannot help but affect prices farmers get in the domestic market.

Cotton Futures Hold To Narrow Range For Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures held to a narrow range this week and closed with more deliveries in slightly higher ground. Active contracts on the New York cotton exchange finished at prices ranging from 85 cents a bale higher than a week ago to 10 cents lower.

Distant October was the only contract to show a net loss. At their best levels, the March, May and July contracts of 1960 scored new life-of-contract highs.

Trading was characterized by a lack of incentives to buy or sell.

The spot month was steady on prompt stoppage of notices. Demand for nearby July was spurred by its relatively low price. Some traders purchased new crop futures against sales to mills at fixed prices for the coming season.

A small amount of selling was attributed to extremely favorable weather reports from parts of the cotton belt. Other offerings were confined mostly to light hedge selling and profit taking.

Exports of U.S. cotton for the week ended May 5 were estimated by the New York Cotton Exchange at 46,000 bales against 45,000 the previous week and 117,000 in the like 1958 week. This brought the total for the season to an estimated 2,168,000 bales, compared with 4,371,000 at the same time last year.

Profits Gain For Olin In First Quarter

EAST ALTON, Ill., (Special)—Sales of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation in the United States and Canada increased 25 per cent and net profits rose 43 per cent in first quarter of 1959, compared with the same period in 1958.

At the annual shareholders' meeting here, Thomas S. Nichols, chairman, and Stanley de J Osborne, president, reported that net sales and operating revenues is the first quarter of this year were $159,909,000, compared with $127,625,000 in the first three months of 1958.

The Chemicals, Packaging and Winchester-Western Divisions showed substantial improvement in both sales and earnings during the three - month period of this year. The brass fabricating operations of the Metals Division also improved sharply because of increased activity in the automotive and appliance industries. The Squibb Division maintained satisfactory levels, and operations in the Energy Division improved.

TOTAL

Net profits totaled $6,395,000, or $.48 per share, in this year's quarter, compared with net profits of $4,473,000, or $.33 per share, after non - recurring charges, in the first quarter of 1958. The gain in net profits resulted in spite of continuing losses of the corporation's new aluminum rolling mill at Omal, Ohio.

Shareholders were told of the progress made in the corporation's aluminum operations during the first quarter. All of the jointly - owned primary aluminum facilities of Ormet Corporation are now in full operation. The fifth and last potline of the reduction plant began production in January. The third and final electric generating unit went into production in March.

Completion of other new facilities, including the new paper machine at Pisgah Forest, N. C., the chemical plants in Joliet, Ill., the government - owned high energy fuels plant at Model City, N. Y., and the corrugated container plants of the Packaging Division, is proceeding on schedule.

TRADE INDICATORS POINTING UP

Consumer Spending Wave Puts New Zip In Business

NEW YORK (AP)—Fast-paced consumer spending on new homes, new cars and almost anything else you could name put new zip this week in the nation's comeback from recession.

Just about all the major indicators pointed up.

Folks who like to worry could find the usual quote of uncertainties and doubts. The current crop included strike talk in the steel industry, scattered pockets of unemployment, the continuing lag in U.S. exports, and the decision of the big U.S. automakers to start building small "compact" cars this fall.

There was talk, too, of a general summer letdown after strike-hedge buying of steel and other commodities has run its course.

But if Mr. and Mrs. American Consumer were worried, they gave no sign.

Ward's Automotive Reports said new car sales soared to 503,890 last month, making April the first month since June 1957 to beat the half-million mark. Auto manufacturers responded by rolling out 136,650 carsthis week, a new 1959 high and a whopping increase of 87 per cent over the same week last year.

Chain and department stores reported sales increases. April sales of Sears, Roebuck & Co. set a new record and topped the same month last year by nearly 12 per cent; Montgomery Ward's April business was up a hefty 14 per cent. The Federal Reserve Board said department store sales in the 12 Federal Reserve districts in the week ended May 2 bettered the year-ago total by 8 per cent.

The spring surge in home building prompted economists to raise their sights for 1959 — they now look for a total of 1,300,000 new homes to be started. The only worry here is that banks and other lending institutions may run short of mortgage money.

Outlays for all kinds of construction jumped last month to a record of nearly 4¼ billion dollars. The total for 1959 is projected at 54¼ billion, compared to 49 billion in 1958, despite the fact that school construction is falling off as home owners balk at tax increases.

Another sign of upturn: Sakesmen who peddle everything from soap to encyclopedias door-to-door say business is up 6 per cent over last year.

Optimism was the keynote this week as top leaders of government and industry met at Hot Springs, Va., for the spring conference of the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council.

Some—notably the federal government's chief economists—were more optimistic than others. The economists predicted at least 12 months more of rising prosperity with the nation's output of goods and services touching an annual rate of 490 billion dollars a year in the final 1959 quarter.

Other conferees, including heads of some of the biggest U.S. corporations, were more restrained. While agreeing that recovery will continue, they warned that there are a couple of big "if's" in the economic picture.

For one thing, they said, there's no way of knowing what will happtn to the auto market when General Motors, Ford and Chrysler come out with their new "compact" cars.

Another big "if" for just about everybody this week wos the steel strike question. Union and management negotiators, meeting in New York, accused each other of promoting inflation and plotting an industry-wide shutdown. Chief target of the union's ire was a management proposal that the companies come to each other's assistance if just one or two of them are closed by a strike. President Eisenhower warned both sides to avoid another inflationary wage-price surge. Otherwise, he hinted, the government may step in. For all the bitter charges and counter charges, the first week of negotiations ended on a hopeful note. The preliminary talks were "very constructive," the negotiators said, and both sides are ready to get down to give-and-take bargaining Monday.

The stock market this week behaved like a roller coaster. Space age and other so-called glamor stocks reached for the moon; some returned to earth in a whirlwind plunge that left brokers and investors gasping. Wall Street experts said the boom in space stocks had little substance behind it. Said one broker: "It was based mainly on psychology, hope for the future, and hot air."

Stock sales in the latest week totaled 18,993,800 shares compared to 17,775,705 shares in the previous week and 14,103,810 in the same week last year. Bond sales had a par value of $31,884,600 in the latest week against $29,587,500 in the week before and $24,163,500 in the corresponding 1958 week.

Briefly over the business scene: Tuition at U.S. colleges this fall will be up an average of 9 per cent over last year. It now costs twice as much to send junior to college as it did in 1940, and the cost is expected to double again in the next 10 years. . .Companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange paid out 2¼ billion dollars in cash dividends over the first 1958 quarter. . .Popular priced men's shoes are expected to cost a dollar a pair more this fall than in the fall of 1958. . . Sales of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. topped the five billion-dollar mark in fiscal 1958-59. . .Walter F. Munford, a former open hearth worker, was named president of United States Steel Corp., the nation's largest steel producer.

FASTER THAN ANTICIPATED

Business Rising At Swift Pace

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Business, rising far faster than the most optimistic prophets had anticipated, now is making stock prices respectable.

It's a kind of repayment in gratitude to the market's confidence in business a little more than a year ago.

The market, it will be recalled, predicted the business recovery. It said in its way that the recovery would be swift. The experts said it would be slow.

The market's exhuberance brought prices up to levels where on the basis of earnings of the companies they were fantastically high in many instances.

And some said the prices lacked respectability.

Now business is recovering as rapidly as the stock market had foreseen. Earnings are rising sharply. Records will be set overall. Dividends will be boosted. By the year end dividends are expected to be running at a record rate.

As corporate earnings rise the prices of stocks even at their current high levels are more in line with the facts of market life. And as dividends rise yields will rise to more nearly normal levels.

Now the problem is how long can this go on?

The stock market doesn't rise to high levels simply because business is good. Its function is to forecast the feature. It will rise if the collective mind that is behind the market thinks business will continue to rise in the future. It will decline if there is prospect of business levelling off or declining.

Market experts right now think business gains will continue for some time. Some say through 1960. Some say longer. Therefore, they assert, the market has more bullish force left.

Edmund W. Tabell, research partner of the brokerage house of Walston & Co., rated in Wall Street as an outstanding market expert has this to say:

"I believe that the present advancing phase in the stock market that started in October-December 1957 at around the 420 level in the Dow-Jones industrial average will continue into 1960-1961 and will reach a level around 800 — give or take 5 per cent in either direction."

Stocks Down Slightly For Second Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Space age stocks reached a kind of climax this week as the stock market endured a sharp shakeout and took a loss for the second straight week.

The week ended with a rally and a partial recovery but not enough to rescue the list from a decline.

Volume climbed to 18,993,800 shares from 17,775,705 the week before and was the largest since the 21,993,800 in the week ended March 21.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks fell $1.70 to $225.50, its steepest decline since the week ended March 28 when it dropped $2.10.

The week's decline, Wall Street analynts said, was well within the upward trend line of the current bull market. They regarded it chiefly as a technical correction of a type which must be expected from time to time.

The so-called "glamor" stocks displayed unusual pyrotechnics early in the week while the rest of the market did little or nothing. The electronics, rocket fuels, minsiles, radio, televisions and photographic issues dominated trading for the first three days.

Their advance waxed to a grand climax Wednesday which saw their broadest rise within memory.

Thursday witnessed a temporary follow-through to the rise. Then waves of selling hit the market.

McNeil Addresses Pharmacy Group

In an address here Saturday at the annual Northeast State College Student Branch banquet of the American Pharmaceutical Association, Henry S. McNeil, National figure in the pharmaceutical world, outlined eight major problems facing the "Pharmacist of Tomorrow," subject of his speech.

He emphasized the manufacturing view of the industry and the future of the profession.

The speaker, president of McNeil Laboratories, Inc., Philadelphia, noted that by 1970, over 20 million people will be over 65 years of age, and they will be treated by around 275,000 physicians, "writing possibly one billion prescriptions a year, which may well average $3.60 each."

Many other such signposts point to an extremely bright future for pharmacy in all its various branches," he said. "The danger lies in the fact that the field is being invaded by persons or groups outside of pharmacy who are not trained or dedicated to the cause of the pharmaceutical profession."

McNeil named several of these "outsiders" in the pharmacy field, including foreign manufacturers who are building facilities in the United States, non-drug wholesalers who are carrying drug store items, non-pharmacy outlets who want more drug and sundry business, various discount houses who compete in cost and price structure with the independent retailer, and mail order houses who are selling vitamins and similar drug items, often through questionable advertising promotion.

ALERTNESS

"We can, however, achieve our predicted success in the future if we refuse to let ourselves be "mousetrapped' by certain trends of public misunderstandings and couple this awareness with a coordinated effort to enhance the public's appreciation of the prestige of pharmacy."

The speaker named eight of these mentioned "mousetraps" that the future pharmacist should become aware of.

First, intra-industry criticism should be dealt with effectively and destroyed wherever and whenever possible, as it "shatters prestige, indicates weakness, and destroys the impact of the true picture of pharmacy."

Regarding the second item, cost of prescriptions, McNeil commented: "In an economy where the public wants to spend five times as much to impair its health by liquor and tobacco as it does for medicines, we cannot permit the subject of the cost of drugs to wear the cloak of a legitimate problem. There should never," he added, "be second-hand merchandise in the market of health."

Pharmacists in the near future will necessarily be required to constantly reeducate themselves for the various potent and very specific drugs they will be required to work with. Also, druggists of tommorrow must work together to protect the broad profession of pharmacy and its allied professions from the publicly exaggerated misdeeds of the "few bad apples in the barrel," he said.

VALUE

Paradoxically, the public must be "sold" on the value of its health, and pharmacists must work together to sell the public on its importance as the connecting link between physician and patient. In regard to over-emphasis on the subject of name brands, the speaker said such continued misconceptions regarding brand names could stifle research, mislead the public, and encourage ill-equipped manufacturers to make potent products by make-shift methods.

There are 20,000,000 Americans —one out of eight— who now enter a hospital each year, and the number will be even higher in the future. This puts a heavy burden on pharmacists, who will be expected to properly deal with the exacting and minute quantities and qualities of medicines prescribed for these patients.

Finally, McNeil warned against mixing politics with medicine, a political technique that is not new, but dangerous as ever. "Using the emotional appeal of health as a means of accomplishing totally irrelevant the objectives is in direct contrast to the admirable cause and duty of pharmacy," he declared.

Several other representatives of McNeil Laboratores were present, including Mr. and Mrs. David Lamont, director of domestic sales; C. V. Kirk, sales supervisor; Joseph Everhardt, district manager; and Arthur E. Adams, medical service representative.

McNeil Addresses Pharmacy Group

In an address here Saturday at the annual Northeast State College Student Branch banquet of the American Pharmaceutical Association, Henry S. McNeil, National figure in the pharmaceutical world, outlined eight major problems facing the "Pharmacist of Tomorrow," subject of his speech.

He emphasized the manufacturing view of the industry and the future of the profession.

The speaker, president of McNeil Laboratories, Inc., Philadelphia, noted that by 1970, over 20 million people will be over 65 years of age, and they will be treated by around 275,000 physicians, "writing possibly one billion prescriptions a year, which may well average $3.60 each."

Many other such signposts point to an extremely bright future for pharmacy in all its various branches," he said. "The danger lies in the fact that the field is being invaded by persons or groups outside of pharmacy who are not trained or dedicated to the cause of the pharmaceutical profession."

McNeil named several of these "outsiders" in the pharmacy field, including foreign manufacturers who are building facilities in the United States, non-drug wholesalers who are carrying drug store items, non-pharmacy outlets who want more drug and sundry business, various discount houses who compete in cost and price structure with the independent retailer, and mail order houses who are selling vitamins and similar drug items, often through questionable advertising promotion.

ALERTNESS

"We can, however, achieve our predicted success in the future if we refuse to let ourselves be "mousetrapped' by certain trends of public misunderstandings and couple this awareness with a coordinated effort to enhance the public's appreciation of the prestige of pharmacy."

The speaker named eight of these mentioned "mousetraps" that the future pharmacist should become aware of.

First, intra-industry criticism should be dealt with effectively and destroyed wherever and whenever possible, as it "shatters prestige, indicates weakness, and destroys the impact of the true picture of pharmacy."

Regarding the second item, cost of prescriptions, McNeil commented: "In an economy where the public wants to spend five times as much to impair its health by liquor and tobacco as it does for medicines, we cannot permit the subject of the cost of drugs to wear the cloak of a legitimate problem. There should never," he added, "be second-hand merchandise in the market of health."

Pharmacists in the near future will necessarily be required to constantly reeducate themselves for the various potent and very specific drugs they will be required to work with. Also, druggists of tommorrow must work together to protect the broad profession of pharmacy and its allied professions from the publicly exaggerated misdeeds of the "few bad apples in the barrel," he said.

VALUE

Paradoxically, the public must be "sold" on the value of its health, and pharmacists must work together to sell the public on its importance as the connecting link between physician and patient. In regard to over-emphasis on the subject of name brands, the speaker said such continued misconceptions regarding brand names could stifle research, mislead the public, and encourage ill-equipped manufacturers to make potent products by make-shift methods.

There are 20,000,000 Americans —one out of eight— who now enter a hospital each year, and the number will be even higher in the future. This puts a heavy burden on pharmacists, who will be expected to properly deal with the exacting and minute quantities and qualities of medicines prescribed for these patients.

Finally, McNeil warned against mixing politics with medicine, a political technique that is not new, but dangerous as ever. "Using the emotional appeal of health as a means of accomplishing totally irrelevant the objectives is in direct contrast to the admirable cause and duty of pharmacy," he declared.

Several other representatives of McNeil Laboratores were present, including Mr. and Mrs. David Lamont, director of domestic sales; C. V. Kirk, sales supervisor; Joseph Everhardt, district manager; and Arthur E. Adams, medical service representative.

ONLY NEWSPAPERS SELL CARS FROM ASSEMBLY TO AUTO BUYER!

National automotive advertisers use the daily newspaper to pre-sell their product for the dealer to as many people as possible. And, by using newspapers, they can reach over 100,000,000 people at any time they please.

The local car dealer uses the daily newspaper because he knows that there is no better shopped advertising medium. Last year local advertisers spent $2½ billion in the daily newspaper. That's six times as much as they spent in radio and ten times as much as they spent in TV.

Whether you're a manufacturer or retailer you get Total Selling effectiveness only in the daily newspaper. No other medium can match it for its truly national coverage and its truly local impact. The daily newspaper Total Sells goods along the line — from maker to consumer!

THE TOTAL SELLING MEDIUM IS YOUR DAILY NEWSPAPER

Why Settle For Less Than
$17,000 IN A YEAR
THE DAYS are one when a "few thousand" a year salary was enough for a man to take care of his family, buy a new car, and "salt some away for the future."
IF YOU are a middle-aged man who has reached the "ceiling" on your earnings and now want to make good in a new field, we can make you a fine offer to join our organization, where top men are paid up to $22,000 in a year.
IN SPITE of shortages in other businesses, our volume is expanding at a terrific rate. We have an opening in the Monroe area for a man over 45. The man we want must be high grade (not high pressure), ambitious and sincere. Earnings are paid in advance, no investment is needed, no collections, no deliveries.

Why Settle For Less Than
$17,000 IN A YEAR
THE DAYS are one when a "few thousand" a year salary was enough for a man to take care of his family, buy a new car, and "salt some away for the future."
IF YOU are a middle-aged man who has reached the "ceiling" on your earnings and now want to make good in a new field, we can make you a fine offer to join our organization, where top men are paid up to $22,000 in a year.
IN SPITE of shortages in other businesses, our volume is expanding at a terrific rate. We have an opening in the Monroe area for a man over 45. The man we want must be high grade (not high pressure), ambitious and sincere. Earnings are paid in advance, no investment is needed, no collections, no deliveries.

by Roy Crane
YES, SIREE! YOU'RE MY FAVORITE NEPHEW, FRANK. I'M GONNA GIVE YOU THAT GOLD MINE. BUT NOT A CENT TO THE REST OF MY NO-COUNT KINFOLKS.
BUT I'M NOT FRANK, UNCLE LUCKY. I'M ROSCO.
ER, BY THE WAY, UNCLE LUCKY, YOU'RE OFF THE RADIO BEAM AGAIN.
CONFOUND IT, NEPHEW! STOP YAPPING. I KNOW THIS COUNTRY LIKE A BOOK... AH, THERE'S THE RENO AIRPORT NOW!
THE RENO AIRPORT! WHERE, UNCLE LUCKY?
STRAIGHT AHEAD! CAN'T YOU SEE THEY'RE GIVING ME THE GREEN LIGHT?
NO! NO! THAT'S A HIGHWAY, UNCLE LUCKY!
WELL, I SWAN! SO IT IS. I THOUGHT THE RUNWAYS WERE A BIT LONG.
HONK

BEEP!
HONK!
LATER..
STRANGE, FRANK! YOU'D THINK WE'D AT LEAST SEE SOME LIGHTS.
SPUT-SPUT-T! SPUT-SPUT-SPUT...
GAS! WE'RE OUT OF GAS, UNCLE LUCKY!
DON'T WORRY, NEPHEW. EMERGENCY LANDINGS ARE MY SPECIALTY. BESIDES, YOU DON'T NEED RUNWAYS IN THE DESERT.
BUMP
THERE! YOU SEE. SAFE AND SOUND. WE'LL JUST SLEEP HERE IN THE PLANE TILL MORNIN'!
MORNING...
OH, MY GOSH! THE GRAND CANYON!
WELL, SO IT IS, NEPHEW!
ANOTHER 10 FEET AND WE'D HAVE GONE OVER THE BRINK!
DAGGONIT, FRANK! IF YOU CAN'T BE HAPPY WITHOUT LOOKIN' AT THE GLOOMY SIDE OF LIFE, THEN STRIKE OUT AND HUNT US UP SOME GAS.

STEVE CANYON
MILTON CANIFF
WHEN WE FOUND THAT LYNX HAD HIDDEN DEEN WILDERNESS IN THE WELL AT THE SCHOOL WE STARTED TO CLOSE IN! NOW LYNX HAS ARMED THE GIRL 'STUDENTS'! WE CAN'T SHOOT IT OUT WITH A BUNCH OF FEMALES... AND DEEN IS STILL IN THERE SOMEWHERE
LYNX KNOWS WE WON'T FIRE ON HER GIRLS, SO SHE HAS THEM ON THE ROOFS WHERE THEY CAN HIT US!
TEAR GAS ONLY SLOWS THEM DOWN IN THE OPEN AIR...
WHAT ABOUT A DEAL WHEREBY THEY SEND DEEN OUT ALIVE—AND WE ALLOW THE GIRLS TO GO BACK HOME...
AND TRAIN OTHER YOUNG COMMUNISTS? AH, NO, SEÑOR, YOU AMERICANOS ARE TOO SOFT-HEARTED!
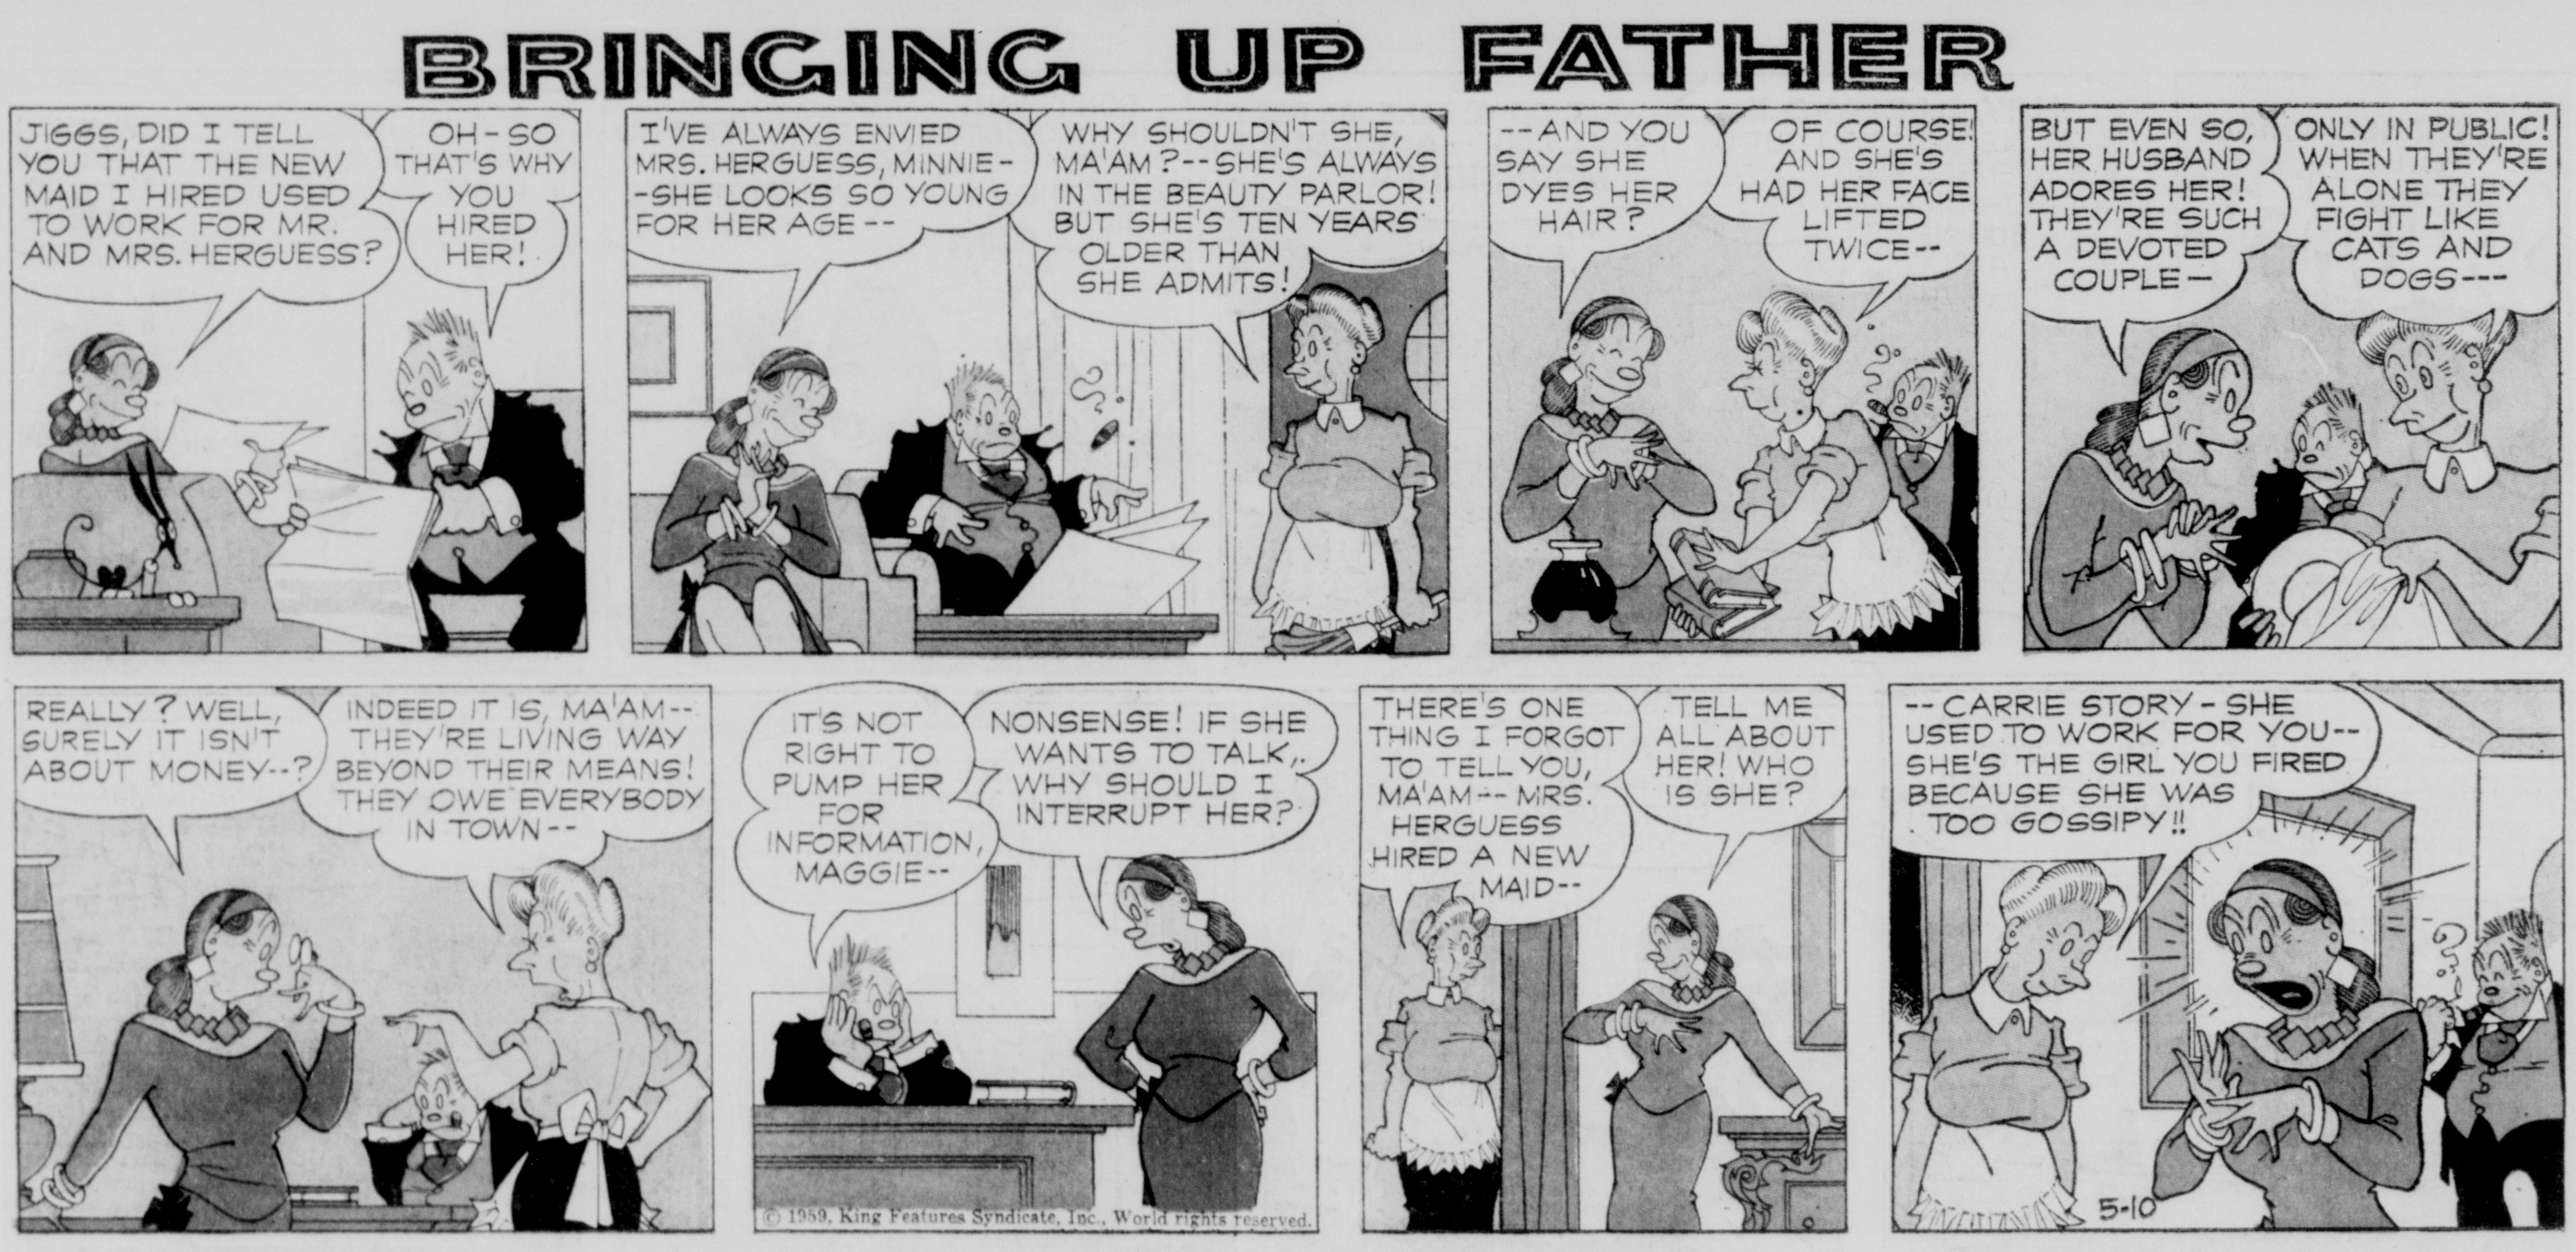
BUT, CHIEF, WE -- HOLD IT, STEVE! —DO YOU NOTICE SOMETHING?
THE PISTOL FIRE FROM THE ROOFS HAS SLACKED OFF
IT SEEMS TO HAVE STOPPED ALTOGETHER...
THEY'RE HARDLY OUT OF AMMO... AND SURELY NOT EXPECTING US TO BARGE IN...
LET'S GO UP IN THE CHOPPER AND HIT 'EM WITH THE BIG LIGHT
LOOK THROUGH THE GLASSES...
IT'S AS IF THEY'RE ALL DEAD—OR ASLEEP!
DRUGS! SOMEHOW DEEN HAS SLIPPED THEM ALL A WHOPPING BIG MICKEY!
BUT HOW? AND WHERE CAN DEEN BE?
STEVE KNOWS DEEN WILDERNESS WAS HIDDEN IN A WELL, BUT HE DOESN'T KNOW THAT THE SAME WELL CONNECTS WITH A PASSAGE TO THE RIVER — AND AT THIS MOMENT A SINGLE FIGURE MOVES FROM IT, AS THE TIDE RUNS TOWARD THE SEA...



BRINGING UP FATHER
JIGGS, DID I TELL YOU THAT THE NEW MAID I HIRED USED TO WORK FOR MR. AND MRS. HERGUESS?
OH - SO THAT'S WHY YOU HIRED HER!
I'VE ALWAYS ENVIED MRS. HERGUESS, MINNIE--SHE LOOKS SO YOUNG FOR HER AGE --
WHY SHOULDN'T SHE, MA'AM?--SHE'S ALWAYS IN THE BEAUTY PARLOR! BUT SHE'S TEN YEARS OLDER THAN SHE ADMITS!
--AND YOU SAY SHE DYES HER HAIR?
OF COURSE! AND SHE'S HAD HER FACE LIFTED TWICE--
BUT EVEN SO, HER HUSBAND ADORES HER! THEY'RE SUCH A DEVOTED COUPLE—
ONLY IN PUBLIC! WHEN THEY'RE ALONE THEY FIGHT LIKE CATS AND DOGS---
REALLY? WELL, SURELY IT ISN'T ABOUT MONEY--?
INDEED IT IS, MA'AM-- THEY'RE LIVING WAY BEYOND THEIR MEANS! THEY OWE EVERYBODY IN TOWN--
IT'S NOT RIGHT TO PUMP HER FOR INFORMATION, MAGGIE-- NONSENSE! IF SHE WANTS TO TALK, WHY SHOULD I INTERRUPT HER?
THERE'S ONE THING I FORGOT TO TELL YOU, MA'AM -- MRS. HERGUESS HIRED A NEW MAID-- TELL ME ALL ABOUT HER! WHO IS SHE?
--CARRIE STORY - SHE USED TO WORK FOR YOU-- SHE'S THE GIRL YOU FIRED BECAUSE SHE WAS TOO GOSSIPY!!
